Chic Set dances, breakfasts at break-of-the- season party

With Lula Jones Garrett

As if to not miss a jot of what they knew was in store for them, guests arrived practically on the dot for the AGNN's party at Eastwind Saturday night.

And they were not only arriving from hereabouts . . . they came from Washington (quite a batch of 'em), from Pennsylvania, from New Jersey, from indeed, Paris, what with Dr. Nathan Pitts having barely had time to unpack from his last jaunt to France.

The Douglass Hendersons were here from Philadelphia, she a charmer in berry red velvet. The Earl Smiths of Teaneck, and the Payne Taylors from Tobyhanna, were Mary Smalley's guests from Pennsylvania. The Biddy Woods (from all over) were back . . . she (Singer Damita Jo) as chic as a picture in jet-trimmed white satin. Washingtonians there included the Charles Prices, Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Standard, the John Pinkards, Charles Wortman, Connie Harrison and the Michel Turpeaus.

Hellena Edmond's crystal paved electric blue gown was an eye-filler. She wore it, as well as the coat which matched, with swerve. And a silver and blue brocade worn by Mrs. Charlie Burns along with an intriguing hair dress streaked with blond.

Elegance was the term for the black number worn by Gwendolyn Seaborne. Diagonally cut so that the skirt slanted from knee-length at front to heel-length at back. And Marie Hicks' white gown was a tunic affair of moire silk. Catherine Adams was wearing silver-threaded green, which she stitched up herself. She fetched the material from France when she was doing Europe recently. The Bill Garners danced together the whole evening (she was wearing a soft pastel pale rose crepe) as if they were inventing a new version of the frug. Stately Hermione Weaver should live in an environment where evening clothes is the going mode. She does such things to formal wear. Her beautiful brown, Saturday night, was of blue lace, starkly fitted in the front and madly swirling at the back. Odessa Dyson's perfect-seven figure was swarthed in silver pellets . . . the top molded and the skirt swirling. She added silver shoes. Intended to be about, but missing was Helen Burwell. She was in traction mending a disc.

The guests danced in the intimate space within the circle of tables; drifted back and forth the buffet, where a variety to bors d'oeuvres were served; table-hopped or sat and chatted over drinks. Came morning, and they cleared tables to serve a breakfast.

THE COOPERATIVE Women's Civic League, meeting with Sarah Rayne, made plans for a plaque to be placed under the painting of the founder, Mrs. Sarah Fernandis, in Fellowship House. That was in October.

Meeting Saturday in the home of Beatrice Pitts, they did an even more satisfying thing. They placed a check for $1,000 in the hands of Mrs. Charles Tildon as the payment on their pledge to the Provedent Hospital Development fund. The money was raised under the leadership of Mrs. Ethel Harris, former president; Mrs. Rosa Jackson, president of the Pimlico branch; Mrs. Celia Crawford, president of the East Baltimore branch and Mrs. Naomi Camper, current president of the League.

ON SUNDAY, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Martin Lee gave a birthday party for their daughter, Jacqueline Agnes (Her birthday was actually Tuesday, November 15.) For her party Jacqueline wore a white and yellow outfit with pleated skirt. The children enjoyed a beautifully decorated white and pink-frosted cake, the top of which depicted a circus Big-Top.

The guests were:

Mrs. Lorraine Allen and son, George; Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Brown and sons, Keith and Jesse; Mr. and Mrs. Hyder Cousar and daughters, Yvette and Lynette; Mrs. Beverly Crawley and daughter, Tanya.

Also on hand to help celebrate the baby's second birthday were Mrs. Mary A. Cooper, her grandmother and Mrs. Dorothy Dorsey, her aunt. During the festivities Jacqueline received a surprise telephone call from her Godparents in Portchester, New York, Mr. and Mrs. Bartholamew Aberdeen.

NEW GROUP in the making . . . Ida Smith called together a group of friends . . . all former Jack and Jillers to discuss plans for their own activities now that their children are grown. Since that meeting a Saturday afternoon ago, . . . calls have come in from Springfield, Mass.; Philadelphia and Buffalo, N.Y. to be let in the group after it is formally set up. Blanche Hughes is acting president at the moment; Mamie Woodford, secretary; and Elsie Robinson, treasurer; Ida Smith, organizer.

