Handshakers all, candidates hit the street, kiss the kids

By ELIZABETH M. OLIVER

In years gone by, politicians campaigned by kissing babies, shaking hands, paying rent for the poor and, attending all the funerals.

To get in line for the Sept. 13 Primary Elections, the 1966 candidates' approach shows little difference from the olden days.

Right now many persons with their hats in the ring are not only kissing the kids but also —

Playing the hand-shaking bit to the hilt, they're rapping on hundreds of doors, pumping arms at cookouts, coffees, picnics, church meetings, bridge clubs, reunions.

Charles P. Law a longtime maker of friends, the candidate for a 5th District House of Delegates seat states: "Everybody likes to be asked for his vote. No matter where you may meet a citizen, you tell him you'd appreciate what he can do for you."

Paying rent for the poor is Warren Shaw, the realtor, who is a 4th District candidate for the House of Delegates. But running for election or not, Mr. Shaw often does this anyhow.

* * *

AMONG OTHER facts the AFRO survey revealed was an example of "the trials and tribulations a candidate suffers."

Dr. Emerson Julian, a 4th District candidate for the Senate says:

"I was making a speech at a church when an insect somehow got inside my shirt. Suddenly in the middle of my talk the antjor whatever it was, bit me and I did a little twist.

"Going on with my talk I had to smile when it was no smiling affair. Furthermore, the ant stayed in my shirt biting me in that church and two other meetings where I spoke afterwards."

Thoroughly enjoying the adventure of meeting voters in the street, the Indiana-born physician terms himself "a country boy who can walk the average candidate into the ground."

He states, "I out-walk my car."

* * *

ON MONEY matters of vote-getting, some candidates say they'd "sooner ask for a pint of blood," others claim cash support is not too hard to get.

Among gripes, the AFRO discovered some voters think "there are too many of us running." One candidate claims our voters have the candidates and districts in which they're running "all mixed up."

Another, confident of winning, has contacted the Baltimore Transit Co. to carry his signs for the November General Elections.

Senator Verda Welcome, a 4th District candidate to keep her seat in the Senate says, "What I've had to spend would discourage anyone from running. Also what I've had to spend to serve as a State Senator would also discourage anyone after election."

* * *

CLARENCE MITCHELL III, a 4th District candidate for the Senate:

Hours a day campaigning "About 18 hours a day, from 6:30 a.m. to 2 a.m. or 3 a.m. the next day. I get about 3½ hours sleep.

Cost of the campaign — "Haven't counted it yet but I have a great amount of volunteer work from many, many friends."

Is it hard to raise money? — "Not too difficult. Many friends and supporters from the last time I ran and those who were happy with my representation have been considerate."

Is there much help from your family? — "All members of my family always help whatever the cause."

General comment — "This is the dirtiest election I have seen. Opponents tear down signs and placards and toss around false accusations as if there is no regard for the truth.

"Overall however the reception I receive is overwhelmingly cordial.

"Some of my workers reported an unusual happening in that another candidate's workers threatened to "smack" them up on Whitelock St."

WILLIAM H. MURPHY SR., a candidate for Judge of the Orphans Court:

"Big meetings do not sell the candidate. You have to get out and let the little people know you are running.

"You knock on doors, meet the people face to face.

"This year, it's a wonderful thing. People are anxious that you win. They're glad to know members of their race are candidates."

WILLIAM H. MURPHY JR., a 6th District candidate for the House of Delegates:

"It costs about $1 a vote to run in the 6th District. For example, 44,000 votes would cost $44,000.

"If you are unable to spend that, you substitute by getting volunteers, friends, relatives, helpers of all ages to beat the bricks.

"With me, taxi drivers, parking lot attendants, everybody, anybody, has been helping. People are asking for thousands of pieces of literature. They're stuffing envelopes, knocking on doors.

"Everyone's in high key and can't seem to wait until Sept. 13 returns come in.

"My family always cooperates. Indigestion upset stomachs, headaches come now and then from irregular meals. But all shoulders are to the wheel and there's a winning spirit in the entire household.

"The children have given up hope of a summer vacation willingly."

TROY BRAILEY, 4th District candidate for the House of Delegates:

"I spend about 15 hours a day, from 10 a.m. to the wee hours of the morning.

