Bullet fans are urged to join hex on Royals

The Bullets have issued an appeal to their fans to join them in a massive effort to help sway the good spirits to their side in a slump-breaking game against Cincinnati at the Civic Center tonight (Friday).

Every rabbit's foot they could find in Baltimore has been bought up by the Bullet management—thousands of them. These will be given out free at the game by Playboy Bunnies, Dolly, Holly, Jackie and Jade.

THE FANS have been invited to bring their own good luck charms, too. Voodoo dolls, four-leaf clovers and horseshoes are welcome. Some of the fans bringing the most original good-luck charms will be given prizes by the Bullets.

The Red Shield Indian Dancers will make a ceremonial appearance and will perform their colorful Mountain Spirit Dance aimed at dispelling the evil forces who have adopted the Bullets, and cast them upon the Royals.

THIS WILL be Buddy Jeannette's first home appearance since he took over as coach of the Bullets for the third time in his career.

The Bullets, led by Gus Johnson's 20.9 scoring average and the improving play of LeRoy Ellis and Don Ohl, will have their hands full—the help of the good - luck charms not-with-standing—in attempting to contain Oscar Robertson, Jerry Lucas and the rest of the starstudded Royals cast.

CITY VS. CALVERT HALL:

Neutral coaches take look at MSA championship tilt

lost to City and Calvert Hall—are to be accepted as authoritative.

Roy Cragway's Douglass eleven sustained a shocking 64-6 beating at the hands of Calvert Hall, and lost a 22-0 decision to City College. Augie Waibel's Edmondson outfit was turned back, 12-6, by the Cardinals, and 8-0 by the Collegians.

"IT LOOKS very much like a tossup to me," Cragway told the AFRO Thursday. "Both use the same offense and both have outstanding leadership in quarterback.

"Rich Stern of Calvert Hall, is the one quarterback in the conference to match City's Curt Schmoke, if one is to be found. Both boys make their offenses go. But I think Calvert Hall plays the better defense.

"Calvert Hall is not as good City College and Calvert Hall meet tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon at Kirk Field with the "A" Division championship of the Maryland Scholastic Association up for grabs.

All indications point to a close, hard-fought ball game with victory going to the team which gets the breaks.

Both are unbeaten for the season, both are well-drilled in fundamentals and both have the winning attitude. If each plays his best game, the outcome figures to be a tossup.

THAT IS the gist of things. If the views of two neutral coaches—both of whom have as that 64-6 against us makes them appear. We were coming off a hard game and were hurting both physically and in experience. They're good, but not that good. City's margin (22-0) is closer to reality.

"As I see it," the Douglass tutor concluded, "it figures to go to the team that gets the breaks."

REGARDING THE matter of "breaks," Waibel is in complete agreement.

"If I were to give an edge, it probably would go to City," said the Edmondson coach. "We were able to move better against Calvert Hall than we were against City, and City seems to have the better overall speed.

"HOWEVER, IT is likely that both are going to make mistakes, and I'm inclined to think that the team which capitalizes best on its breaks will win.

"It could come on a blocked punt, a poor kickoff, a lost fumble or a pass interception. I look for some sort of break like this to decide the issue," Waibel added.

WHILE GILMAN School also is unbeaten in MSA play, the City-Calvert Hall clash looms as the title contest since these two have dominated what is generally acknowledged to be the stronger of the two divisions.

Aside from Douglass and Edmondson, the two rivals have played a third common foe in Mt. St. Je.

The Collegians downed the Saints, 58-0. The Cardinal bulge over the same team was 39-0. . . .SAM LACY.

Williams match for Clay in word battle at scales

HOUSTON (UPI) —Challenger Cleveland (Big Cat) Williams took heavyweight champion Cassius Clay's best verbal jabs and went one better when they met face-to-face and fist-to-fist at a preliminary weigh-in Wednesday.

Clay weighed 200 and Williams 216, but that was incidental as the talkative Clay was his old self at a weighin for the first time since he fought Floyd Patterson.

CLAY and Williams meet for the world heavyweight title in the Houston Domed Stadium, Monday night.

