SCLC says no truth in car theft tie

ATLANTA (UPI) — The second of two men charged with a car theft operation that spilled over into Dr. Martin Luther King's civil rights movement went on trial in federal court Thursday.

Morris Finley, charged jointly with Harold Belton Andrews in the case, went on trial before a federal jury immediately after the Andrews case was finished.

THEY WERE charged with interstate transportation of stolen cars.

Andrews took the stand in his own defense Wednesday and said he faked bills of sale and registration cards on four stolen cars that ended up in possession of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, King's organization.

King has said that he and his co - workers knew nothing of stolen cars being sold to them.

Andrews said he picked up cars from rental agencies in Washington, D.C., Newark, N.J., Atlanta and Daytona Beach, obtaining them in his own name. He said he made up registration cards and bills of sale on the cars in the names of Hosea Williams, Finley and Lester Hankerson. Williams — and Hankerson are connected with the SCLC.

IN TESTIMONY Andrews said in his own behalf that Williams used one of the stolen cars about two weeks.

He said he was paid from $400 to $600 for the cars but that the phony bills of sale were for as much as $3,000.

Finley and Williams, Andrews said, once told him to try and steal a Lincoln that would be used by King himself and that he would be paid $1,500 for the vehicle. He said he never obtained the car.

ANDREWS SAID he worked his way into the King organization and later proposed to the FBI. He said he considered himself an FBI informer.

Two Justice Department men tried three times to discourage him from testifying in the case, Andrews stated and added that he was advised ahead of time that he and Finley would be indicted in the car theft operation but that Williams would not be indicted.

NAACP and counties continue talks on housing, schools

Baltimore CORE's Housing Committee, now reorganized under the name "Activists for Fair Housing," supported the NAACP Youth League in its demonstration on Sunday, July 24, at Rumsey Island, Foster Branch and Edgewood Meadows in Joppa town.

The demonstration was held after repeated efforts of the part of colored applicants to purchase property in the area had met with failure. Approximately fifty pickets marched the area for a period of three hours.

The program of the Activists now calls for more direct action throughout the Maryland area to clarify the intention of the colored citizen to refuse to accept the second and third class housing of the ghetto.

Housing conditions at Fort Meade are high in priority for action, and the organization is now busy mailing out circulars to inform the public of the fact that colored soldiers are equal and free to all men while facing death in Viet Nam, but they cannot enjoy that same freedom once they return to the 'land of the free and the home of the brave.'

They have been repeatedly refused housing in the Fort Meade area. At the present time a team of the Activists is surveying the Odenton locality.

Among other apartment developments which have been surveyed and tested in the past two weeks, the Loch Raven apartments and the Wellesley apartments have been definitely established as not inclined to rent to members of the colored population. They are now in the process of being incorporated into the program of the Activists.

King condemns black power, but presses for substance

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. took a $6,000 advertisement in the New York Times Tuesday to restate his faith in nonviolent protest as opposed to the "Black power" concept of obtaining equality.

The ad, paid for by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, made an appeal for contributions. It was headlined "It Is Not Enough To Condemn Black Power," a reference to King's theme that something must be done about conditions that led to frustration resulting in the "Black Power" mood.

"The mood expresses an angry frustration which is not limited to the few who use it to justify violence," he said. "Millions are frustrated and angered because extravagant promises made less than a year ago are a shattered mockery today."

KING SAID nonviolent protest still remains the method that will eventually bring equality. He said he considered the slogan "Black Power" unwise from the outset and violent connotations which have since attached to the words make it "dangerous and injurious."

"...I confidently believe the call for 'Black Power' will rapidly diminish," King said. "The 'Black Power' slogan comes not from a sense of strength but from a feeling of weakness and desperation. It will vanish when effective organization builds self-confidence.

"The burden now shifts to the municipal, state and federal authorities and I am not in search of power," King said. "If they continue to use nonviolence as a cushion for complacency, the wrath of those suffering a long train of abuses will rise."

THE CONCEPT also was discussed by Stokely Carmichael, chairman of SNCC, who said on a radio show that "Black Power" meant nothing more to him than "White Power."