"I have no total cost as yet. It's pretty hard to raise money but I have had some donations from Labor.

"My family helps. My son Norman is my campaign manager and my daughter Alice is assistant.

"Everybody's pretty excited and they feel I can win."

CHARLES P. HOWARD, a 5th District candidate for the House of Delegates:

"Running for election costs plenty. Going around the neighborhood, among friends and relatives, asking for money is like asking for a pint of blood.

"It makes you think we don't have full consciousness that it costs money to get across an image.

"I get good response from the little man for $2 to $10. But those who have money are less interested.

"Among my helpers are 40 to 60 youngsters, my wife, my brother and his wife and son.

"My nephew has a little speech all his own. Age 9, he tells voters: "My uncle is colored just like me. We need your vote to help him to help us all."

TITUS GARNETT JR., a 2nd District Democrat candidate for the House of Delegates:

"I start talking at 6 a.m. and talk all day. I never stop talking as long as I'm awake.

"My family, friends, neighbors are all in there helping, moving the campaign along. They're a good team. Many people have volunteered their homes and inviting neighbors in, they have affairs where I can talk some more. The cooperation is good.

"We had a boatride, a summer cruise, this week to help the entire ticket. Somehow, money comes in."

DR. JULIAN (additional comments):

"The Julian family always cooperates. This is the secret of our success.

"Nobody likes to part with money however I have not found it difficult to raise money.

"The people know my reputation for honesty and reliability and they're ready, willing and eager to support my campaign for that which is just and right.

"My expenses will be well within the confines of the Corrupt Practices Act.

"I have 120 busses carrying my signs throughout the 4th District and I have contacted them for the General Election.

"But a man can't win with bumper stickers. It's hand-to-hand, door-to-door, person-to-person that gets it."

MR. LAW (additional comments):

"Nobody knows what you go through out here, trying to get elected.

"In the 5th District Pollack put my name on his slate in one area and took it off in another.

"Pollack takes his money and buys the colored vote. It was disgraceful the last time when he got 95 percent of the patronage.

"But, you take our people, they won't even listen. They're asking the colored candidates, why are there so many of you all running? They want to see what kind of signs you have and they have the different Districts all mixed up.

"All I've received is one $20 bill. Yet, there's hardly anything that I have not contributed to in the whole community during my career as a businessman.

"I asked one man to let me put up a sign on his lawn. He said yes.

"By the time I got back with the sign, he said he had changed his mind.

"I've nearly spent out.

"I have mixed emotions after getting out with the people on this campaign. We haven't the spirit to band together and get proper representation.

"I wonder when will we ever learn to take hold and make a contribution to a cause so we can get somewhere?"

Miss Veal was elected to Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities; she is a member of Kappa Mu honor societies. Prometheean Kappa Tau, and a member of Alpha Kappa Soror. She is also an Alpha Kappa Alpha Soror.

Vote for the "Blueprint for Progress" Team!
★ Tom FINAN for Governor
★ Francis 'Bill' BURCH for Attorney General
★ Louis GOLDSTEIN for Comptroller
Our "Blueprint for Progress" offers many things for all the citizens of Maryland
IN EDUCATION
The Finan, Burch, Goldstein team believes that every qualified Maryland youth should have an opportunity to pursue a college education, regardless of his financial status.
We must continue the rapid, but orderly growth of Morgan State, University of Maryland and the State Colleges—Bowie, Coppin, Frostburg, Salisbury, St. Mary's and Towson.
As we increase the capacity of our institutions of higher learning, we should be sure that we are making full use of present facilities. We must consider the possibility of fuller use of buildings in the evening, during the summer, and on Saturday.
STATE PRISONS
The overcrowded and otherwise inadequate City Jail has been the subject of considerable publicity in recent years — as have been the antiquated and outmoded jail facilities in most of the surrounding counties.
We favor the formation of a Metropolitan Detention and Rahabilitation Commission to take over, administer and coordinate a system of specialized institutions with detention orders at the local level. The economies and efficiency of centralized facilities, we believe, are obvious.
ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT
We must obtain jobs for our unemployed citizens. We must find a place in business and industry for our expanded population of the years immediately ahead. We must bring about a favorable business climate that will create new jobs, by attracting new business and encouraging the expansion and growth of our present industries.
SAYS MR. FINAN...
"As Governor, I would feel that the improvement of race relations and greater participation by all minority groups in government is something to which I would give a justifiable priority."

