Gadabouting In Baltimore

Now it's Men's Week for Morgan College

With Lula Jones Garrett

There's always something new under the sun . . . and now it is Men's Week on college campuses . . . with Morgan State College in the Vanguard, of course. If you recall, it was Dr. Thelma Bando, dean of women at Morgan, who initiated the Women's Week that has now become a feature on a dozen campuses throughout the East and South.

* * *

MEN'S WEEK at Morgan has just ended, with the program beginning a Sunday ago with services in Morgan Christian Center with Dr. Samuel L. Gandy, dean of the School of Religion, Howard University, as speaker.

Monday, the Match Game was held in McKeldin Student Union Lounge. Cash awards were given to winning contestants. Tuesday, was observed as Sports' Night. The highlight of the evening was the showing of the film "Morgan vs Florida A and M University Football Game" held in Miami, Florida.

Thursday was Talent Night. This event was held in the McKeldin Student Union Lounge before a standing - room-only crowd. Friday, an informal dance was held in O'Connell Hall Lobby and Main Lounge and Saturday, a luncheon was held in the Memorial Refectory.

The guest speaker at the luncheon was Colonel Merle J. Smith, chairman of the Department of Military Science who talked on the Men's Week theme "Facing the Future in an Uncertain World."

Guests attending the luncheon included Dr. Martin D. Jenkins, Colonel Merle J. Smith, the Rev. Howard Cornish, Augustus Adair and Mrs. A. T. Donnell. Harry White, dormitory council president, presided.

* * *

SUNDAY, "Open House" was held in Baldwin and O'Connell Halls. The evening ended the week's activities with the showing of a movie "The War Lovers."

* * *

ON SUNDAY'S agenda is the annual Mother's Day luncheon and Fashion Show by the St. Agnes Guild of St. James Episcopal Church.

The luncheon at 1 p.m., will be in the Lord Baltimore Hotel . . . and Barbara Dungee, who is chairman, tells me that they have a mighty attractive set of models to show some ultra clothes.

In the group are Jean Dudley, Beatrice Brown, Pearl Dyson, Lynda Dobson, Barbara Carter, Helen Tucker and Juanita Kelson, who are going to display adult togs.

Monica Jones, Bonnie Randolph, Jenifer White, Denise Rogers, Randolph Signor and Thomas Lynch will show teenage fashions.

Tot models will be David Watts, Giles Richardson, Juana Wilson, Rhonda Clifford, Sandra Clifford and Charmaine Clifford.

Sharon Murphy, Elise Jude Connie Morrell and Mrs. Dungee will show the hats.

VOLUNTEERS of Camp Llewellyn plowed through all of that rain, Sunday, to attend the May meeting in Mondawmin Meeting Room. Charlotte Wilson Mason, who directs the camp, presided.

Paul Neale, music resource teacher in city schools, was speaker. Mr. Neale discussed the program he will direct at the camp this summer.

Also speaking was Dr. Lillie M. Jackson.

The group also launched plans for a fund raising project to be held at the camp site in Severn, Md. Funds from the project will go for camperships for culturally deprived children.

Attending the session were:

Mr. and Mrs. Israel Price, Mesdames Thelma Ruffin, Esther Conway, Margaret Soden, Eva Smith, Virginia Rice.

Mesdames Hannah Peterson, Josephine Clark, Gladys Parrish, Annabelle Ruffin, Elizabeth Phelps;

Mesdames Cora Hawkins, Gloria Milligan, Marie Smallwood, Christine Worsley, Lillian Reid, Calvert Wiley, Florence Wells;

THE ROBERT JACKSONS of Ridgeway Road have another beautiful life daughter which brings the number to three. They also have two sons.

Misses Dorothy Young, Dorothy Yates and Ann Wilson flew from Friendship Airport, Monday, for a week in Nassau.

Sylvia Cotton (she's the daughter of Mrs. John Cotton of Western Park and the late Mr. Cotton) and John A. Jones were wed in a civil ceremony, Wednesday morning.

With her at the Court House were her mother, her sister, Sylvia, and brother John, Jr.

The bride was lovely in a blue frock, a white hat and matching accessories. Mrs. Jones wore a pink suit with pastel pink hat.

The couple was blessed by Bishop Edgar Love at the small reception which followed at home.

The Pierians had a delightful meeting with Pearl Brackett on Saturday . . . with Louise Lamb, who spent some months in Haiti, talk about the beautiful island. The club has another May meeting coming up — and then the final season's affair, their closing party.

MUSICAL MOMENTS

Two sopranos in separate recitals win season praise

By ADAH K. JENKINS

Two of our most gifted soprano voices were heard this spring in works at opposite poles in music literature — one classic and the other contemporary.

At Goucher College Jeannette Waters starred in the oratorio "A Child of Our Time" by the eminent British composer, Michael Tippett, who conducted his work.

The following week Theresa Coleman garnered prolonged applause in Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis," sung at the Lyric with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, with Peter Herman Adler on the podium.

