Mays' ball

and that's gotta be ridiculous. "I didn't say it was worth a thousand, Willie—" the father began to say while his son remained in the background.

"Look, be my guest," Mays said. Then he took the ball, signed it and gave it back to the man.

• • •

YOUNG GARRON had been the lucky one in the crowd behind the eight foot fence when Mays smashed the 512th homer of his career to break the National League mark of 511 set by the late Mel Ott.

The youngster told reporters he got the ball on the first bounce.

Mays looking relaxed and smiling, agreed that he had been under pressure to establish the new mark after tying the old one April 24, at Houston when he homered off Jim Owens.

The history making shot was served up by Claude Osteen of the Los Angeles Dodgers after he twice had struck Mays out.

• • •

"SURE, I was pressing for No. 512," Mays said. "I couldn't get it out of my mind and nobody would let me forget it. And I know my batting average dropped tremendously during that time." Osteen said that Mays connected on a high outside changeup, and the Dodger southpaw described it as a bad pitch. "Well, it was a good pitch for me," Willie said.