"We have to develop in our black society a black consciousness," he said.

Floyd McKissick, director of CORE, said on a television show that black power would come through peaceful means such as voter registration, political education, economic power, and an improved self-image.

"INTEGRATION is always thought of as the black man moving into a white neighborhood," he said.

"Integration has merely helped on the surface and those best qualified among black people and has not benefited by and large the masses. I'd say 22 million black people in this country. It hasn't made a change in their lives."

Hines shift to Black Sea circuit rapped by U.S.

MOSCOW (UPI)—The U. S. Embassy said Wednesday it will protest arbitrary Soviet changes in the tour by Earl ("Father") Hines' Band of the Soviet Union.

It called Soviet reasons for the changes "pallid" and "totally unconvincing."

Gosconcerb, the Soviet concert bureau, told the embassy last week that concerts by the Hones band in Moscow, Leningrad and Alma Ata had been canceled, and concerts in the three smaller cities of Krasnodar, Batumi and Sakumi substituted.

"We plan to protest to the Soviet cultural committee," an embassy spokesman said, "over changes which were made without consultation with us and for reasons which we do not find convincing."

THE SPOKESMAN said that, after the Gosconcert announcement, talks were initiated between Soviet and embassy officials, who asked for an explanation.

Gosconcert said only that Moscow and Leningrad audiences were "jaded by jazz" and the band would draw larger crowds in Krasnodar, Batumi and Sakumi—three southern vacation resorts.

"This is totally unconvincing," the spokesman said. "We told Gosconcert that it itself was confident it could fill auditoriums in Moscow and Leningrad when the Hines tour was first planned, and we are still confident it could fill them."

The spokesman refused to ascribe the changes to tension over Viet Nam, despite past Soviet harassment of the Soviet-American cultural exchange program, under which the Hines Band is touring.

The Soft Whiskey proving ground.
In this day and age of proving products scientifically, we have an unscientific suggestion. Taste ours.
One sip and you'll know why we couldn't possibly call it anything but Soft Whiskey.
You see, Soft Whiskey is soft. It goes down just like the name says. After that, it acts like any other 86 proof whiskey. It's just that getting there is a whole lot easier.
But how to prove that to you? After all, Soft Whiskey looks like any other whiskey. And it acts like any other whiskey. So what's left is the way Soft Whiskey goes down. At which point someone said: "Why not just ask people to try it?" Our first reaction was that that was a bad idea. It wasn't scientific. Our second reaction was that that was a good idea.

block Ellamont St. and Joe Louis Smith, 20, 814 N. Caroline St., were found guilty.

Two other young defendants will be tried at a later date.

Sentence was withheld pending motion for a new trial.

The mother and boyfriend of the nurse were state's witnesses. Assistant State's Attorney Joseph Howard told the court the abduction was "one of the most dastardly and horrible crimes" he had heard of in many a day.

She told the court that Donald and Joe grabbed her and started taking her down an alley.

Following them were the other two boys with her boyfriend in pursuit begging them to let her go.

Inside the house, she said, the four attackers talked together while she and her boyfriend waited in a front room. During the brief moment, she said the boyfriend told her to run out the door.

Donald and Joe came into the room, pulled her to a second floor bedroom and threw her on the bed.

The friend tried to persuade them to let her go.

He said at one point he was knocked down, stomped and kicked down the steps to the first floor.

Both Trusty and Smith said they abducted the girl and forced her to submit to their advances with her boyfriend's knowledge.

They coaxed the boyfriend as saying, "Check her to see if she is real."

quality of care, and payments to vendors within the limits of the program," Dr. Dodson explained.

"We are finding some hesitancy from those who would qualify for medical assistance but do not want to be considered welfare cases. The fact that a person must make application to the Welfare Department does not necessarily indicate that the individual is otherwise dependent on welfare funds," the health official emphasized.

ANOTHER POINT on which many people are confused is the difference between 1. the Health Insurance for the Aged program (Title XVIII of the Social Security Act) administered by the Federal Government through the Social Security Administration. 2. the Medical Assistance Program (Title XIX) for people of all ages who are eligible under Maryland's plan for medical assistance for the indigent and medically indigent administered by the State Health Department.

