Terrell calls Clay 'clown,' Cassius likes him 'brave'

HOUSTON (UPI) — Ernie Terrell predicted Wednesday Cassius Clay would be a "very disappointed young man after their heavyweight title fight Feb. 6, in the Astrodome.

But Clay said he was glad Terrell had confidence because he did not want any excuses after the fight.

"You got one guy here in town who is a mental problem, "Terrell said "when he is around people, he likes to act what he is — a clown. "I don't understand him. I don't intend to. I'll just beat him."

• • •

TERRELL, the World Boxing Association (WBA) champion, said Clay was doing all the talking but he would have "15 million miles of bad road" ahead of him when he stepped into the ring.

"Clay is not the champ in actuality," Terrell said. "I won the title and then defended it twice. His key fights have been against men who were past their prime."

BUT CLAY was unimpressed.

"I'll leave it up to him to figure out what he's going to say after he gets up off the floor," Clay said.

"I want no complaints about a sore back, about a sore arm or from somebody else about old age," he said.

"There were excuses for (Sonny) Liston, (Floyd) Patterson, the Big Cat (Cleveland Williams) and some others. I want no excuses after this annihilation.

Wilt reported eyeing ownership of new team

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — A group of spokesmen met here Wednesday to discuss formation of a new professional basketball league and one report said Wilt Chamberlain will defect from the National Basketball Association to become part-owner of the New York franchise in the projected circuit.

The Los Angeles Herald - Examiner said Chamberlain, star of the NBA's Philadelphia 76ers, will become 30 percent owner of the New York franchise and has been signed to a $250,000 - a - year contract for an unspecified number of years.

• • •

SPORTSWRITER Merv Harris said "earnest money" of $50,000 has been paid to the league's central fund by groups representing eight cities — Anaheim, Calif.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Minneapolis, Oakland, Calif.; Houston, Tex.; Dallas, Louisville, Ky. and New York. Four other cities were said to be represented.

The principals were not talking for publication. One member of the Anaheim group was contacted at the Beverly Hilton Hotel where the meeting supposedly was taking place. He would not even admit that such a meeting was in progress.

• • •

THE HERALD - EXAMINER said the Anaheim franchise will be owned by Art Kim of Long Beach, Calif., operator of a basketball team which travels in the Far East with a secondary unit of the Harlem Globetrotters.

WILT CHAMBERLAIN

Kim first owned a franchise in Honolulu and then in Long Beach in the now defunct American Basketball League which tried unsuccessfully to buck the NBA from September, 1961, to January, 1963.

MSA PROFILES

Captain of City College's defending basketball champions, Lenny Hamm is typical of the clean-cut young athletes featured in this AFRO series on the Maryland Scholastic Association.

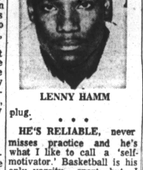
Hamm, who leads Division 2 scorers with a 25-plus average, was introduced to "MSA Profiles" by his coach, Gerry Phipps.

"He is just about the most versatile player in Baltimore scholastic circles," says the City mentor. "I can play him at forward or guard—even at center, I do believe, if the need arose—and Lenny would do the job.

• • •

"LENNY HAS developed from an average junior varsity player to one of the best in town. And I think the difference in him is the result of added confidence.

"When he first moved into the varsity picture," Phipps continues, "he seemed unsure of himself. Then he commenced to take hold and now, in his second year of varsity play, he's our team captain and all-round spark-plug.



LENNY HAMM

• • •

HE'S RELIABLE, never misses a practice and he's what I like to call a 'self-motivator.' Basketball is his only varsity sport but I consider him definite college material.

"The college board examinations come up for him in February and, after we see how he does, we'll do what we can to steer him into a reputable college," Phipps added.

Heavyweights top ring card

Two promising heavyweights are featured at the top of tonight's (Friday) boxing card at Steelworkers Hall in Dundalk.

Promoter Eli Hanover, reportedly bowing to fan clamor for heavyweight action, has matched Hubert Hilton of Glen Cove, N.Y., against Prentice Snipes of Miami, in the 10-round main event.

