N.Y. congressman calls for effective civil rights—now

Congressman Jacob H. Gilbert (D, N.Y.) sat in his office late Tuesday afternoon defending the constitutionality of extending federal jurisdiction into the fair housing area. Mr. Gilbert had introduced that morning on the floor of the House of Representatives a civil rights bill which he characterized as "stronger than President Johnson's in almost every respect."

When the Administration's bill was sent to Congress on Thursday, a week ago, the most prominent voice in the hue and cry that normally follows civil rights proposals came this time from Senate minority leader, Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.).

Southerners, on the other hand, were surprisingly quiet, preferring instead to jitter away as the fears held by most northern suburbanites concerning open occupancy were expressed by the resonant — almost musical — Dirksen voice.

GILBERT, SEATED in his office across the street from the Capitol building where he had introduced his civil rights bill earlier that day, took issue with both Dirksen and the Administration.

Defending the constitutionality of the fair-housing provisions, in answer to Dirksen, Gilbert declared that the courts have already extended federal power into the construction of housing on the basis of interstate commerce.

The Constitution gives Congress the power to regulate interstate commerce. This power has been extended by Supreme Court decisions to include regulations in areas which are effected by but not directly involved in the business of transporting goods from one state to another.

Such an area of legislation is public accommodations, whereby Congress in its civil right's laws of the 1960's has begun to regulate public facilities which have maintained separate color scheme.

IT WAS also Senator Dirksen who objected to the public accommodations section of the 1964 civil rights act on the grounds that it was unconstitutional.

The 1966 housing section is constitutional Congressman Gilbert added, because "the cement that goes into it (a house or apartment), the highways that connect it, all fall under interstate commerce." The New York Congressman said that the very property a house stands on could rightfully be included in future federal legislation on grounds that it too is effected by interstate commerce.

Gilbert has also sought to add to the Administration's bill in calling for stronger enforcement of the housing provision.

Gilbert would have the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development issue an order denying benefits of any federal housing program to any person violating the provisions of the act which bans racial discrimination.

THE ADMINISTRATION'S bill, however, does have half-a-set of teeth in that (like the Gilbert bill) it provides for private action to be initiated through the federal courts; or, in patterns of discrimination, the Attorney General may issue an injunction.

Gilbert, a member of the House Judiciary Committee, is a party to the hearings now being conducted to review the bevy of civil rights bills.

His bill, as compared to that of the Administration, will hasten school integration according to the Congressman, by declaring an immediate end to the practice still widely followed in the South of having dual school systems, one white and one colored.

The schooling provision, in addition, would also seek to ban de facto segregation in the schools by prohibiting gerrymandering of school districts in order to achieve a racial imbalance.

IN THE AREA of jury selection, the Gilbert bill would require the Census Bureau to keep an up-to-date listing of adults in each jurisdiction, from which State and Federal courts must draw their juries.

The Administration would have juries chosen from a list of registered voters in the court's jurisdiction with an additional requirement that the juror must be able to read and write.

And while the Administration bill makes no provision for the transfer of cases from State to Federal courts, the Gilbert bill, as proposed, would permit the Attorney General or the aggrieved defendant to shift a case for trial where it is believed the lower court has denied a person's civil rights.

Gilbert would also set up machinery for the effective removal of state and local police officers who violate their oaths to the Constitution by denying to citizens their civil rights.

GILBERT'S BILL, as clearly indicated by the Congressman, faces a rough road ahead. Containing twelve separate titles as compared to only five in the Administration's bill, it is a far cry from the so-called "consensus." An even further gulf separates it from one conservative bill introduced by Congressman Ogden R. Reid (R., N.Y.)

His bill, in all of its four titles, making no provisions for housing or school integration.

Here's the size of the bite under new withholding plan

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Here's how much is going to be withheld from some typical weekly paychecks starting May 1, compared to what has been withheld under the old withholding system.

Since there are several ways that companies can compute withholding, actual amounts withheld may differ slightly from what appears here.

order to tear the buildings down.

"The city is getting real cute," Mr. Sirkin said. "This seems to have become city policy, and it d-m well better stop."

The landlord specifically mentioned properties on the 1200 block of Wilmer Court which he said were being "gutted" by vandals.

Councilman Ward answered that he knew the area from the days when he was a police reporter, "and I can say that the buildings were in terrible condition because the owners didn't take care of their properties on Wilmer Court, the landlords didn't care what condition the buildings were in as long as they got their rent."

MR. SIRKIN was joined by another landlord, Raymond Weinberg, in attacking a provision of the new code which would require landlords to provide window screens for their tenants in summer.