A problem frequently encountered in relation to the confusion about the cards is that many people think they can get drugs at the drug store by showing their card received under the Federal Health Insurance for the Aged program. These red, white, and blue cards do not entitle the recipient to obtain prescription or other drugs in any drug store or pharmacy.

The Maryland medical assistance cards XIX are issued by local welfare departments in Maryland to eligible persons of any age, and in addition to hospitalization and nursing home services, the cards may also be honored by private physicians for office or home services, by druggists for prescriptions, by dentists, and by other medical personnel for stipuated services and supplies.

Questions regarding eligibility under Title XIX should be directed to the local welfare department. Questions regarding services available to eligible persons under Title IX should be directed to the local health department.

Christmas.

Meantime, Mrs. Holsey and the youngest of the couple' remaining three children, continue to live in the home but with great dissatisfaction, the mother said.

As a remedy, the oldest sons, Thomas J. Holsey, 23 of Dundalk and John E. Holsey, 25, of Baltimore, are contemplating purchasing a new residence "away from the tragic scene" for their mother and little sister.

To put it the way Mrs. Holsey sees it, "I'm just too upset and blue to do anything. I have to keep busy, doing something, to keep from thinking and I just don't know what to do."

Mr. Holsey served overseas with the Army until 1946 and then became a merchant seaman.

Tommy, as the family call their second son, has three children and John, the oldest son, was married in March this year.

The day Mr. Holsey left for the China trip, the grieved mother said they all went to the Baltimore pier to see him off.

With no inkling he would never see his youngest son again, Mrs. Holsey said her husband enjoyed the informal bon voyage party.

Recalling the moment death came to their doorway, Mrs. Holsey said she was in the kitchen.

"Strange I was there," she stated, "because usually, when the children are outside I am looking out back and front constantly."

the street.

Mrs. Rhodes, who came home from her job in private service about 3:40 p.m., was walking across the Lafayette St. bridge across from her home when she saw her oldest daughter trying to break out the basement window from inside.

"I thought, 'She knows that window doesn't open. Why is she doing that?' the mother recalled.

As she got closer, she could see the flames in the front room.

"All I could think about was the babies, the babies. I tried to go into the house the back way, but the neighbors held me back.

"They said they told me three times that all the children were out. I didn't hear them."

SAVED BY Mrs. Terry was her own child, Karen, six months, and her brothers and sisters, Phenoria, 11; Robin, five; Lena, two and Brian, three months.

Another son, 14 - year - old Douglas, had just returned from a trip with friends to New York to see fire engines still working feverishly over the burned - out house.

He said that at the time, he was "afraid to ask mother if everyone was all right."

Right now Mrs. Rhodes' main concerns are getting clothing — all they have is what they were wearing at the time — from the small amount of insurance money, and finding a new place to live.

She is having some trouble. "Any time you say children," an apartment is rented," she observed.

Presently Mrs. Rhodes has found shelter for herself and three of her children with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dorsey, at 608 N. Gilmor St.

Two other children are staying with a sister.

The family is a close, one she said, and the children always accompany her to Wednesday night prayer meetings at the Greater New Hope Baptist Church where she is secretary of the Usher Board.

FIRE INVESTIGATORS have hinted that the fire may have been caused by a youngster playing with matches, but Mrs. Rhodes stoutly maintains that there were no matches in the house and feels that the cause may have been a smouldering spark which was fanned to flames by an open window.

Mrs. Doris Gambrill, who lives next door at 817 N. Payson St., said she was home at the time and "heard the children yelling. 'The house is on fire,' but I thought they were only playing, until the smoke started to come in my house," she said.

For Mrs. Rhodes the nightmare is "something I don't think I'll ever get over," but she will always hold with her the "gift" of "seven lives."

Nevertheless, according to testimony, the Linden Ave. operator, a small-time weekend "business", brought in only small change.

Plain clothes officers who pretended to be cash customers, at most, they paid only $1.50 a half-pint for purchases they made prior to the June raid.
