3000 N. Hilton faces Zoning Bd. ruling Tues.

The disputed appeal asking the housing of five families at 3000 N. Hilton St. is among those scheduled to be heard the coming Tuesday by the Board of Municipal and Zoning Appeals.

Residents of the area have banded to fight the appeal, charging an overcrowding of the neighborhood among other things.

No cases were heard the past Tuesday, due to the heavy snow storm. Some of those scheduled then will be heard the coming Tuesday.

Among these cases set beginning at 1 p.m. in Room 231 City Hall ,are at these locations:

601 Reservoir St. — to house three families;

1730 E. Eager St. — continue to use first floor front for a beauty parlor;

914 N. Dallas St. — to construct two-story family dwelling.

OEO ban on politics won't affect city

Parren Mitchell, director of Baltimore's Community Action Agency, told the AFRO this week that administrative guidelines which limit political activity by anti-poverty employes will not affect the local program.

"The new guidelines," he said, "are very interesting, but don't affect our local program because as a municipal agency we have never taken part in politics.

"The guidelines are nothing more than a restatement of the rules that we have followed in the past."

Under provisions of the Hatch Act government employes are prohibited from taking active part in political campaigns.