Mr. Weinberg called the section on screens an "impossibility. We will be buying screens every other day because the tenants will be taking them to the junk yard to sell them for 50 cents."

Councilman Ward later answered that the way to stop this practice was to place a lien imposing stiff fines on junk yard owners who bought what they knew to be stolen goods.

REFERRING to the applause which followed Councilman Ward's statement of "housing philosophy," Mr. Weinberg said "it hurts me to see a lot of people clapping because landlords might get hurt by this law, which is very true."

The group he was speaking of was composed of about 20 persons wearing cards urging support to the law in the name of U-JOIN (Union for Jobs or Income Now) community organizing group in East Baltimore.

A U-JOIN organizer, Walter Lively, said his group was appearing in "sixteen counties" for the measure, known as Ordinance 461.

Wednesday's session was the second public hearing on the ordinance. The initial hearing was held last Wednesday to allow proponents of the code to air their views.

Mr. Lively said his group had secured 800 signatures so far on petitions for amendments to the ordinance which would outlaw old-fashioned types of space lied stoves, Latrobe stoves, heaters including not-belt burners, kerosene burners and unvented gas space heaters.

A ban on manually controlled side-arm hot water heaters is also included, Mr. Lively said.

The amendment will be submitted to Councilman William D. Schaefer, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, who would refer it to the Holliday Commission which drew up the new unified code, Mr. Lively said.

THE NEW CODE is essentially an amalgamation of existing Fire Department Health Department and Bureau of Building Inspection regulations collected under a single ordinance for convenience and greater efficiency.

It would be administered by a board consisting of the heads of the three above-mentioned agencies plus the head of the Baltimore Urban Renewal and Housing Agency.

NEW TAX PLAN MAY MEAN:

Smaller Paychecks to Some This Week

By JOHN PIERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) —If your paycheck is smaller this week, don't be alarmed. It's only the government.

Paychecks dated May 1 or later will be subject to a new system of withholding for federal income taxes.

No one's taxes are going up. But millions of people are going to be asked to pay them sooner.

That's why the paycheck may be smaller this week—or it could be larger.

In general, the new withholding system will mean faster pay envelopes for single people earning less than $50 a week and for married people with two children earning less than $140. If you're earning more than that, chances are your withholding is going up and your pay envelope will be thinner.

Up to now, the government had had employers withhold federal income taxes from paychecks at a flat 14 per cent rate. But since some people belong in lower tax brackets and others belong in higher brackets, 14 per cent withholding did a very rough job of paying the taxes people actually owed.

As a result, millions of higher income people ended up the year with additional taxes due while millions of lower income people had refunds coming.

In order to remedy this, and to bring payroll withholding more in line with actual tax liabilities, Congress — at President Johnson's request — has replaced the old flat 14 per cent rate with six rates ranging from 14 to 30 per cent. Middle and upper income people will be subject to these higher rates and will thus have more withheld from their pay.

LOWER INCOME people will have less withheld because the minimum standard deduction, adopted by Congress in 1964, has now been built into the withholding tables.

The result: More people will come out even on their taxes. Fewer will have to make additional payments at the end of the year, and there will be fewer refunds.

Officials estimate that graduated withholding will bring more than 20 million wage and salary earners within $10 of their final tax bill.

Withholding has been at 14 per cent during the first 17 weeks of 1966. The remaining 35 weeks will be under the new rates.

For example:

If you're single and earning $150 a week and take only one exemption, your company has been withholding $19.90 from your pay for income taxes. Starting this coming week, your withholding will rise to $24.60.

Your tax for the year is $1,255. The old withholding system — if it were to work for 52 weeks — would take only $1,034.80 out of your pay, leaving you with an additional $200.00 to pay the government.

But if the last 25 weeks of the year are under the new withholding rates, then your total withholding turns out to be $1,199.30. You still end up owing Uncle Sam some money but only $35.70.

If you're married, it's important that you file a new form W-4 withholding exemption certificate with your company. Under the old withholding system, there was only one set of tables for married and single people.

But Congress has now drawn up two different tables, with higher withholdings for single, and lower rates for married people. Under the new law, you must file a new form W-4, or taxes will be withheld from your pay at the higher rate applying to a single person earning the same amount.

Teacher strike looms for Tuesday in budget fight

"There is every possibility the city schools are not going to be staffed on Tuesday" if the Board of Estimates has not restored a $4,200,000 teachers' salary cut by that time.

This strike threat came early Friday morning from Joseph F. Cascella, a national representative of the American Federation of Teachers.

