A CATHOLIC priest and a Protestant minister will also perform the ceremony when Miss Cherlyn Valerie Nicholas is married to Michael Bowen Mitchell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mitchell Jr., in St. Peter Claver Catholic Church, on March 4th at four in th afternoon.

Fr. Henry Offer, who will perform the nuptial ceremony, will be assisted by the Rev. Kelly Jackson, minister of Sharp Street Memorial Church, the traditional church of the family of the bridegroom-to-be.

His father is chairman of the trustee board of Sharp Street, and his grandmother, Dr. Lillie M. Jackson, is and was first woman trustee of that church. She is also president of the Baltimore branch of the NAACP.

Invitations to the wedding and reception to follow in the St. Peter Claver Parish Hall, were posted Saturday by Mrs. Gwendolyn Walker Nicholas, mother of the bride-elect. Miss Nicholas is also the daughter of Jerome Allen Nicholas.

She is, too, the niece of Miss Anita Williams, former social worker for Catholic Charities and who is the recipient of the Papal Cross.

A graduate of Eastern High School, Miss Nicholas is now a sophomore at Morgan State College. Mr. Mitchell, who graduated from City College, is a pre - law senior at Lincoln University (Pennsylvania.)

ONE GUEST summed up the dance on Friday evening in one sentence. Said she "The We Wives always have a party that is worth dressing to come to." Probably, the mjjority of the feminine guests felt the same way . . . for dress they did!

Emerson Gardens was an elegant background for the party . . . and Bobby Felder and his group provided the music. There was an early breakfast after the long evening of snacks and sips . . . and there were the scores of close friends to chat with between dances.

And there were the eye-filling clothes!

Ran into Doris Wheeler in the lobby . . . wearing a chic pink gown, crystal paved at the top and satin bowed at the back; and Mrs. Melvin Callaman in a flamingo influenced affair, the black lace fitted to the Nth to a half yard from the bottom, where it swirled into a heavily gathered flare.

Agnes Reaves, one of the hostesses, was also in the lobby at the time, and in stark white haute couture. Her white gown, which followed her lovely figure closely, was cut to a deep square at the back, and bordered with white mink at the hem. The miderately high neckline at front was embellished with a flat clasp of brilliants at one shoulder.

Gwendolyn Tarter, also a "Wife" wore white, the skirt slit at right, and capped with a huge green sequin pocket. Add to the creamy white, the little designer number worn by Dorothy Wood. short of skirt, ornamented with self bows at the shoulder and buttoned at the back with tiny self buttons. Lillian Bell (member) was in pale pink, a two-piece affair, embellished with crystal and chalk beads.

Josephine Brown wore a finger - tip length sequin jacket atop a beige skirt which was slit in quarter sections, and Adele Foreman's rose frock started with a high yoke of pale palettes, and fell straight to the hem. Both are members of the club.

Grace Walker wore one of the new Caftan dresses, which exposed one shoulder. The hot pink was banded in silver. Mattie Gardener's dress of elegant aqua silk would have to be seen to be seen to be pictured. particularly the intricate neck line and the interesting skirt which revealed a lining of soft pink with each step. Also in aqua was Mrs. Charles Brown, her suit a Dynasty model.

Doris Cole's print also had an oriental flavor, was of blue sparked with deep green and a dash of Chinese red. Ida Smith (member) wore hot pink, the peephole neckline encrusted with brillants, and Pauline Blackwell was also in hot pink, her frock featuring a paneled back. Margaret Hyde was in green brocade, and as chic as chic.

BALTIMORE HAS a great number of clubs composed of mothers who have organized to combine their thinking on the care, training and entertaining of their children.

The groups run from Jack and Jill of America to the Buttons and Bows (whose youngsters, incidentally, wish their parents would skip that title, now that they are upper teeners.)

But one I had not run into until recently is a warm hearted group with a membership composed of foster mothers.

And as the president, Mrs. Helen Handy, points out, they not only have fun in their meetings, as they study ways to help their children, but try to assist other foster parents. They work on the basis that the more love they give to the children the more the children learn to love.

They have a year - round program of good, clean fun for themselves, the children, and the foster fathers, who, Mrs. Handy says "are wonderful guys." In addition, their policy includes understanding, togetherness and prayer.

On Thursday evening, they were guests of Mrs. Mable Lawson of Denison St., where they had dinner, and where they decided that such a club is so worthwhile that they want to get others interested in such organizations.

