CONCENTRATION is written on the faces of the Rev. Robert T. Newbold and State Attorney Charles E. Moylan as they listen to speakers during the second hearing on School Superintendent Laurence G. Paquin's plan to revamp the high schools. Mr. Moylan as an alumnus of City College, spoke against the plan while Rev. Newbold supported it.

APPLAUSE for City College proposals to make the high school an all-college-preparatory school comes from City students Thomas Williams (left) and Cecil Lundy during the second hearing on the Paquin Plan Monday night at Eastern High School.

A MOVING PLEA

Why and how teachers are being cheated!

Among the moving pleas for restoration of the school budget cuts before the Board of Estimates last Wednesday afternoon was a presentation by Kenneth K. Muir, first vice president of the Public School Teachers Association.

Speaking on "behalf of the teaching profession in Baltimore City," Muir outlined how teachers "are being cheated" in this excerpt from his talk which is reprinted below:

"Usually in these presentations you are bombarded wi' lots of facts and figures about the needs of public education. "Usually there are many charts and testimonials displayed before you.

"Today, we have no char's at all no elaborate sheets of figures because we feel that they are unnecessary as you must certainly have learned from us by this time those facts and figures.

"You should also know, after the PSTA meeting, the emotional aspects of this crisis.

"Teachers feel that they are being exploited, but more importantly, they know on a day-to-day basis how children are being cheated.

"Teachers, dedicated to the importance of education, become increasingly frustrated when teaching conditions prevent them from doing what they are trained to do.

"They don't feel sorry for themselves, but they become extremely upset when pupils are housed in inadequate buildings with insufficient textbooks and are placed in excessively large classes.

"TO HELP you understand more clearly the economic factor of getting and keeping good teachers, let me close by giving you a personal example — the case of one teacher in this city. Put yourself in his place — for you will pass judgement on his case — you are both the judge and jury.

"The teacher of whom I speak is a counselor in a senior high school in Baltimore City; he is fully qualified in his job, possesses a Master's Degree and is working toward his Doctorate. He has nine years of experience in the city with eight of these in an inner-city school.

"This man will teach 32 more years before he retires. The Department of Education pays him $7,900 per year, and in order to provide the standard of living he wishes for his family, he works at other jobs to supplement his income.

"A recent check with Montgomery County indicated they would pay this teacher, in his same job, $1,230 more per year. This person owns a home in Baltimore City on which he pay $Baltimore City on which he pays $500 in property taxes.

"He has turned down jobs in fields other than education, some paying several thousand dollars a year more — because he feels that education is important.

"He wants the best possible public school education for all pupils, including his own—son. He wants to work in a school system which permits him to render quality service.

"These are two of the most important considerations to this teacher — the education of all pupils and the satisfaction of knowing that he made an important contribution.

"THIS TEACHER has said that if the Board of Estimates and the City Council fail to support public education, he shall be forced to look elsewhere to work an live.

"He doesn't feel that he is letting Baltimore down — he feels that he had been let down by Baltimore, a city he believed in when he started teaching, and when he bought his home.

"This teacher is not alone in his feelings. Many of the people in this room are teachers with very similar feelings. Each one of them has a different frustration point.

"I hope you will not by your actions push this teacher, or any teacher beyond his frustration point, for I am the teacher used in this example.

—OEO, CAA reacts

Baltimore, under the direction of Parren Mitchell is doing a good job, and yet this program is not a year old.

"It has a dedicated and able staff and is only just starting some of its major programs.

"More people will be involved in these programs because that is what development of the poverty program means."

• • •

ONE OF the key faults the consultant found with the operation was the lack of involvement of poor people.

"There is evidence of cooperation between CAA and the City Council. I would like to point out that the Baltimore City Council is one of the few in the United States who are appropriating local monies to be used in funding community action programs," Mr. Wolner said.

CAC is currently operating on a $4.2 million budget, 90 per cent of which is furnished by the Federal government and 10 per cent by the city.