He commented after the executive council of the Baltimore Teachers Union called a special meeting of all city teachers for 7 a.m. Tuesday in the Masonic Temple, 1307 Eutaw Pl.

MR. CASCELLA said today's council action follows a meeting last week of 1,000 union members who adopted a resolution directing the council to:

"Make all adequate and necessary preparations to make an orderly and effective withdrawal of services at a time to be determined by this membership and upon recommendation of the executive council."

Mr. Cascella observed that "it will be a very dangerous thing to send children to unstaffed schools.

The teachers' spokesman declared city officials have refused to indicate that the budget cuts will be restored "for the children and teachers of Baltimore."

Stillman trustees elect new president

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — The board of trustees of Stillman College this week elected Dr. Harold N. Stinson as the next president of the college. Dr. Stinson is currently superintendent of Boggs Academy, a Presbyterian institution, at Keysville, Ga.

Dr. Albert Curry Winn, president emeritus, Still man board, has said the board asked Dr. Stinson to assume the office at Stillman College on Feb.-1, 1967. Currently serving as acting president at the college is Dr. Kenneth Brooks who will serve in this capacity until Dr. Stinson takes office.

Dr. Winn said, "Dr. Stinson brings to the presidency of Stillman splendid training as a professional educator, years of experience in the educational field, and conviction as to the importance and opportunity of church-related educational institutions."

STILLMAN IS a four year liberal arts college of the Presbyterian Church in the United States. Founded in 1876 as a seminary to train colored ministers, the college has developed into one of the outstanding predominately colored colleges in the South, with an enrollment of 650. The college is a member institution of the Uni-

Dr. Stinson, a native of Arkansas, is the son of a Presbyterian minister. He holds a B.S. in biology from Johnson C. Smith University, M. Ed. from Atlanta University and the Ph. D. in educational administration from Peabody.

He has served on the faculty at Peabody, and as director of the Nashville Education Improvement Project.

Dr. and Mrs. Stinson have one son, presently a student at Boggs Academy.

Dixie meet to discuss future economic thrust

ATLANTA — An unprecedented three-day Economic Development Institute, co-sponsored by the National Business League and the National Urban League, will be held here May 18-20 at the Americana Motor Hotel to discuss the future of the colored American in the free enterprise system.

This newly-conceived institute is designed to direct attention to the problems of present and prospective colored businessmen throughout the country.

The majority of the attendees are expected to come from twelve southern states: Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana, Florida, Georgia, Tennessee, Texas, North Carolina, South Carolina, Oklahoma and Virginia.

APPEARING as keynote speakers will be Eugene P. Trivley, assistant secretary of commerce and director of economic development, Dr. Vivian Henderson, president of Clark College in Atlanta, a respected authority on racial economic matters and Whitney M. Young, Jr., executive director of the National Urban League.

The National Business League, a nationwide organization dedicated to the progress of small businessmen, has worked closely with the southern regional Urban League office to make the institute a forum in which a meaningful dialogue can be carried on with management, finance and business representatives.

Texas towns elect tan mayor, three councilmen

By LEON L. LEWIS

FORT WORTH, Tex. — (NPI) — Auspicious times have come to the Lone Star State with the recent election of a colored mayor of a Texas town, and four colored persons winning city council seats elsewhere throughout the state.

The new mayor of Lubbock is T. W. D. (Dud) Rogers Jr., who was elected by a surprise write-in vote. Mr. Rogers, a dentist, was sent to the city council in Waco, the first of his race ever to win a seat in that city.

T. W. Brown, a Malakoff undertaker, won a city council seat, and Scott E. Johnson, retired principal, became the first to be elected to a city office in Huntsville since Reconstruction.

Johnson tallied a 296-86 vote over his white opponent. Brown also chalked up a big majority vote to win his council seat in the penitentiary city.

DR. RADFORD HAD an early lead over his opponent, Leslie Tooker, but began to trail as more boxes reported in. With 22 of the city's 23 boxes tabulated, Tooker held a 307-vote lead over the dentist.

When the final box reported in—Box 10-C at Carver school in East Waco, it had 455 votes for Dr. Radford against two for Tooker. The long-time leader in the colored community carried 16 of 23 boxes, while his opponent had only seven.

Dr. Rogers in Lubbock was surprised when told he had won the mayor's race over a galley of opponents. His name was not on the ballot, but he won on a write-in vote.

HE HAS been prominently identified with Lubbock public life, and played a leading role in the over-all desegregation program in the city, which has made the greatest gains in Texas in this respect.