The fight will be seen on closed-circuit TV in Washington at National Guard Armory and in Baltimore at the Civic Center. Action is slated to begin at 10:00 p.m.

After they weighed, Clay came up to the challenger, squared off and said, "Hold your fists up, Cat."

Clay playfully slapped Williams' huge left fist and faked a couple of punches as Williams grinned.

CLAY TRIED intermittently to frighten, stare, talk and finally to beg Williams into submission, but the challenger handled him like a Rhodes Scholar.

"I'm out to get you, Cat," Clay said in a parting shot. "I can't let you have my title. You must let me keep my title. That's right. We must wait until Monday. We'll have to sweat it out."

"You sweat, not me," Williams replied, standing on the scale and looking down at the champion.

A CROWD of 100 in a downtown ballroom roared with laughter.

Clay, after conferring with Angelo Dundee and other seconds, had walked up to Williams as they waited for a tardy Texas Boxing Commission.

"Do you believe you can beat me?" Clay whispered to Williams.

"I do," Williams said, looking down and not flinching at the staring Clay.

"DO YOU really believe you can beat me? I'm the greatest. I'm the fastest, you can't touch me," Clay continued.

Clay threw out his chest and Williams stuck a forefinger and pushed it into Clay's chest.

"I'm going to touch you," Williams said.

"Do you know I'm the greatest? Do you know I've retired everybody?" Clay continued.

"You won't retire me," Williams retorted calmly.

"I've got the fastest guns in the world," Clay said.

"I DON'T care how fast you are. I carry two guns myself," said Williams, who was wearing a ten-gallon hat.

"Will you be there?" Clay asked.

"Name the time," Williams replied.

"I beat the Bear (Sonny Liston) and the Hare' Patterson) and I can beat the Cat," Clay boasted. "All cats do is scratch, I never get scratches."

"This cat is going to scratch you," Williams said quickly.

Buffalo fullback nation's top scorer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Buffalo's Leeland Jones, who ranked 23rd in scoring two weeks ago, scored seven touchdowns in the Bull's last two games to lead today in the major college point race.

Jones has scored 78 points while Ken Hebert of Houston, and Jim Bohl of New Mexico State are tied with 70 points each.

MICHIGAN'S Jack Clancy leads the nation in pass receiving with 67 catches for 932 yards. Jim Beirne of Purdue is second with 53 grabs for 650 yards and Glenn Meltzer of Wichita, is third with 53 for 605 yards.

Jerry Depoyster of Wyoming is the highest scoring kicking specialist with 53 points. Doug James of Princeton leads in punt returns with 20 for 330 yards. Marcus Rhoden of Mississippi State.

JONES' coach Richard (Doc) Urich is high in praise of his 5-10, 202-pound junior workhorse.

"He has been the fellow we've been able to call on whenever short yardage has been needed," Urich says. "Giving the ball to Lee is not considered a gamble by us."

THE AMAZING thing about Jones, who is known to his many cousins in Baltimore as Tony, is that he entered the University of Buffalo with a background of never having started a game throughout his career at Buffalo's Hutchinson Tech High School.

He had his first taste of a starting assignment in the Bulls' second game of the 1965 season. They never got him out of the regular job.

After leading the team in rushing with 531 yards in 115 carries for a 4.5 average, Lee was voted UB's most valuable offensive back of the '65 campaign.

Dallas trouble for Redskins

Before the Redskins is the disquieting prospect that they will be only 5-5 after Sunday afternoon's clash with the Dallas Cowboys, who are expected to be angry after last Sunday's loss to Philadelphia.

The underdog Philly Eagles were outclassed all day, offensively, but won the game on the strength of record 93 and 90-yard kickoff runbacks by Timmy Brown and a 65-yard interception run.

Meanwhile, the Baltimore Colts were pushing around the skins 37-10. Baltimore needed the victory to go one-half game behind the conference leading Green Bay Packers, who were upset.

A loss to the Skins could be fatal to the Cowboys, who are just a hair behind the St. Louis Cardinals, who top the Eastern Conference with a 7-1-1 record.

