torney, represents Sen. Verda F. Welcome plaintiff in the case presenting the Senate Bill 3 plan, put in earlier.

Plaintiffs represented by Mrs. Mitchell and Mr. Williams, all of whom are citizens of Maryland, registered voters and taxpayers of the state, are:

Dr. Lillie M. Jackson, 1320 Eutaw Pl.; the Rev. Arthur J. Payne, 5001 Old Frederick Rd.; the Rev. John L. Tilley, 2101 Whittier Ave.

Also, Mrs. Mary E. Hawkins, 912 N. Gilmor St.; Mrs. Julia Stevenson, 1622 Miller St.; Mrs. Margaret L. Dyer, 1742 E. Oliver St.; Harry L. Macer, 1654 W. North Ave.; Otis B. Hooper, 3815 Harlem Ave. and Dr. Carl J. Murphy, 628 N. Eutaw St.

BOTH PLANS are quite similar, with but minor variations, to the congressional redistricting law enacted last year by the General Assembly, but later petitioned to referendum.

Plaintiffs in both cases see one of the plans setting favorable with the court, on a basis of that Assembly action.

The judges who will settle down Monday to the thorny task of doing something about Maryland's lack of congressional districts — something the General Assembly couldn't agree on in the past general and special sessions — are:

Judge Simon E. Sobeloff, U. S. Fourth District Court of Appeals; Chief Judge Roszel C. Thomsen and Judge Edward S. Northrop, U. S. District Court here.

Biggest issue in the districting controversy has been efforts to retain for Baltimore its former three districts, or a sufficient segment of such districts to save Edward A. Garmatz his seat.

THE TWO plans to be presented to divide the city in two districts leaves Congressman Samuel N. Friedel in the western part, but pits Congressman Garmatz against the veteran Congressman George H. Fallon in the eastern sector.

A dozen or more districting plans, including one by the congressmen themselves, will be presented for the court's consideration Monday, along with the two from the Maryland Citizens Committee For Fair Congressional Redistricting and Sen. Welcome.

One comes from John W. Hardwicke, attorney and Republican delegate to the General Assembly from Harford County, which carries the low variance of a range of plus 1.4 percent to a minus 2.3 percent off the population norm.

While it is felt by some lawmakers the court will tolerate up to a 15 percent variance either way, earlier in the year a federal court in North Carolina struck down congressional lines created by that state's legislature although no district had a population variance of more than 9 percent.

In doing so, the court stated:

"The tortuous lines which delineate the boundaries of many of the congressional districts under the proposed plan, the resulting lack of compactness and contiguity and the failure to achieve equal representation for equal numbers of people as nearly as practicable compels us to hold the congressional apportionment is constitutionally invalid."

director, Floyd B. McKissick, announced the selection of Baltimore as the focus for its major civil rights activities this year.

"Perhaps the time has come," Cascella said, "for the people in Baltimore to start looking around at their city without complacency.

"If two groups select the city like this, there must be a reason for it."

Already the Baltimore Teachers Union has shown it means business in its stepped - up campaign April 13 BTU President Dennis Crosby, head of the business education department at Dunbar High School, charged that teacher promotions "are being made on a racial basis."

In a telegram to School Board President Eli Frank Jr., Crosby called for an immediate meeting with the Board "to discuss the serious problem of staff integration."

TAKING A note from the recent Supreme Court decision striking down the loyalty oath in Arizona, the union yesterday became the first local group to call Maryland's Ober Law under that decision.

Crosby requested Gov. Tawes to confer with the attorney general and, if necessary, call a special session of the Legislature "forthwith" on the "immediate removal of the onerous Ober Law from the statutes of the state of Maryland."

He wrote the governor that the Court's decision "in the Elfbrant case in Arizona vindicates the position of all those who have fought so long and gallantly for the repeal of the measure in the state.

Mrs. Barbara Elfbrant and her husband had served without pay as teachers in Tuscon, Arizona for six years after they refused to sign a loyalty oath on religious and constitutional grounds.

THE UNION has called a meeting to discuss action on their proposal with the American Civil Liberties Union, the Americans for Democratic Action and the American Association of University Professors of local colleges next Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Chase and Chesapeake Room of the Sheraton-Belvedere Hotel.

CORE in its recent announcement pinpointed the local schools as one of its areas of concern.

According to Cascella, the union's concentration will be on "bringing the Baltimore school system up to date.

"Baltimore and Washington are the only two large East Coast cities in which the teachers have not yet achieved a voice with the Board of Education."

Teachers' proposals are listened—to, he said, and then the board retires behind closed doors and comes to a unilateral decision.

"What teachers want is a meaningful voice, they don't want to be part of committees which write reports that no one listens to."

YESTERDAY he reeled off problems which the union wants to have stake in solving: integration of teachers and pupils, overcrowding and inadequate materials headed the list.

With its slogan "Teachers want what children need," the union asserts that the experts on teaching in Baltimore are the class room teachers."

"The failures in the last 11 years (to achieve integration after the Supreme Court decision) could have been averted if the 5,000 Baltimore teachers had a voice in the administration," Cascella asserted.

What the union will work for, the national representative said, will be: quality education for all children, a chance for teachers to achieve "success" in the classroom, and a voice and bargaining power for teachers in the administration (with something like month-

Miss Brenda Carpenter introduced at lavish Sunday afternoon reception

By MABO KEMP

Dr and Mrs. James H. Carpenter and their pretty daughter, Brenda Maria, were "At Home" to Washington's elite Sunday afternoon from five to seven.