Combine vegetables to create interest

Besides its accumstomed places on the family dinner plate, the versatile vegetable appears in soups, main dishes, salads and snacks.

Most vegetables served alone contain few calories, but added ingredients, such as butter or other fats, can easily boost the caloric content.

Oittimes, combining two or more vegetables can bring new interest to meals.

Here are recipes that combine vegetables that are plentiful on the market at this time.

BROCCOLI - CAULIFLOWER medly is made with a beef - flavored Bouillon cube, a half cup boiling water, two cups broccoli flowerets, a half cup boiling water, two tablespoons lemon juice, a half teaspoon salt and two cups small cauliflowerets.

Dissolve bouillon cube in water. Add broccoli. Simmer just until tender, about five minutes. Drain.

Combine water, lemon juice and salt. Add cauliflowerets. Simmer about five minutes. Drain.

Combine broccoli and cauliflowerets and toss lightly to mix. Serve hot.

Adding lemon juice to the cooking water helps keep cauliflower white, and gives a piquant flavor.

FRIED EGGPLANT and tomatoes require one small eggplant, two firm tomatoes, two teaspoons sugar, a half cup flour, a teaspoon salt, a half teaspoon oregano and fat or oil as needed.

Peel the eggplant and remove ends. Slice eggplant and tomatoes into half - inch slices. Sprinkle sugar over tomatoes. Mix flour, salt and oregano, and dip slices of tomato and eggplant into flour mixture,

Put enough fat into fry pan to just cover the bottom. Heat.

Fry eggplant over moderately high heat until lightly browned on both sides. Remove to platter and keep warm. Fry tomatoes about one minute on each side. Add fat as needed to keep from sticking.

Serve tomato slices on top of eggplant slices.

Miss Ann Todd bride of Frederick Jealous

With Lula Jones Garrett

Lovely Ann Todd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Todd, and Frederick Jealous of Portland, Me., who were married on Saturday, are honeymooning in Florence, Italy, this week.

Their wedding, a nuptial mass at high noon, in Saint Mary's Episcopal Church, Georgetown, was celebrated by the Rev. Fr. Charles E. Miller, rector of Saint Mary's; and the Rev. Fr. Donald O. Wilson, rector of Saint James Episcopal Church, this city.

Edward Jackson was soloist and Miss Lois Pickens, organist.

The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Joan Lipscomb, Best man was Paul Newman of Brookline, Mass. Ushers were Michael Lipscomb and William Jealous.

Given in marriage by her father, Miss Todd wore a gown designed and executed by her grandmother, Mrs. Jerome Todd, Sr.

Mrs. Todd has made the dresses worn on each important occasion by her grandchild, including her elementary and high school graduation frocks and the gown worn when she made her debut at a Me-De-So Cotion, here.

The wedding dress was a basic gown of ivory peau de soie, over which was a floor-length, long sleeve redingote of Chantilly lace. She wore a mantilla of the same lace and carried a prayer book topped with white orchids. The prayer-book was the gift of Mrs. Glen Tartar.

Miss Lipscomb wore an ensemble in hot pink and carried a nosegay of white flowers centered with pink.

A reception was held in the church hall, and later Mr. and Mrs. Todd entertained at a buffet dinner for the bridal party and out-of-town guests at their Longwood St. home here.

For the wedding and reception Mrs. Todd wore a dress of champagne silk. The mother of the bridegroom chose an ensemble in pink.

Mr. Jealous, son of Mrs. Sargent Jealous, Sr. and the late Dr. Jealous, is a graduate of Clark University, and will complete requirements for a Master's Degree at Antioch College in December. He served a teaching apprenticeship, under the Antioch Program, here, last term.

Mrs. Jealous, who did her undergraduate work at American University, Washington, and spent two years in the Peace Corps in the Phillipines, received a Master's Degree in Education at Antioch, this year.

From Italy, the couple will visit in Belgium and spend some time on the French Riviera and in England ere returning to the States.