The City Council, which killed a CAA-operated legal aid to the poor program and voter registration project, has been asked to expand its authority over the war on poverty.

In a pending resolution introduced by Reuben Caplan (D., 5th), the lawmakers have been asked to adopt an ordinance which would allow them authority to put their stamp of approval on any new programs before they are put into effect by the agency.

• • •

MR. WOLNER said the survey team has not yet made its final report, and the draft from which the published accounts were taken have not "even been received by our staff."

He added that "This is in no way a basis on which to criticize the Baltimore program or anybody connected with it."

Mr. Mitchell, in his letter to Mr. Shriver, declared:

"First, let me indicate that I am terribly shocked that an OEO evaluation report would be released to the press before it was submitted to the Community Action Commission and Community Action Agency.

"Second, the facts presented represent only one side of the coin — program shortcomings.

"Equaly important, in my opinion, are the strengths which that team recognized and praised with this staff during its stay."

Mr. Mitchell added that the report "released to the press runs an excellent chance of doing more damage to this program than any on all of the shortcomings compiled, and we deeply resent what we consider the lack of loyalty and commitment on the part of the OEO to this program."

• • •

BEFORE LISTING three points which the survey team made in summarizing their findings with his staff, Mr. Mitchell told Mr. Schriver:

"Another major concern which we have is the highly inconsistent nature of the reporting by your team.

"At a joint meeting summarizing the findings in Baltimore, the members of your team recognized and praised the progress of our staff, particularly the neighborhood center teams."

Listing key points reported-ly made by the team, Mr. Mitchell added:

"We find it most interesting also to note that those OEO which were presented to your team as constructive criticism did not appear in this release and we expect them not to be in your report."

The letter concluded with an appeal:

"We ask for your assistance directly in setting this matter right to whatever extent this is possible and trust that our future relationships will represent a more constructive, ethical and united approach."

LIFE MEMBERS—Mrs. Lillian S. Watty and Mrs. Ethel J. Day received life membership from Baltimore YWCA President, Mrs. Morgan Buchner at annual meeting of the Madison Ave. Branch on Monday.

Neighborhoods, social agencies should end engagement, marry

Edgar M. Ewing, associate director of the Baltimore Urban Renewal and Housing Agency, spoke Monday at the annual meeting of the Madison Ave. YWCA.

He pointed out the need for social agencies "to find a new sympathy" for those who "are not motivated to come to us."

Mr. Ewing explained:

"The problem is people and the quality of lives they lead. We want to build not just housing units, but neighborhoods; not just construct schools, but educate; not just to raise income but to create beauty and end the poisoning of our environment.

• • •

"WE MUST extend the range of choices available to people, so that all, not just the fortunate, can have access to decent homes and schools, to recreation and culture.

"We must work to overcome the forces that divide us and find ways to create a partnership with those of diverse incomes and backgrounds.

"The neighborhood rehabilitation efforts and Urban Renewal could have a perfect union with the YWCA and other social agencies. Let's end the engagement and get married."

• • •

MR. EWING was introduced by Mrs. Ethel J. Day, first vice chairman of the Committee on Administration.

Mrs. Grace C. Gates, chairman, presided.

Miss Marjorie Jennings, teen age director, sang.

Mrs. Julia Callaway, house director, was at the piano.

• • •

AT THE annual meeting which followed, reports were given by Mrs. Vivian Washington, secretary; Mrs. Sidney Hollander Jr., finance chairman; Mrs. Elizabeth Murphy Moss, second vice chairman.

Mrs. Morgan M. Buchner, president YW of Baltimore, gave life membership certificates to Mrs. Ethel J. Day and Mrs. Lillian S. Watty.

Tribute was also paid Mrs. Henrietta B. Martin, who gave the grace and she retires this year as executive of the Metropoolitan branch.

Mrs. Sadie E. Fletcher, gave the meditation in poetry.

• • •

MRS. GRACE B. HUNT, branch director, noted in her report a varied 'out-reach' program in cooperation with the public schools.

She advised the Branch is now field placement agency for VISTA, the federal project meaning volunteers in service to America.

