No teachers rush to join white group

NEW ORLEANS — (NPI) — There seems to be no big rush upon the part of the members of the Louisiana Education Association to join the white counterpart, the Louisiana Teachers Association, following their removal of the racial bars and the permission for colored teachers to join.

following the Summerhill incident.

U.S. CIRCUIT Court of Tuttle and U.S. District Judges Frank A. Hooper and Sidney Smith Jr. did not outlaw the insurrection statute but cited earlier court decisions that such statutes are unconstitutional.

The three judges said Carmichael and SNCC failed to prove the city intended to persecute them or silence the civil rights organization. They ruled that the language in the city's ordinance is considerably broader than "that which was condemned by the Supreme Court" in earlier decisions.

The tribunal further ruled that the ordinance too readily permits law enforcement officers "to make a crime out of what is protected" by the U.S. Constitution, such as freedom of speech.

Atlanta was given 60 days to enact a constitutional ordinance.

Ghana demotes tribal chiefs

ACCRA, Ghana (UPI) — Ghana's military government Tuesday, withdrew recognition from 194 tribal chiefs it claimed were given powers by deposed President Kwame Nkrumah. Another 138 chiefs were reduced to junior status.

A decree said all had been elevated by Nkrumah for political reasons.

Row over Kennedy book up to court

Mrs. John F. Kennedy will go to court by the end of the week to block publication—perhaps forever — of her hand-picked historian's "official" book about President Kennedy's assassination, charging breach of faith and contract and invasion of privacy.

The former First Lady's relationship with Author William Manchester, which began in trust and with the blessing of the entire Kennedy family, ended Wednesday in anger and disillusion.

Mrs. Kennedy issued a rare statement voicing her feelings and had one of the members of the law firm representing her hold a news conference to detail her complaints.

By moving swiftly to obtain a temporary injunction against Manchester and his publishers in state Supreme Court, Mrs. Kennedy hopes to keep the first installment of a Look Magazine version of "The Death of the President" off the news stands Jan. 10 and prevent publication of the book by Harper and Row next April.

Her spokesman, who asked that his name not be used, said there was no guarantee the book ever would be published.

INFORMED sources said she was particularly upset because Manchester pictured some of the Kennedy family as regarding President Johnson with disdain and she felt this might have a backlash effect on Sen. Robert F. Kennedy's political career.

The Senator, however, has said he will do nothing to prevent the book's publication.

THE NEW YORK TIMES said Wednesday the part of the book which Mrs. Kennedy strongly objects to "reflected the distaste some of the Kennedys felt for President Johnson," The Times quoted a New York Democrat close to Senator Robert F. Kennedy as follows:

"The unedited version of the book, he said, depicted Mr. Johnson as boorish He said that, in describing the air trip from Dallas to Washington after the assassination Mr. Manchester had indicated that Mr. Johnson had not shown respect for Mrs. Kennedy's feelings.

"The source also said that, because the book might be regarded as the official Kennedy family version of the assassination, it could create insurmountable tension between the Johnson and Kennedy political alliances."

MRS. KENNEDY'S statement indicated that she regarded the conversations she had with Mr. Manchester as private. The Times quoted the source as saying "The Kennedys fear that the book will be so anti-Johnson as to be damaging to Bob."

Meanwhile, Harper and Row, publishers of the book, also issued a statement which said it "has done its utmost to comply with the wishes of the Kennedy family and deeply regrets their present attitude.

The Harper and Row statement, although it did not say so specifically, made it clear that the firm also planned to go ahead with publication of the Manchester book.

WILLIAM ATTWOOD, editor-in-chief of Cowles Communications Inc., said in a statement, that he agreed to a request from Mrs. Kennedy last August that the Look serialization be postponed so as not to occur during the anniversary of the Presidents Assassination.

Attwood also said Look had agreed to cut the serialization from the seven planned to four at Mrs. Kennedy's request.

1,800 Witnesses to convene here at the Coliseum

Eighteen hundred Jehovah's Witnesses are expected to convene at the Coliseum on Friday, Dec. 23, to begin their regular semi-annual convention according to Robert G. Holmes, circuit director of Jehovah's Witnesses in the Baltimore and suburban area.

The opening session on Friday evening will feature a model ministry school that teaches public speaking.

One highlight of the Saturday program will be a baptism of new ministers.

Other highlights of the assembly will be two films, "Heritage," presented on Friday evening; "God Cannot Lie" presented on Saturday evening and the day afternoon by J. W. Filson on the subject, "Satisfying Mankind's Greatest Need".

Filson of New York, will be the key speaker during the three-day assembly. All sessions of the assembly are free, and open to the public.