SSC gives two awards to outstanding librarians

SAVANNAH, Ga. — Two awards were presented to outstanding American librarians by the Savannah State College at the Annual National Library Week Convocation on Friday, April 22.

THE AWARDS were made to Mr. Eric Moon, Editor of the Library Journal, and Dr. Virginia Lacy Jones, Dean of the School of Library Service, Atlanta University. Dr. Howard Johnson, president of the college presented the awards and Dean Robert D. Reid read the citations.

Eric Moon's award read "You have advanced librarians through the position of Editor of the Library Journal, and you have sensitized the library profession to many of its neglected obligations, including the democratization of the American Library Association."

The citation to Dr. Virginia Lacy Jones stated: "for your outstanding contribution to library education and for the signal honor and distinction which you recently received in becoming the first colored President-Elect of the American Association of Library Associations's magazine in Schools of the American Library Association."

Eric Moon, who was the first editor of the British Library Journal, has held prominent library, advisory and lecturing posts in Britain, Canada and the U.S.

Dr. Jones, who has a Ph.D.

Powell seen wielding club to pass fair employment bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chairman Adam Clayton Powell of the House Education and Labor Committee scuttled controversial legislation to ease curbs on union picketing at construction sites.

The New York Democrat advised Speaker John W. McCormack he was "unalterably opposed" to the so-called "situs picketing" bill and that he would not call it up for House action as scheduled Thursday.

The union-backed bill would reverse a National Labor Relations Board ruling — upheld by the Supreme Court — that in effect prohibits picketing at construction sites where more than one contractor is at work. This kind of action has been held to be a secondary boycott of the contractors not directly involved.

THE REAL REASON for the delay, some observers believe, is Powell's hope that he can get labor lobbyists who have been pushing hard for the picketing bill, to transfer their attention to the fair employment practices measure passed by the House last week.

The bill, which would give the Federal Economic Opportunity Commission power to enforce the 1964 ban on job discrimination by labor or management, overwhelmingly passed the House. But it was not regarded as likely to get through the Senate despite President Johnson's endorsement.

Powell had been holding up the picketing bill in the House until the fair employment measure passed, but gave it a green light after the vote. His sudden reversal appared to be more of the same, except with Senate action on the fair employment bill as his price for freeing the picketing legislation.

Students sought for Va. programs

LUNENBURG, Va. (UPI) — A tour of colleges in northern states will be made by three southside civil rights workers to raise funds and recruit students for summer programs in Virginia.

The trio — Nathaniel Hawthorne, president of the Lunenburg chapter, NAACP; Bill Towe of Blackstone, a staff member of the Virginia Students' Civil Rights Committee; and Miss Nan Grogan, a campus traveler for the Southern Student Organizing Committee — will begin a tour Tuesday on of Colleges in New York and New Jersey.

Argues for 'housing' in new rights bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Atty. Gen. Nicholas deB. Katzenbach predicted Wednesday that white Americans would no more object to living next door to colored Americans than they do now to sharing lunch counters and theaters with them.

Katzenbach used this argument as he opened the Administration's battle for the 1966 Civil Rights Law, including the controversial provision that would outlaw discrimination in the sale or rental of housing anywhere in the country.

The Congressional assault on the provision has been launched by Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen, who has called it unconstitutional.

KATZENBACH ARGUED that i twas not, when he appeared before the House Judiciary Committee which began consideration of the bill sent to Congress by President Johnson last week. He even added, "I think we will get Sen. Dirksen's support. He is a reasonable man." Furthermore, Katzenbach said he believed the provision would get the public support.

In addition to the housing provision, the new legislation would give citizens and civil rights workers stronger federal protection against violence by terrorists; reform methods of selecting jurors to assure fair trials in state as well as federal courts; and give the Justice Department new authority to fight school segregation through the courts.

IN A 30-page statement, Katzenbach argued that all this new authority was needed. In spite of the 1964 Civil Rights Act and the 1965 Voting Rights Legislation, he said, there are "deep-seated problems of racial injustice which are not susceptible to effective treatment without action by Congress now."

Katzenbach argued the constitutionality of the housing provision on grounds that Congress can regulate interstate Commerce under the 14th Amendment to the Constitution.

HE ILLUSTRATED his argument with the case of a real estate developer in California, using construction equipment, banks, lumber, advertising and insurance in several states. "One might almost say that everything in those homes from the land to the homeowner moved in interstate commerce," he concluded.

Katzenbach also said the provision would be a "shield" to protect real estate agents, bankers and others who might otherwise refuse to sell on racial grounds because they feared pressure from whites.