Five volunteers are presently assigned. Membership in the branch is up to 2,207.

• • •

MRS. HUNT'S report also acknowledged the gift of a conference table by the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority in memory of Mrs. Erma Bruce Davis, long a 'dedicated' volunteer worker and board member. It has been placed in room 202.

Since the prosecution said it had no evidence, none could be admitted against the defendant, he argued.

Judge Carter agreed and halted the trial after hearing testimony from Mr. Greenleaf only.

Mr. Greenleaf testified that he paid Mrs. Gwynn $300 to pull his driving record. Contact with Mrs. Gwynn was made through Mrs. Isom, he said.

All persons named in the indictment were also released after Judge Carter acquitted Mrs. Gwynn.

Multiple duty assignment for each Morgan thinclad

By SAM LACY

PETERSBURG, Va. —The 11-man contingent from Morgan State College will need to exhibit a whole lot of grit and stamina if Eddie Hurt plans to make a race of it for the CIAA track and field championship here today (Friday) and tomorrow.

No fewer than 10 of the 11 Golden Bears on hand for the conference meet are down for iron-man assignments.

Except for Joe Ponds, Morgan's entry in the pole vault competition, each of the Bears will have to compete, and well, in two, three and sometimes four events.

Ray Pollard, for example, is likely to face the starter's gun no fewer than ten times in the 2-day carnival.

Pollard, sophomore ace of the squad, is entered in the 100 and 220-yard dashes, each of which will require a qualifying trial, semi-final and final; the 440-yard relay and the mile relay.

Another busy youngster will be Tim Johnson, perhaps the school's best quartermiler.

Johnson is entered in the open 440, with the same set of trials, semis and finals, and the two major relays.

Mal Brown and Howie Stanback, also sophomores, are listed in the same races drawing Johnson's attention.

And Spencer Henry, aside from both sprints, is likely to get a relay assignment.

In the field, Morgan's heavy-duty man will be George Johnson.

George will contest hte long (broad) jump and triple jump, and also will take part in the shotput and discus events.

Byron Lewis, one of the Bears' best bets for a gold medal, also is entered in the high and long jumps, as well as the triple jump.

Carlton Dabney is in the shotpu tadd discus, as is Harvey Palmore.

While he, o, is confined to only a pair of events, Michael Cassell will probably be the hardest worker from Baltimore in the weekend competition.

Cassell is competing in the pole vault and high jump events which usually consume an entire afternoon in the field.

BUSY BEAR — Among the heavy-duty workers for Morgan State College in CIAA meet at Petersburg, is Tim Johnson, ace 440 man, who also competes in dashes and relays.

Carver golfers loom as MSA title threats

Indications are that Carver High School may have one, possibly two serious contenders in the Maryland Scholastic Association golf tournament, scheduled at Mt. Pleasant next week.

The Cubs ran their team record to 9-2 for the season on Monday, when they romped to an 11-1 triumph over Forest Park.

Today (Friday), they will try to make it 10 wins in a Carroll Park clash with Poly.

• • •

THE TWO losses in the Carver record were put there by Calvert Hall and Loyola, admittedly the best links teams in local scholastic circles.

In tournament play, each man is on his own. As often as not, this helps the contestant.

• • •

AL WILSON is Carver's No. 1 man. He's followed by John Gaither, Richard Watson and Richard Brown, who alternates as No. 4, with Glen Blackstone.

Although Wilson is ranked ahead of Gaither, it is the latter who has the best record in dual meet competition to date.

Gaither has lost on 1 in 9 matches, Wilson has won 7 and lost 2.

• • •

IN THE dual meet program, 12 points are at stake in each match. The boy winning the first 6 holes in a 12-hole match, scores 1 point; the one winning the second 6 holes scores 1, and the boy winning the overall match gains another point for a 3-0 victory.

Against the Foresters Monday, Wilson, Gaither, and Watson scored 3-0 decisions,

Blackstone defeated his cousin, Eugene, by a 2-1 margin—LACY.
