calvert St., was dead on arrival, at first diagnosed as due to malnutrition.

An autopsy report showed the baby died of pneumonia, Lt. Roy said.

The twins' mother, Mrs. Teremezia Roberts, told Eastern District police that Charlotte and her sister, Georgette, had been sick.

Police identified the father as Englon Roberts.

MR. POMERLEAU, a South Pacific hero of World War II, feels his association with the radical realignment of the department stands him in good stead as the city's new chief policeman.

Further re - enforcement against the inevitable problems he'll encounter will come from the man he replaced, Mr. Pomerleau told the AFRO.

"It has been a pleasure to work with you," he told Gen. Gelston during the ceremony. "You will be a hard man to follow.

"Fortunately, I will be able to call on you for advice. I intend to do so."

In later comments, the native of Minnesota who entered the service in 1934 and retired two years ago, elaborated on the contribution Gen. Gelston has made to the redirection of the department.

"I'm in complete agreement with and support of the policies inaugurated by Gen. Gelston. They have been responsible for a good beginning on the long and difficult task of reorganizing the force.

"I will continue them, even expand some of them."

According to the new commissioner who accepted the $25,000 job for a term ending June 7, 1972, he will:

* * *

EXPAND THE operations of the newly - created Police Community Relations Division, increase and improve the caliber of training of recruits, and follow through on the acquisition of available Federal Funds to institute intensified in - service training programs.

Commissioner Pomerleau took the oath of office from Supreme Bench Chief Judge Dulany Foster and was presented his gold badge by Gov. J. Millard Tawes.

The most inconspicuous man at the ceremonies attended by high city, state, and police officials, was Gen. Gelston, who was literally dragged into pictures by the battery of photographers who covered the event.

The popular general was asked his reactions to retiring from what has become known as the "hot seat."

"Maybe I can relax a bit more. But I'll be busy trying to find what has happened in the Guard (National) during the past eight months," he smiled.

IN ACKNOWLEDGING credits lavishly heaped on him for "giving Baltimore a Gelston told the AFRO: modern police force," Gen.

"I feel I have made a contribution. However, the role of our new high echelon officers should not be overlooked. My job would have been impossible without their help and that of the community."

none of the residents heard the "act without reason."

Early Tuesday morning a bar down the block was broken into, and police stood on the church corner as late as 3 a.m., so the destruction was done sometime between 3 a.m. and 6 a.m.

"I can't understand that nobody heard them" the pastor said to a group of neighbors Wednesday morning.

"If people let it happen next it will be the homes. Then you'll be afraid to walk out your door," he said.

One man agreed that "its a disgrace to the neighborhood."

ON A suggestion that the same thing often happens to schools, the pastor disagreed noting that "in school a child may be reprimanded and think he's taking it out on the school.

"But that building is a house of God. That building sitting there isn't hurting anyone."

Another man offered that "the Devil told them to do it."

For all their destruction, of great concern to Western District Police, who are closely checking the area, the vandals got less than a dollar in change, which was sealed in along with the papers, left scattered in the rain Tuesday morning.

KEEP GOING —That appears to be the admonition of third base coach Billy Hunter as the Orioles' Frank Robinson heads for home plate after bashing his 47th homer Tuesday at Kansas City. The urge to see Frank "keep going" is spurred in Baltimore by his quest of the triple crown of hitting, home runs and runs batted in, while pacing the Birds toward the American League pennant.

BLACK HAT — As the saying goes, the "good guys" where white hats. In Baltimore, the Detroit Tigers' Willie Horton is a bad guy —he wears a black hat. It was Willie's a - run homer with 2 out in the 9th that gave the Tigers a 2 - 1 win over the Angels Wednesday, to prolong Baltimore's clinching of the American League pennant.

ices are needed," Rosenstein said.

"How about the courts? It would seem that if the courts could enforce integration in schools, they could force a union local to discontinue discriminating against colored in an area where their livelihood is concerned.'

"But, not so. A Federal Court has ruled that a labor union local is like a club and has a right to admit or reject anyone they choose for any reason. And that ruling has never been appealed to the Supreme Court.

"How about the liberal union leadership who have strongly supported civil rights and have made common cause with colored leadership in backing 'liberal candidates for public office? Union leaders say that they can do nothlocals.

"There is no more liberal union in the labor movement than the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. The Amalgamated has colored members, but in Baltimore, they are segregated in colored locals.

"Recently a propspering Baltimore manufacturing company needed additional workers. Although there were union colored workers who needed jobs, they were not members of that particular union and could not be employed. Instead, the union imported workers from a foreign country, admitted them to the local and filled the jobs.

Rosenstein declared:

"Undoubtedly the top labor leaders are sincere when they claim that they do not have the power to prevent this cruelest kind of discrimination - economic discrimination by their own locals.

"So I propose to give them that power, and I propose to do so in the manner in which they themselves have chosen.

"I propose that Section 14B of Taft-Hartley be repealed provided that every local union must accept any worker who can fill the job and who has been hired by the company. This is a real 'right to work law' that is within the framework of union philosophy, 'every worker who benefits by the pay and working conditions secured by union activity is obligated to join the union and support the union with his dues.' However, any worker who is willing to join the union must be accepted."