Dallas can be expected to play the same type of rugged game as the Colts: try to make a shambles of Washington's pass defense and keep the rush on quarterback Sonny Jurgensen.

Old Taylor Presents: Ingenious Americans

#19 in a series

Jan Matzeliger (1852-1889)

His invention made Lynn, Mass., the shoe capital of the world

When Jan Matzeliger first went to work in a Lynn, Massachusetts, shoe factory, he was surprised to learn that just one shoe took hours to complete.

He discovered the reason for this was the laborious process by which hand lasters painstakingly pleated the leather and fitted uppers to soles.

Matzeliger couldn't believe that in the year 1877 a way couldn't be found to do the lasting job by machine. And so, on his own time, he began to experiment with ideas on how this might be done.

He started out by renting a room over the old West Lynn Mission. There, using scraps of wood, old cigar boxes and improvised tools, he fashioned models of his idea. Finally, when he felt that he was on the right track, he used an old forge to mold the gears and cams that went into his working model.

His invention was an immediate success. Its adoption created thousands of new jobs for an operation that had been limited to a few craftsmen. Shoe prices were cut in half, and wages doubled. Within a short time, exports jumped from 1,000,000 to 11,000,000 pair a year. And Lynn, Massachusetts, had become the world's largest shoe manufacturing center. All because Jan Ernst Matzeliger had invented the first lasting machine.

Unbeaten Morgan rated Tangerine Bowl prospect

ORLANDO, Fla.,—For the second straight year, Morgan State College is under consideration for a berth in the Tangerine Bowl post-season football game.

The game is scheduled to be played here on Dec. 11.

According to an announcement late this week by the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA), the Bears of Baltimore are one of three undefeated teams in consideration for the annual affair.

Also in the running are Waynesburg State College and Randolph-Macon.

OTHER TEAMS which have not been ruled out of the picture, according to the NCAA, are Temple University, Vermont, West Chester State College and Central Connecticut.

Temple and Vermont are 6-1 on the year. West Chester and Connecticut are 7-1.

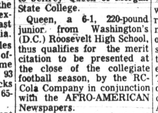
IN ITS announcement, the NCAA takes cognizance of the fact that Morgan, Temple and Massachusetts loom as the strongest candidates, despite the loss of two games (both to major colleges) by the latter.

The Bears were among six finalists under consideration for the Tangerine Bowl last fall.

Massachusetts was subsequently selected, and the Bears accepted an invitation to the Orange Blossom Classic at Miami, where they took the measure of highly-touted Florida A and M.

RC Cola AFRO PLAYER-OF-THE-WEEK



MORGAN'S JEFFREY QUEEN

BALTIMORE — Recognition as the "player-of-the-week" in Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association competition goes than week to Jeffrey Queen of Morgan State College.

Queen, a 6-1, 220-pound junior, from Washington's (D.C.) Roosevelt High School, thus qualifies for the merit citation to be presented at the close of the collegiate football season, by the RC-Cola Company in conjunction with the AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers.

Queen was a standout in a Morgan defense that thwarted a previously strong Hampton Institute attack and enabled the Bears to rack up their sixth win in an unbeaten season.

Although the 69-0 score would suggest that the Pirates were completely overmatched, it was Queen's offense which boasts two of sponsibility to help blunt an the top backs in the conference in Sandy Bowers and Ed Tomlin. This he did, frequently, smessing the Buccaneer play before it started. And for his efforts, Queen was awarded the game ball by Morgan coach Earl Banks.

Harlem Park Rec Center seeks basketball players

New players are wanted for the boys' and girls' basketball leagues at Harlem Park Recreation Center.

Volleyball and tumbling are being offered to girls who are interested.

Weightlifting Classes will be held on Monday and Wednesday evenings.

Recently, outstanding athletes of the Center were honored at the 3rd Annual Sports Award Night.

Trophies were presented to winning teams by Joseph E. Lee, former YMCA Boys' Work Secretary.

Red Shield Boys' Club Director, John E. Jowers, was guest speaker.

Other participants were J. E., Boston, program chairman; and J. A. Faulkner, director.
