Jewish body praises joint efforts, decries slogan use

CLEVELAND — Mounting public concern over black power and white backlash has obscured quiet but genuine progress toward colored-Jewish cooperation and understanding, the American Jewish Congress reports.

Rabbi Arthur J. Lelyveld of Cleveland, national president of the congress, summed up a series of reports from throughout the country to the congress policy-making National Governing Council, meeting here, with the comment:

"More Jewish and colored people are working together on common projects than at any time in our nation's history.

"In economic aid programs to help family-heads become self-supporting; in remedial reading and tutorial programs for school children; in campaigns for civil rights and welfare legislation and in exchanging home visits, new and enduring relationships have been created.

• • •

RABBI LELYVELD said Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and Bayard Rustin, had protested "eloquently and vigorously" the cultural and religious discrimination against Soviet Jews.

The NAACP, he said, had filed a friend - of - the - court brief supporting Jewish Congress charges of job discrimination by the Arabian American Oil Company against Jewish applicants.

Leaders of both groups long ago recognized that the problems of discrimination and segregation will be solved only when solutions are found for society as a whole." Rabbi Lelyveld declared.

"Now this realization is increasingly shared by the men-in-the-street. Both are working together, in greater numbers and more ways than ever before, out of growing recognition that freedom and equality are indivisible."

"The American Jewish Congress leader charged that the phrase "black power" had been "exploited by extremists and sensationalized in the mass media.

• • •

"IN ITS initial, responsible use," he said, "black power" meant an understandable surge of self-affirmation.

"It declared black men must shape their own destiny, that the masses must no longer rely on the beneficence of friendly whites or on the mediation of those few who had 'made it' into the middle class. It said that 'black' was 'good.'

"The American Jewish Congress was founded on comparable principles.

"It was built on the determination that Jewish self-respect and militancy would use the ballot and forces of law to achieve human rights. Fighting against Jewish self-hatred, it taught that 'Jewish' meant 'good.' "

Hampton $ drive aimed at U.S. guilt

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Dr. Jerome H. Holland, president of Hampton (Va.) Institute, brought his school's $18 - million fund - raising drive here Tuesday with a plea for elimination of a "tragedy on our national conscience."

Holland told his audience of businessmen and civic leaders that only 250,000 colored students are in institutions of higher learning in this country. "This is a terrible plight," he said, "a tragedy on our national conscience."

• • •

HOLLAND SAID "despite the talk of Black Power" the colored citizen wants to become an assimilated part of the American scene, and that he must have more education to do so.

"To many youths . . . the future is promising for those who are prepared," he said. "But the colored youth without training faces very serious problems.

Hampton's $18 million goal is the highest ever attempted by a colored college.

"If we fail," Holland said, "The repercussions on all similar schools will be great. We certainly would face a very bleak future."

IT'S NOT ONLY security that the government has to offer, there's work that can be interesting and exciting, Morgan State College students were told this week. Outlining some of the benefits here is Mrs. Rose Robinson of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's regional office in Charlottesville, Va. She's from Baltimore.

ABOUT 80 RECRUITERS from various government agencies participated Tuesday in Morgan State College's second annual federal career conference. An estimated 1,000 students received information about career opportunities. Here junior math major Claudia Stevens who has been offered summer job talks with John Pennington of Langley Research Center.

Neighborhood Youth Corps helps MSC, prep students

The new Neighborhood Youth Corps In-School Program is helping 26 Morgan State College students to stay in school as they in turn help keep hundreds of other youngsters from becoming high school drop-outs.

The Youth Corps, a project of the Community Action Agency and the Baltimore Public Schools, pays good salaries both to high school and college students. Its offices are in Dunbar High School, Caroline and McElderry Sts.

The Morgan students, who are group leaders, help high school students become adjusted to work. Their job is to help the younger students solve problems, counsel them, understand their needs and check daily to see if they are at work.

If a youngster doesn't show up for work, the Morganite must take time to call the home by phone or make a house visit.

• • •

WILLIAM ROSS, coordinator of the program, explained that the purpose of the work-training project is to provide useful work experience for employed young men and women from low income families.

Assistant coordinators are Mrs. Helen M. Chamberlain, who is in charge of office management and payroll, and Joseph A. Valle, operations guidance counselor.

Working with Mrs. Chamberlain is Morgan accounting major and senior, Allen Eason, who Mr. Ross called "one of the best."

Grove McCrae whose job is to "Develop Jobs" has high school students working in the nutrition department at Provident Hospital checking information for the computer, answering the telephone and feeding facts into the computer. They also work with diet aides.

• • •

THEY SERVE as clerical help at the State Office Building, as stock room clerks in the Internal Revenue Service, as library aides at Enoch Pratt and as tutors in Community Action Agencies.

At Johns Hopkins Hospital they are in the Central Supply Department as sterilizer operators and take care of such equipment as suction pumps. They also may prepare trays for surgery.

You'll find those youngsters at the National Conference of Christians and Jews, at most recreation centers in the city, at United Appeal Headquarters, Maternity and Infant Care Centers, City Hospitals, and most public schools.

Each group leader is assigned 18 or 20 high school enrollees and it is his or her job to keep up with them. The college students work under four group leader advisers who work full time at the agency.

They are Miss Sandra Davis, Jules Dorner, Miss Delores Johnson and David Tucker. Each adviser has 10-15 college students in a group.

The college student may work 10-15 hours a week while the high school student about 10 hours per week. He or she must be 16 through 21 years of age.

All principals and counselors of junior and senior high schools in the city have information regarding the program from Sidney Chernak, assistant superintendent of schools.

Two Southern senators laud Sen. Brooke

BOSTON, — The voters of this state, last Tuesday overwhelmingly elected Edward Brooke to represent them in Washington as the Senator from Massachusetts.

Two Southern senators made the following statement upon hearing the Brooke's victory:

Sen. John Sparkman, D.-Ala., said, Brooke "was elected by the voters of Massachusetts. Under the constitution every state is entitled to two senators. It's up to the people of each state to elect who they please for senators. I don't see that there is any other question to it."

Newly elected Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-SC, said, "people of Massachusetts showed their preference at the ballot box and he doesn't think of Brooke any different from any other senator."

The senator said he doesn't know Brooke personally, but thinks he will be an effective politician. "The people of Massachusetts obviously think this," he said.

Rapist gets new hearing

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — A Spartanburg County man awaiting the electric chair for his conviction of raping a 14 - year - old white babysitter, was granted a rehearing Wednesday by the State Supreme Court.

The court ruled that a confession obtained from Frank Cannon was the product of an illegal search and seizure and, as such, may not have been voluntary.

The court ordered the case returned to Spartanburg County, where a hearing must be held on the voluntariness of the confession.

If it is found that the statement by Cannon was voluntary, he will be resentenced. If the statement is ruled invalid, Cannon will be given a new trial.

Police records show that the babysitter was taken from a house, beaten, stripped and then raped.
