'Economics of Viet Nam' is Sat. topic

Professor Terrence McCarthy of Columbia University will speak on "The Economic Consequences of Viet Nam: Alternatives to the Garrison Economy," at Emmanuel Church, Cathedral and Read Sts., Saturday, Dec. 3 at 8:15 p.m.

Sponsored by SANE, the Baltimore Committee for a Sane Nulear Policy, the program is open to the public and refreshments will be served.

FIGHT PROMOTER — If Jean Wilson of Detroit, has her way, the Cassius Clay-Ernie Terrell heavyweight title fight will be held under her aegis in the Motor City. Mrs. Wilson and backers have reportedly offered Clay an estimated quarter-million dollars to defend crown at Detroit's Olympia Stadium, Feb. 6.

Kasoff to head March of Dimes

Harvey C. Kasoff, president, Key Wine and Liquor Co., has been reappointed chairman of the brewery and liquor committee of the March of Dimes January appeal for fund to fight birth defects.

Richard M. Patterson, chairman of the business and industry division, said Mr. Kasoff will direct the drive in the city and Baltimore County.

Age no barrier as pupils from 55-80 go to classes

By ROGER J. NISSLY

Fifteen senior citizens, from 55 to 80 years old, are going back to school in a weekly basis at the Latrobe Homes to learn the things, like reading and arithmetic, that they missed out on as children.

The sessions, held every Monday from 1 to 3 p.m. in the lounge of the project at 900 E. Madison St., are similar to those being held for 400 people in Neighborhood Study Groups under funds from the Federal government.

The project is essentially one that "goes where the people are," with 27 programs scattered throughout the city.

• • •

BASIC Education for Adults was authorized under Title 2-B of the Economic Opportunity Act and is funded on a 90-10 basis by the government to the State Department of Education, which passes the money on to the local school system for administering the project.

According to Mrs. Norma J. Moore, associate and specialist with Baltimore's Adult Education Division and director of the program, "we supply all the teachers and materials and are then reimbursed."

Out of a requested $318,000, the project has received approval for a budget of $144,000.

Besides the Neighborhood Study Groups, the project supplies basic education for 300 students in the experience program and Welfare Department's work produces an early - morning television program, "Learning to Read," with a mailing list of 2,000 viewers.

The adults in the program range in age from 18 to the senior citizens, and in a few cases "we will take people if they are 16 and out of school," Mrs. Moore said.

• • •

ONE SUCH program aimed at the younger students was organized by a street worker of the Recreation Bureau and is held at Morningstar Baptist Church. Its goal is the completion of a high school diploma for the students and a job.

The ages of most participants range all the way up to 80, but Mrs. Moore said the average age is in the middle 20's.

She pointed out that each class in the neighborhood groups is "tailor made" for those who attend and that the limit on the classes is 15 members.

Classes thus range all the way from the first elements of reading up to high school equivalency classes.

Mrs. Moore said some classes have begun "with as few as two members, wherever there is the need, but we expect them to build up."

One class that met daily at Unity Methodist Church, Edmondson Ave. and Stricker St., is an extension of the summer Neighborhood School for Parents held successfully at Harlem Park Junior High School.

At least two of the classes, in operation since October, cater to the needs of senior citizens — the one at Latrobe taught by Mrs. Willie Knight of the Department of Education and one at Lexington - Poe Homes.

In these classes, Mrs. Moore said, the members come "to learn to read for the first time, or just for something to do."
