20 slated for All-Star tilt in St. Louis Tuesday

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—With the 9-man reserve contingents for each side filled, 20 colored players are slated for participation in Tuesday's Major League All - Star baseball game here Tuesday.

On Wednesday, the pitching staffs were selected by the opposing managers — Walter Alston of the Dodgers for the NL, and Sam Mele of the Twins, for the AL.

Juan Marichal of the Giants, Bob Gibson of the Cardinals and Bob Veale of the Pirates, are on the 8-man corps chosen by Alston.

Mele did not pick any colored hurlers.

ON FRIDAY, NL pilot Alston added six more tan athletes, and AL helmsman Mele picked up two.

In the reserve units are: infielders Joe Morgan of Houston, Maury Wills of the Dodgers, and Felipe Alou of the Braves; plus outfielders Willie Stargell of the Pirates, Curt Flood of the Cardinals, and Richie Allen of the Phillies.

AL additions are catcher Earl Battey of Minnesota, and outfielder Tommy Agee of the White Sox.

ALREADY ON the All-Star roster as a result of the annual balloting among players are:

Outfielders Willie Mays, Hank Aaron and Roberto Clemente, infielders Leo Cardenas, Willie McCovey and Jim Hart for the NL.

Also outfielders Frank Robinson and Tony Oliva for the AL, along with infielder George Scott of the Red Sox.

MARICHA, WHO won his first 10 games this season, has posted a 13-4 record for the San Francisco Giants and will be appearing in his fifth mid-season classic.

The Giants' righthander started last year's game and was the winning pitcher in both the 1962 and 1964 contests. He has allowed American League batters only three hits in eight innings of All-Star work and boasts an earned run average for the classic of 1.13.

GIBSON, A fast - balling righthander, is 11-8 this year and will be making his third All-Star appearance while Veale (10-5) has been named for the second straight time, although he did not see action in last year's contest.

Birds Boast Baseball's Best Bullpen

DICK HALL — EDDIE WYATT — MRYON DRABOWSKY — EUGENE BRABENDER — STU MILLER — EDDIE FISHER

By SAM LACY

Whether or not it is generally known, baseball's "Bullpen" has a connotation that may be considered tainted in the prissier American homes.

The term, which is so much a part of the major league game today, got its name years ago, from a practice in vogue on dairy farms.

Bulls used to be placed in an enclosure away from the cows. Being penned up within sight of mates recently "freshened" by births, had the tendency to prepare them for further action.

* * *

IN BALTIMORE, the pitchers who man the bullpen of the league-leading Orioles form a crew that is constantly ready for action.

Not only ready, but anxious.

Objects of their anxiety, however, are other humans — members of the team opposing the Birds.

* * *

DEAN OF the 6-man contingent is Stu Miller, veteran of four seasons since his arrival in the Oriole camp in 1963.

Sharing honors with him as vital cogs in the smoothest-working relief machinery in baseball, are Dick Hall, Moe Drabowsky, Eddie Fisher and the babies of the corps, Eddie Watt and Gene Brabender.

* * *

OLDTIMERS are familiar with the feats of former greats of the bullpen.

The names of "Freeman" may be considered tainted in the prissier American homes.

OLDTIMERS are familiar with the feats of former greats of the bullpen.

The names of "Freeman" job to be done.

This is not to malign the judgment of Hank, nor to belittle his value as manager of the high-flying Birds.

It is simply to point up the awesome strength and unique versatility of the Baltimore bullpen.

One can readily appreciate the frustrations of an opposing team, that has to contend with Bauer and his "bulls."

* * *

IF THE situation calls for replacing starter Steve Barber or righthander Jim Palmer, both of whom are flame throwers of the first order, Bauer can bring in soft-throwing Stu Miller to knock everybody off stride.

Once the opposition thinks it has caught up on its timing with the Miller "junk," it comes Hank with fireballing Brabender or Drabowsky.

Hall with his big motion and deceptive delivery, complements Watts no-windup style. And Drabowsky's sinker combines with Fisher's fluttering knuckler to further confuse the enemy.

* * *

THAT THEY represent a tremendous asset is attested to by opposing batters who have been quoted as saying the only way to beat the Orioles is to score one run at a time and try to hold them.

The theory here is that when you don't score runs in bunches, you have a chance to keep the starting pitcher in the game.

Nobody, the contention goes, wants to see a Baltimore reliefer.

* * *

AS OF this morning (Friday), Miller has a 6-1 record. So does Wat.

Drabowsky is 2-0, Hall is 3-2, Brabender is 2-2, and Fisher is 1-1.

That totals out to 20 wins against 7 loses. Which mean with only half the season gone, the O's have a 20-game pitcher in the bullpen.

And he's still ready and looking for "fresh" meat.

See the spirit of '66!
See Frank Robinson and the Orioles' other big bats at the stadium!

Galento referee for Bruno rematch

Waldo Von Erich, German wrestling king, strutted away from the Civic Center ring one Saturday last month, with an unpopular and dubious victory over Bruno Sammartino.

He had, in the popular opinion of the fans, delivered a nasty below - the - belt foul shot to Sammartino while referee Vince DiPula was engaged in a verbal dispute with Arnald Skoland, Bruno's road manager.

Bruno promptly issued the challenge for a rematch, and the Maryland State Athletic meeting to approve it.

Bruno had declared, "I will meet him anywhere, any time, and under any conditions." But the Commissioner insisted the match be re-scheduled for the same ring next Saturday (July 16).

Two-ton Tony Galento, one-time heavyweight boxing luminary, will be guest referee for the event.

FISH BLOOD

One fisherman rubs his lure with blood from the first fish of the day he catches.

Says it is the reason why he almost always outfishes everybody.

Who's not riding the price skyrocket?

The electric company people

—the folks at your investor-owned electric light and power company. While the price of nearly everything else keeps rising, they work hard to keep the unit price of electric service low. The fact is, today the average American family pays less per kilowatt-hour than it did only a few years ago!
