Chi riot

square mile area of the West Side, including Capt. Francis Nolan, 43, a watch commander. Other officers were struck with bricks and cut by flying glass.

THE GANGS of screaming youths raced from one area to another through the city's third straight night of racial violence. They set fire to buildings, looted stores and engaged helmet-clad police in running gun battles.

Motorists were pulled from their cars and beaten.

Glass and bricks littered the streets, and the flames of small fires shimmered in the pre-dawn darkness. Front-porch on-lookers in colored neighborhoods jeered and shouted as police cars cruised down the streets.

It was Chicago's worst night of racial fighting this year.

The outbreak started slowly Thursday evening and built up to a fevered pitch after midnight. Shortly after 2:15 a.m. CDT, Deputy Police Supt. James Riordan said "we think we have the situation under control."

But scattered violence continued in some areas.

RARELY DID police — armed with shotguns and tear gas grenades — encounter a large group of rioters. The gangs staged hit-and-run raids throughout an area stretching from near Lake Street on the north and 16th Street on the south; Halstead Street on the east and Pulaski Road on the west.

More than 500 police were thrown into the running battle, and authorities said thousands of rioters were active at the height of the trouble. Snipers fired at police from darkened tenement windows and from the 16th floor of a high rise apartment.

The rioting went unchecked for hours, despite the efforts of social workers and civil rights leaders who stumbled through the littered streets pleading for an end to it all. Police rushed extra ammunition into the affected area when patrolmen had shot their pistols and rifles empty.

Illinois Gov. Otto Kerner was reported to be closely in touch with the situation.

Housing discrimination causes campus protest

By RONALD SCHWARTZ

A 23-year-old graduate student attending the University of Maryland in College Park, Md., David Perine, faces a housing problem experienced by many colored students who cannot obtain a room within the crowded dormitories or do not choose to live there.

The question is, how can a student live off campus if he's colored and when most apartment renting to whites give you an evasive "no" upon inquiry?

SINCE THE University provides no housing for graduate students, when the fall term begins, Perine will probably have to settle for the single room in the home of a colored family that he hadrented last semester

For the summer, Perine may live on campus since he is working there with Upward Bound students, but with the flock of new students entering this fall, he along with a numebr of other colored students will migrate to the apartments located in the colored community of Lakeland.

Lakeland is a residential community on the outskirts of College Park. Students find it by identifying the neighborhood with a renowned beer joint fronting on old Route 1. Lakeland is behind it.

Perine said that when he first came to the University in 1964, he was unaware that apartments renting to his white friends weren't open to him.

What proved even more frustrating for Perine, is that he waisted several rolls of change phoning apartments listed in the University's Housing Office.

THE HOUSING Office maintains lists, free of charge, of apartments open in the area. It is a service for both the students and the real estate people.

The list, however, proved no service to Perine who said that after so many turndowns he got the impression that: "You're colored, baby, so cool it."

Perine said that he discovered Lakeland when, out of desperation, he strolled up to a girl at a bus stop and asked her where the colored folks live.

RECENTLY, A group of students calling themselves the University Fair Housing Committee have banded together to protest the University's indifference to the problem.

The University receives the bulk of its funds from the State Government in Annapolis which is until reapportionment takes effect later this year — dominated by conservative and Eastern Shore influences.

The University's administration, therefore, never had cause to facilitate equal opportunity in a state, which for example, refused in its last sessions of the legislature, to strike down its ancient law prohibiting miscegenation.

BUT SLOWLY the administration's policy has changed from that of the early 1960's when it refused to allow the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) to organize on campus or even to use the campus facilities for a meeting place. Students, in turn, formed the Prince George's County of CORE an dmet off campus.

On Friday, a week ago, the student who make up the Fair Housing Committee, although they too meet off-campus, came on campus with picket signs in their hands.

They were asking that the University condemn segregation and take further action than that of merely asking by phone an apartment owner whether or not he discriminates prior to his listing with the campus housing office.

David Boston, a colored graduate student at the University and chairman of the Committee claims that such an inquiry, newly adopted, is ineffective since one girl, already using the University's housing list, has been refused an apartment.

The Committee, in turn, wants the University to be more inquisitive before listing a room by sending a questionnaire to the renter.

Another demand of the Committee would have a representative of the Administration speak in favor of a fair housing ordinance scheduled for action by the College Park City Council on July 26.

Although individual professors have spoken in favor of such a law, the Administration has never taken a position.

ROBERT BEACH, assistant to the president for University Relations, when asked if the Administration would sent a representative, replied:

"We've been complying and coping with the problem but groups are trying to get us to change the community." The College Park campus, which is growing at a fast clip has some 25,000 students while the city itself has 22,000 residents.

Beach adds that the University is obeying all Federal and State civil rights laws, but Ken Hannington, 22, a member of the group, claims that the University, a federally financed institution, is subsidizing segregated housing and is thus in violation of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 prohibiting discrimination in federally financed projects.

THE UNIVERSITY "took a step in the right direction,' according to Hannington, when it recently established a community relations panel to discuss the student's demands.

But unless a fair housing law is passed either in Prince George's County or in College Park, the prejudices of local residents will continue to invoke a hardship on the approximately 300 colored students and also the foreign students who face similar problems.

John W. Lee, 22

Funeral services will be held today (Friday) at 1 p.m. for John William Lee, 22, of the 1600 block Harlem Ave. in the Charles R. Law Funeral Home.

The Rev. Monroe Saunders of First United Holiness Church will officiate.

John Lee was pronounced dead Wednesday as a result of a shot wound in the neck. He was shot when a car owner chased several young men from his vehicle in the 500 block of W. Frank lin St.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Lee, grandparents Mr. and Mrs. John Lee and grandfather Eugene J. Lee.

Also, sisters Mrs. Mosell Wilson and Misses Gloria, Jennifer, and Glendola Lee.

Five brothers also survive. They are: Eugene, Charles, Andrew, Burl and Gulious Lee, grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. are residents of Baltimore.

Mr. Lee is also survived by eleven aunts, nine uncles and many other relatives.
