240,000 Tan Voters Test Ala. Primaries

First Dixie election after Voting Law

(Special to the AFRO)

Alabama will be dancing to a new political tune by the November general elections, and the first chord will be struck by some 240,000 colored voters at the Tuesday, May 3 Democratic primaries.

For the political structure of the state which provided the protest forum for the 1965 Voting Rights Act, it will be a moment of truth — the first test of the actual effect of the law in the political institutions of a Deep South state.

Riding the resulting surge of political organizing by civil rights groups, 60 colored persons in 18 counties are seeking public offices, seats in the legislature.

Twelve are running for seats in the legislature.

The eyes of the world, however, will not be on the candidates, but on the newly - enfranchised voters.

Will they vote? If so, how, and for whom?

* * *

MOST OF the colored candidates are poo-pooing reports that the vote turnout at the polls will be weak in proportion to the voting laws of the colored citizenry. Optimism prevails in spite of reports that fear of violence and economic retaliation — of losing jobs and of being kicked off rented land — may curtail the turnout.

"I personally expect an 85 per cent turnout in Jefferson County, and about 80 per cent statewide. But whether or not we win, depends on the white vote," Attorney Arthur D. Shores, a candidate for the state legislature, said.

"The colored people will vote for colored candidates,' he added.

Shores, of Birmingham, president of the Jefferson Democratic Council, a political organization, believes that there is a general "desire for changing the image of the state on the part of whites as well as colored residents.

Birmingham's reputation for racism, highlighted by more racial bombings than any other city in the state, is strongly deplored by responsible citizens, he cited as a case in point.

There are 61,000 colored registered voters in Jefferson County, to upwards of 171,000 whites.

ATTY. GEN. Nicholas Deb promised to send Federal observers to several counties to ensure that colored persons will be allowed to vote at the polls. Although he indicated that he felt most local officials will comply with the law he sent a carefully - worded leter to 9,000 state officials, noting that the FBI would be "prepared to respond" to any incidents of violence or intimidation directed against colored voters.

THE NEW electorate, outnumbering whites in a number of counties, has been subjected to a barrage of divergent advice on what to do with their political power.

In Tuskegee, (Macon County) Ala., where colored voters outnumber whites three to one, the powerful Macon County Voters League is urging the voters to seek a "racially - balanced" slate. They are opposing Lucis D. Amerson, who has a chance of be-sheriff in the state since Reconstruction.

In Selma, Dallas County, headquarters of the voters registration campaign which sparked the voting act, the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee is urging people to boycott the primaries in several of Alabama's predominantly colored counties, and save their votes until the November general election to give support to candidates of independant political parties.

AND TO make matters even more confusing, the new colored electorate is faced with new, liberal images on the smiling faces of longtime racists.

At a civil rights meeting in Selma, recently, Al Lingo, state trooper chief, claimed he was made a "scapegoat" when he led troopers in a bloody route of demonstrators attempting a Selma - Montgomery protest march last year.

"Please consider me. I want to be your sheriff," he implored, in what may be taken as a classic example of the new tenor of the state's politics.

IN HUNDREDS of other little hamlets and counties white candidates are making door to door campaigns and courting the colored vote for the first time. The future of a white man shaking hands with a colored person is presumably forgiven by their white constituents, who cringe at the spectre of a colored sheriff, or a black-controlled local government.

Atty. Gen. Richmond Flowers, running for governor, is the most outspoken bidder for the new voters.

"Too long have we held our independen self - reliant attitude about States Rights while at the same time continuing to practice states wrong," Flowers old an integrated group.

Flowers says the "new Alabama" under the colored vote will no longer be attracted to the "moderacy of old political hash warmed over," as offered by his opponents.

TOP AMONG his opponents are Mrs. Lurleen Wallace, wife of racist Governor George Wallace; a former Governor "Big Jim" Folsom; and a 16-year veteran of the U.S. Congress, Carl Elliot.

The Alabama Democratic Conference, a political organization of colored professional and business people, joined the confederation of Alabama Political Organizations, a group organized by Dr. Martin Luther King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference, in backing Flowers. In doing so, they rebuffed some of the state's most successful colored business and professional men who sought backing for Rep. Elliott, billed as a "racial moderate."

Expects to be Ala.'s 1st tan sheriff

(Special To The AFRO)

TUSKEGEE, Ala .— A soft-spoken, ex - Army sergeant who feels that "all the people should be protected equally by the law" may well become Alabama's first colored sheriff.

Lucis D. Amerson, 33, who reportedly won an 11th hour endorsement from the prestigious Macon County Democratic Club, expects the vote to turn out exactly in proportion to the ratio of white versus colored registered voters in the county —three to one.

"They said they would come by foot, and hitchhike, if they have to," he said.

* * *

AMERSON'S ELECTION in Tuskegee, site of Booker T. Washington's famed Tuskegee Institute, would mean a push toward a predominantly colored government for the town and county. Under the enlightened leadership of Institute staffers the town already has a bi - racial government and a colored voting majority established through the courts a year before the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

Amerson was earlier opposed by the Macon County Democratic Club, architects of the county's current voting posture. Local sources indicated that grass - roots support for a colored sheriff forced the organization to change its position.

One of the factors believed to have helped Amerson's chances is the February shooting of Tuskegee student Sammy Younge by a local gas station attendant. The suspect was arrested and released on $10,000 bond for a grand jury hearing this month.

* * *

AMERSON, A postal clerk in Montgomery until he resigned to run for public office in February, says he has received little violent opposition from the white community.

"This is what the majority of the people want —I believe they will elect me," he said.

He attended High School in his native Green County, Ala., and spent 3½ years at Tuskegee Institute.

A father of two boys, he served as an Army paratrooper for 8½ years, and was discharged in 1959. While in the Army he attended the International Detective Training School in Washington, D.C., and the National Detective Academy in Phoenix, Ariz.

Tormenting Rectal Itch Stopped In Minutes
Science Finds New Healing Substance That Promptly Stops Itching and Pain of Piles
New York, N. Y. (Special) — One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "itching piles." It is most embarrassing for the victim during the day and especially aggravating at night.
No matter what you've used without results—here's good news. For the first time, science has found a healing substance with the astonishing ability to promptly stop the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids—without surgery. Medical science has proved this substance produces a remarkably effective rate of healing. Painkilling properties also help prevent infection.
In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by a doctor's observations. This improvement was maintained in cases where a doctor's observations were continued over a period of months! Among these sufferers were a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions, some of 10 to 20 years' duration.
The secret is this new healing substance (Bio-Dyne®) — discovery of a world-famous research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H®. Ask for Preparation H Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Available at all drug counters.