So, Mrs. Handy and Mrs. Helen McCray volunteered to serve as organizers. Other foster mothers may call Mrs. Handy at 233-1499 for help in this line.

In addition to Mrs. Handy and Mrs. McCray, who is vice president, officers include Mrs. Lawson, secretary; Mrs. Iola Brooks, financial secretary; Mrs. Mary Walker, treasurer; and Mrs. Jean Williams, chaplain.

IN THE NEWS: At Hochschild Kohn's bridal fashions show, Tuesday ago, Mrs. William Garner and her cute daughter "Billie," watching the elegant display of wed ding styles. . but naturally, with a wedding in the offing for the latter.

Also at the show, Mrs. Ellsworth Rhetta, interested or just being entertained?

Most interested observer was Mrs. Velma Ross York, who had fitted the gowns and dresses for the models.

Also in the romance spotlight is charming Brenda Watts, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Hythe. She is to be married to Dr. Amon Martin, June graduate of the Howard University School of Dentistry, now in the Air Force, and stationed in California. He is a South Carolinian.

Missed from the We Wives' dance on Friday night Lawrence Mapp, who was in the hospital (was back home, Saturday), Mrs. Hiram Butler and Mrs. Roland Williams.

Bea (Mrs. Butler), who has, for two months, been trying to throw a virus, was still running a temperature . . . so Hiram escorted Mrs. Mapp and took over his friend, Lawrence's host duties.

Mrs. William (Anethia) had been tucked in bed for a couple of weeks chiefly from exhaustion. Roland was, however, on hand.

Mrs. (Lonnie (Serecha) Greene, out of St. Agnes Hospital, is now home.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Pierce celebrating their 40th wedding anniversary, marked the event with a dinner party for the family at the Sheraton-Belvedere, Sunday.

Towanda kids given prizes

The Towanda Playfield's Boys Club presented its annual show and tell event on Friday.

The main objective of this event is to give the children a chance to share the enjoyment they have with a special toy.. game or anything with others by showing and telling about it.

The children were also shown how to make a game out of material such as tubes from paper towels and cardboard paper, around the home that is usually discarded for trash after its proper use. Children presented objects like crazy clock; 007 gamee; hand punching bag, dolls from Korea and Japan.

Each participant was given a chance to present his object to the group and was judged on the originality of the object and the presentation.

Three certificates were given in each category. The first, second and third place winners for the most original object were Constance Banks, Karen Curtis and Donna Earket, respectively and the three winners for the best presentation were Shelia Irby, Karen Cutis and Bailus McLee.

Local youth gets Capital Office job

Cong. Samuel N. Friedel and Councilman Henry G. Parks combined efforts recently to get a Baltimore youth appointed an aide on the operational staff of the Capital Office Building.

He is Lester B. Wallace Jr., a sophomore at Howard University, majoring in zoology.

Young Wallace is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester B. Wallace Sr., of 4403 Ethland Ave. Mr. Wallace is supervisor of Citizens School Advisory Committee Studies in the Special Projects and Programs Division for the Department of Education.

Mrs. Doris H. Wallace, his mother, is vice principal of the George St. Elementary School No. 130.

The junior Mr. Wallace is a graduate of the Park private school and will attend graduate school after completing undergrate work at Howard, his father reported.

Another son, Thomas, is a freshman at Fisk University, Mr. Wallace said.

THE POST which Mr. Friedel said is another of his efforts to help Howard students, will require the student to work from 5 to 10 p.m.

He began work Feb. 1, Mr. Friedel told Mr. Parks, who interceded in the behalf of young Wallace.

Valentine dance

The Bureau of Recreation will hold a special Valentine Dance at the Gwynns Falls Recreation Center, 525 Hurley Ave., on Feb. 10 at 8 p.m. The Royal T. Band will play.

Hi-Y members, guests, hear Judge Watts

The Hi-Y Club of Harlem Park Junior High School presented an assembly last week. The mistress of ceremonies, Ruth Ballard, explained how the Hi-Y club inspired the young men of the school.

Harlem Park was honored to have as a guest speaker, Municipal Court Judge Robert B. Watts.

Judge Watts stressed the fact that the Hi-Y was a well-developed organization for young men with a definite interest in good citizenship.

Other honored guests were Edward Franklin, chairman of the Youth Committee Druid Hill Branch; Edward Franklin, Alonzo P. Moss, head of the Metropolitan Camp Directors of the YMCA.

Harold J. Jennifer, executive director of the Civic Center, presented a Leader's Fellowship Certificate to Avon J. Childs, advisor of the Hi-Y Club.