Also about were Vera Williams and Evelyn Bass.

THE WE WIVES met with Margaret Armstrong on Sunday . . . folks are still raving about her rare roast beef . . . Margaret being an excellent cook.

The fraternity was established in 1911 at the University of Illinois. Mrs. Byrd is a supervisor of English in Charleston's school system . . . the wife of Charles R. Bryd, who is state supervisor of audio-visual education in West Virginia.

In Baltimore, last week, one new member taken into the No-Name Club was Charles Hicks, Frederick, Md. mortician.

And, incidentally, the Baltimore Guardsmen's new member was Charles Tildon, not Charles Tilghman.

Dr. Lois Young, who has been at the Hopkins, here, is now on the staff of Freedmen's in Washington.

Pork a good buy for holiday meal

By VIRGINIA McLUCKIE
Food Economist

It is time to flip another page on the calendar, but regardless of the season and the many extra places to use money, homemakers are expected to provide nourishing meals every day.

It will pay any time of the year but especially now to plan your market order and take it with you to the market. With an inventory of food supplies at hand, check the advertised specials and plan menus for the week.

* * *

YOU CANNOT hope to manage completely on the specials, but many of the major foods can be worked into meals pleasing to your family. With careful shopping, you can save many a cent to a total dollars.

While you are arm - chair planning for shopping, get out the recipes for cookies and other holiday baked products you will be making. It is a good practice to portion out the ingredient buying over several weeks to hold the weekly grocery bill in line.

* * *

THIS IS the reason for more ample supplies of pork on the market. The trend to lean-meat type hogs is continuing so the pork you buy today is leaner and has a larger portion of lean to fat and bone. Since most hogs are marketed under one year of age, the tenderness of meat is no problem.

Pork is not graded like beef for this reason. Regardless of the cut of fresh pork you select, the lean should be a uniform grayish-pink color with a smooth velvety texture. The outside fat should be firm and white. Store pork in the coldest part of your refrigerator.

* * *

REMOVE THE store wrapping and cover it loosely to allow air to circulate over the surface to keep it colder and to prevent spoilage. Fresh pork should be used within a couple of days. Pork should always be cooked well done regardless of the cooking method employed.

Cured pork and pork products which are cooked will have a longer refrigerated storage life of up to a week. Investigate some of the half-loin specials because the meat will provide a roast, chops, and possibly small pieces for a pork pot pie, or pork chow mein.

* * *

OTHER SUGGESTED meats are chuck roasts and steaks, ground beef, and fryer chickens.

Tuna Loaf with sauce

A tasty and satisfying dish for luncheon or supper is Tuna Loaf with Horseradish Sauce.

This loaf is made with three eggs, separated, one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon poultry seasoning, dash pepper, dash tumeric, optional, three-fourths cup milk, two cups soft bread crumbs, one-fourth cup finely diced celery, one-fourth cup finely diced green pepper, two tablespoons chopped onion, one tablespoon butter or margarine, three cans (6½ or 7 ounces each) tuna drained and finely flaked and horseradish sauce.*

BEAT EGG yolks with seasonings; stir in milk and crumbs. Cook celery, green pepper and onion in butter until crisp - tender; about 3 minutes; stir into crumb mixture with tuna. Whip egg whites until stiff but not dry.

Fold into tuna mixture. Turn into well - buttered or foil - lined 8x8x2-inch loaf pan. Bake in 350 degree F. (moderate) oven 1 to 1¼ hours, or until a knife inserted in center comes out clean. Garnish with crisp French fried potatoes and watercress. Serve with Horseradish Sauce.

To prepare Horseradish Sauce: Makes about 2-½ cups). In saucepan blend one - fourth cup flour, one - half teaspoon salt and dash pepper into one - fourth cup butter, melted. Gradually stir in two cups milk. Stirring constantly, bring to boil; boil one minute. Stir in two tablespoons chopped pimiento, one tablespoon each: horseradish, capers and lemon juice. Serve hot.