Preceding the oratorio, which was presented in memory of Dag Hammarskjold, Mr. Tippett spoke simply yet eloquently on his philosophy which inspired the composition.

The text deals with man's inhumanity to man and the effect on a Boy and his Mother during the "winter of persecution" and the promise of "Spring and the renewal of the earth."

In the style of the Lutheran Passion music, the oratorio is developed in sections with a spiritual concluding each part.

MR. TIPPETT used them with artistic care, enhancing their meaning without distorting them.

He recalled hearing spirituals in England over 38 years ago and expressed his gratification at conducting the work in this country where they originated and in having it performed by an intercultural group.

Although the modern idiom is used, both the vocal and instrumental music is highly melodic, as the composer employs all resources in order to depict its emotional message.

Miss Waters' voice, always beautifully controlled, lent the rare quality of depth to the role of the Mother and was especially lovely in the obbligato to the spirituals.

THE CONTRALTO of Thelma Viel was richly colored, while Nicholas DeVirgilio projected the tenor role of the Boy with expressive vitality.

As the Narrator, Frank Valentino sang with confidence, which might have been augmented by a more dramatic presentation.

The chorus of over 200 voices exhibited excellent training in a difficult score, following with precision the zealous conductor.

The group, which was rehearsed by Elliott Galkin, head of the Goucher music department were from the following: Goucher College Glee Club, George Woodhead, director; St. Mary's Seminary (Paca Street), Rev. Eugene Walsh Douglass High School, Marion Smith; Eastern High, Ruth Moyer; City College, William Griggsby.

Sixty members of the Baltimore Symphony gave excellent support in the score which heightened its choosing [illegible].

In the great "Missa Solemnis" Beethoven wrote [illegible] acting roles for the four soloists and the chorus, often treating the voice as if it were an instrument.

* * *

THERESA COLEMAN not only met the demands of the soprano score with brilliant assurance, but sang with an emotional fulfillment that only too often escapes soloists in works of this magnitude.

In the mezzo soprano of Ruth Rowe Mervine, there was depth and resonance throughout her range and a rewarding blend in the many quartet passages.

Although James Atherton's tenor was almost too lyric for the dramatic expanse of the mass, there was admirable clarity.

In Spiro Malas, there was a well supported and expressive bass. Excellent training was apparent in the response of the Handel Choir of Baltimore and the Harford Choral Society, both directed by Saul Mussleman.

Dr. Adler held together all forces with authority and skill that recognized the tender moments as well as the tremendous climaxes of the mass, which, altho based on the Roman liturgy, is really concerned with one of the greatest dramas from the life of Christ.

THE PIANO teachers Activity Group held its annual auditions at Morgan State College on a recent Saturday.

Twenty-five advanced pupils from studios of the members were heard by Mrs. Carol Diggs and Mrs. Frances Hill, from the music department faculty of Morgan.

The final concert of the season sponsored by the teachers' group will be held Sunday, May 15 at 5 p.m. at Ames Methodist Church, Carey and Baker Streets. Admission is free.

CALENDAR: Sunday, May 8 at 5 p.m., at Union Mem. Methodist Church, Harlem and Warwick Avenues, Rebecca Anne Sydnor, dramatic soprano, in concert, presented by the Commission on Mission.

Sunday, May 8 at 8:30 p.m. at Goucher College, Adele Addison, distinguished soprano, in a program of familiar and rarely heard works.

Saturday, May 21 at 1:30 p.m. in the Murphy Auditorium, Morgan State College, the Morgan Community Symphony and the Peabody Ballet Company in Ravel's "The Child" and "The Fantasies" and Verdi's "Vittorio." No admission charge.

Saturday, May 14 at 8:15 p.m. in the Peabody Concert Hall, the spring concert by the Maryland Youth Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Angelo Gatto. Soloists chosen by audition from the Preparatory Department of Peabody will be Barbara Steinberg, flutist, Sandra Long, soprano and Julie McCormick, pianist—all from outlying communities.

Hutzler's schedules free showing of musical revue

"It's Chemical Man" is the title of the snappy musical revue opening the week of May 9 at Hutzler's Westview and Southdale.

In tune with the comic book craze that's sweeping the nation, DuPont Company is sponsoring a 15-city tour of this original production, by Edwin A. Segal of New York.

Featured in the show will be three leading players, all of Broadway background; Jack Knight, in the title role, Dr. Twoshoes (Gene Vaconne), and lovely Mary Mayhem (Ann Hilton).

"It's Chemical Man" will be performed at Hutzler's Westview Mall on May 10 at 8 o'clock. Following performances will be in Hutzlers Westview Mall on May 10 at 11, 2, 4, and 8 . . . In Hutzler's Southdale Rug Department on Wednesday, May 11th at 1, 2, 4, and 8.

There is no admission charge, but tickets may be secured by coming in person to the Office at Hutzler's Westview, Route 40 West tat the Beltway, or the Office at Hutzler's Southdale, Ritchie Highway and Mountain Road.