• • •

HILTON SHOWS a record of 15 wins — 8 by kayo — against 4 losses and 2 draws.

Snipes, boasting recent victories over Mel Turnbow, Cassius Clay's chief sparmate, and Billy Joiner, has 18 victories against 8 defeats. He has stopped 7 of his 18 victims.

The supporting card pits Irish Billy Lonergan of Glen Cove, against Dot Dews of Washington, D.C. and Jerry Brewer of Baltimore, versus Miguel Barreto of New York.

GOOSE TATUM
'Clown Prince of Basketball' in his heyday

Goose vowed to play basketball 'til fans quit laughing . . . he did

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI) — Goose Tatum once said, "I'll keep playing until the people stop laughing."

After nearly 20 years, basketball fans around the world had a reason to stop laughing Wednesday when Goose, the Clown Prince of Basketball," died unexpectedly at his home.

• • •

FUNERAL services were held Friday at 10 a.m., at the Fort Bliss National Cemetery. Rites were private with only members of the family and Goose's closest friends in attendance.

Tatum served in the U.S. Army from 1942 to 1945.

Mrs. Naomi Tatum, the Goose's widow, earlier had requested that no flowers be forwarded. She said she knew her husband would prefer that money spent in this way would be better used for medical research.

• • •

TATUM, 45, a former member of the zany Harlem Globetrotters, had battled a chronic liver ailment for the past two years, but Dr. Frederick P. Bornstein, a Providence Hospital pathologist, said he died of natural causes.

Goose was planning to fly to Dallas where the Harlem Road Kings were scheduled to play a "Goose Tatum Day" benefit game Saturday night. Goose formed the Road Kings several years ago when he split away from the Globetrotters.

• • •

TATUM was planning to disobey doctor's orders to rest six months because there were people in Dallas, just as there are everywhere, who needed to laugh.

"I could let all those people down by not being there," he said. "I'll even play some."

But the game was still played as a benefit to the Goose.

MARGUIS HAYNES, who was billed as the world's greatest dribbler when he was a teammate of Tatum's on the Globetrotters, was at the game along with Sugarfoot Johnson and many of Tatum's old friends on the Globetrotters.

Haynes took a night off from his own team, the Harlem Magicians, to fly to Dallas and sub for Tatum in the game.

TATUM'S family said he started feeling weak while taking a bath at his modest brown stucco home here Wednesday. He collapsed across the bed before he could get to it to lie down.

Firemen called to the scene applied external heart massage en route to Providence Hospital, but Tatum died in the emergency room, 17 minutes after being admitted.

• • •

BIRTH records showed Goose was born Reece Tatum on May 3, 1921, at Calion. Ark. But he said a few years ago, "I think I'm somewhere between 39 and 50." When he was 16, he went to Louisville to play pro ball.

While playing in an exhibition baseball game in Birmingham in early 1940, he was spotted by Abe Saperstein, the late founder of the Globetrotters.

Tatum said Saperstein came up to him one day and said, "You've got long arms and big hands — you ought tum after he left the Globetrotters.

Brescia said the high point of Tatum's career was during a tour of Italy when Pope Pius XII asked about the outstanding athlete who was creating such a furor.

A special court was set up, to be a basketball player."

Tatum could palm a basketball like most people handled a baseball. He had an armspan of seven feet.

• • •

"IN MY opinion, he was the greatest basketball player I ever knew," said Matty Brescia, who managed Tatum's old friends on the Globetrotters.

Haynes took a night off from his own team, the Harlem Magicians, to fly to Dallas and sub for Tatum in the game.

Soft Whiskey chased the chaser away.

Soft Whiskey is so soft going down, there's nothing to chase.

After that, drinking it is like drinking any other 86 proof whiskey.

So what you have is a whiskey that doesn't need water on the way down, and yet, isn't watered down itself.

Of course, all this doesn't mean it's against the law to follow up Soft Whiskey with a you-know-what.

And it's certainly not taboo to mix it with your favorite mixer.
(These are two excellent ways to make it go down even softer.)
So if you ever do run out of water, it doesn't necessarily mean you have to stop serving drinks.
