August is date for turkey dish

O.K. everyone, —it's turkey time! A large number of turkeys will be ready for market this month, and will be featured at attractive prices.

Turkey is an American favorite — and especially useful on picnics, or for large groups, are the convenient, ready - to - cook boneless turkey rolls or roasts, now readily available at most poultry counters. They're easy to prepare for take - along or at home meals.

BE SURE to leave the turkey roll or roast in its original wrapper and thaw in the refrigerator for 1 to 2 days, or under cold running water. Remove wrapper, but remember to leave string in place while cooking.

Roasting comes next, in a preheated - to - 350 degree F. oven. Before placing in oven, rinse turkey with cold water; drain and pat dry. If meat is not preseasoned, rub lightly with salt or pepper. Then place roast on a shallow baking pan.

Baste or brush occasionally with melted butter, or margarine, or pan drippings, especially on dry areas. If roast becomes too brown during roasting, cover with a loose tent of aluminum foil.

• • •

CONTINUE ROASTING until the turkey's done. Test for doneness: a roast thermometer inserted in center of roll should register 170 degrees to 175 degrees F. Remove from oven and let the roast stand about a half hour before slicing, to absorb the juices. Delicious gravy, by the way, can be made readily from the pan drippings.

What's the difference between jam and conserve?

When you see labels for jelly, jam, conserve, marmalade, and preserves do you really know the difference?

Here's a brief description of each as given by U.S. Department of Agriculture food specialists:

Jelly is made from fruit juice; the product is clear and firm enough to hold its shape when turned out of the container.

Jam is made from crushed or ground fruit; it tends to hold its shape but generally is less firm than jelly.

Conserves are jams made from a mixture of fruits, usually including citrus fruit; often raisins and nuts are added.

Marmalade is a tender jelly with pieces of fruit distributed evenly throughout. A marmalade commonly contains citrus juice and slivers of peel.

Preserves are whole fruit or large pieces of fruit in thick syrup, often slightly jellied.

• • •

PRESERVING FRUIT with sugar is one of the oldest forms of food preservation.

Not all fruits have the properties needed for making satisfactory jellied products, but with commercial pectins now on the market the homemaker need not depend on the jellying quality of the fruit for successful restuls.

"How to Make Jellies, Jams and Preserves at Home" is the title of a USDA booklet with recipes and directions for making jams, conserves, preserves various kinds of jellies, jams, conserves, preserves and marmalade.