The Carpenters' English-Norman home on Argyle Terrace was the scene of the plush reception at which 18-year - old Brenda, a freshman at Wilberforce University, was introduced to friends of her parents. She will make her formal bow to Society early in May at a Debutante Ball sponsored by the Bachelor-Benedict Club.

The entire first floor of the ultra swank home was literally abloom with spring and summer flowers — all gifts from well wishers to the lovely young deb; and the dining room was a picture of elegance.

FOR HER day - of - days, Brenda was attired in an exquisite creation by Rembrandt. The slender sheath of four - ply French silk crepe was baby blue, longsleeved and featured a chartreuse band at the hemline. The baby-doll design was enhanced at the neckline by a single strand of pearls. She wore matching baby silk shoes and held a nosegay of pink carnations, white orchid petals and blue forget-me-nots.

Mrs. Carpenter chose a Cali Chapman design in pale pink which featured a bodice of French shadow - Chantilly lace and a skirt of raw silk. She wore matching shoes.

Receiving with Brenda and her parents were her godmothers, Mrs. Ethel Young of Washington and Mrs. Herbert G. Chissell of Baltimore.

Brenda, who is studying toward a degree in law, is pledged to the AKA Sorority. She plays the piano, loves to swim and travel. The Carpenters have three other children —Karen who attends Gordan Junior High; James, Jr., a premedical student at American University and Barry, a senior at Wilberforce, also a premedical student. All three were present.

NAMD meet set for Morgan

The second annual Career Conference sponsored by the Baltimore Chapter, National Association of Market Developers will be held at Morgan State College, May 7, 9-2 p.m., it was announced this week by NAMD president, John Rich.

Mr. Rich said that the conference is designed to give high school seniors valuable information about entering about the labor market.

He said that industry representatives, educators and social agency staffers have been invited to take part in discussions on job opportunities in the area, information on seeking jobs and proper grooming when looking for work.

More than 200 students are expected to attend the conference, Mr. Rich said.

Justice Warren at Md. U. dedication

Chief Justice Earl Warren will be the principal speaker at dedication exercises for the new building of the University of Maryland School of Law Saturday.

During the 12-year tenure of Justice Warren, whose liberal views have earned him severe critics as well as staunch admirers, momentous decisions have been made that have had strong impact on American life.

He considers his most important opinion the voting reapportionment ruling that applies the "one man, one vote" principle.

In making this decision, which would require every state legislature in both houses to be roughly proportionate to population, Warren wrote, "Citizens, not history or economic interests, cast votes." and "Legislators represent people, not trees or acres."

The exercises will open at 10:30 a.m. with an invocation by the Reverend James C. Thomson Jr., Presbyterian minister, Baltimore campus. Dr. Albin O. Kuhn, vice president, Baltimore campuses will introduce guests including Mayor Theordore R. McKeldin, who will extend his greetings.

DR. WILSON H. ELKINS, presented to the university will officiate at the dedication. The building will be presented to the university by Governor J. Millard Tawes; Albert T. Backhaus, director, Department of Public Improvements; and James J. O'Donnell, director, Maryland State Planning Department.

Charles P. McCormick, chairman of the Board of Regents, will accept the building on behalf of the board, and William P. Cunningham, dean of the law school, will accept it on behalf of the faculty.

Ready for takeoff/

If you'd like to take off and visit people in distant places, but can't make it in person, do the next best thing. Call by Long Distance. It's the fast, easy way to "travel"... and the cost is so reasonable, too. Rates are at their very lowest after 8 p.m. weekdays and all day Sundays. For example, you can make a 3-minute station call to any place in Maryland for only 40 cents or less. So let yourself go. Visit with those you miss by Long Distance.

Union plans child center

Baltimore, along with two other cities, is slated for a Child Care Center to be established in the near future under sponsorship of the Health and Welfare Fund of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

In announcing plans, Sam Nocella, sponsor of the program and chairman of the trustees of the fund, said the centers will be the first such in the United States to be supported jointly by both labor and management funds.

The centers will serve women who work in the industry and will receive children from 2 - 6 years old.

"There are some 31 million female workers in the U. S. today, with some 36 per cent of them married," Nocella said.

"Yet there is no effective technique in this country to care for their children while they work," he continued.

Nocella voiced hopes the new centers would serve as models for similar facilities in other sections.

'Teen Queens' are chosen in Arundel

Miss Christine Somerville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Somerville, residents of the Jones community in Severna Park, has been named "Miss Teen Queen 1966."

Miss Somerville has overcome a speech and hearing defect to excell in her hobbies which include finger painting, sewing, cooking and making hook-rugs and watching television.

She attends the Oak Wood Elementary School for the Handicapped and is described as having "a pleasant personality which makes her well liked by all members of the teen club and community."

The Chantel Teen Club is under the direction of Mrs. Sylvia Nolan.

THE LOTHIAN Teen Club has chosen Miss Joyce Ann Francis as "Teen Queen for 1966."

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Simms of Lothian, and attends Southern High School.

Her hobbies include singing watching television, dancing and watching basketball. She enjoys playing softball. The Lothian Teen Club is directed by Mrs. Myrtle Brown.

Both Clubs are sponsored by the Anne Arundel County Recreation and Parks Department. William A. Hayes is area supervisor.
