WHEN PINNY ROSS' young ones, the "Fashion-auts' frugged down the runway at 1 West, Saturday afternoon, the fashion conscious women (the room was packed to the hilt) gasped.

The affair was Mrs. Ross' showing of her original hats, backed by an elaborate fashion show designed to give the "total look."

Of course the more mature models showed the backbone of styles, but those lively youngsters rocked the joint! They include Freda Lane, Coppin freshman; Renee Spruill of Douglass, Norma Poag of Woodlawn Senior High; Alexis Thomas of Garrison and Cathy Owens and Andrea Bland of Western.

Clothes for small fry were modeled by Lisa Shodine and Rae Ross, and of course Mesdames Betty Mason, there were the Ross models; Barbara Owens, Rosa Johnson, Maggie Watkins and Mrs. Ross. Mrs. Willia Blanc was commentator.

Bathing vital when reducing

If you are counting calories and "touching your toes," remember that baths are as vital to a reducing regime as are diet and exercise!

Beauty authorities point out that as you lose weight, body fats break down and some of the waste material is excreted through the skin.

Consequently, two baths a day are preferable to just one while reducing.

* * *

WASHING OFTEN with thick soap suds removes offensive odors, and also impurities which can clog pores to impede natural reducing action.

A bath or shower after perspiring exercise also pays a bonus of comfort and beauty.

When you feel fresh and feminine, you will look your loveliest.

'THE HIGH BUCKLER' is among the smart men's shoes now at Hess Shoe Stores.

Hess Shoes 'High Buckler' success among discerning

The "High Buckler", described as the season's smartest men's shoe ,has become remarkably popular since Hess Shoes introduced this new Johnston and Murphy slip-on dress model only a few weeks ago.

Featuring a tastefully decorative buckle and strap, this seamless shoe represents fine shoemaking at its superlative best said George B. Hess Sr. of the famed Baltimore group of shoe stores.

The High Buckler is cut from a magnificent single piece of very lightly grained calf skin. This is the work of an American tanner whose product is so attractive it is sold to fine shoemakers the world over .

Discerning men are praising this shoe for both its handsome appearance and supreme comfort. It is available in Antique Bronze, a striking new grade named by Mr. Hess personally, and a classic black.

Antique bronze is appropriate for street wear and with odd jackets and trousers while the black is dressy enough for all occasions.

With an exterior of glove-like softness, the High Buckler offers a special flexible sole. Its vamps are completely unlined since the leather has its own natural "clean-back," eliminating any need for an added lining. The shoe is a creation of Johnston and Murphy, producers of the world's finest shoes, and familiarly known as "J and M" to millions of customers . . . .

* * *

ALONG WITH the "High Buckler", this spring Hess is introducing with great success a second shoe, the "Loch Moc", Mr. Hess chose the Scottish name "Loch" since this casual shoe sports a kiltie tongue in its hand-sewn front.

This popular innovation cames in a special Rosemor Leather highlighted by a vibrant new spring brown shade with a real glow. It, too, is a fine Johnston and Murphy shoe.

Mr. Hess commented that these two new models typify the superior Johnston and Murphy workmanship and styling which have been bringing generations of Baltimore families to the Hess Shoes stores for almost 100 years .

The "Loch Moc" is available at Hess Shoes at 8 E. Baltimore Street and the Edmondson Village Shopping Center. The "High Buckler" is now at these two stores and at Hess Shoes in Towson Plaza and the Reisterstown Road Plaza.
