Bus driver faces murder charge in Feb. 1 accident

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — A 47-year-old Trailways Bus driver was ordered held for grand jury action here Tuesday night by a Richland Count County Coroner's Jury that ruled his "careless and reckless driving" caused the deaths of seven persons.

Coroner Cecil Wiles said Marvin H. Rhodes, the driver of the bus that crashed into the rear of a parked tractor trailer truck on Interstate 26 near here Feb. 1, would be charged with murder.

The bus, loaded with sleeping passengers, plowed into the rear of the truck loaded with canned goods in predawn darkness. Six persons were killed instantly as the bus's right side and roof were peeled away by the impact.

A seventh died several days later.

Rhodes did not appear at the hearing because he was recovering from head injuries suffered in the mishap.

THE SIX - MAN jury deliberated about an hour before returning with its findings in the case.

Key testimony in the case came from highway patrolman B.J. Littleton, who said the truck, driven by Donald L. Goan of Morristown, Tenn., had been pulled completely off the pavement of the highway.

Littleton said his investigation showed the bus did not brake before slamming into the rear of the truck. He said the truck was knocked back onto the highway by the force of impact.

There was also evidence presented that the bus might have been speeding just before the wreck. Another truck driver on the scene just after the collision, W. J. Sisson of Blue Ridge, Ga., said the bus passed his truck about [illegible] from the wreck scene and I was doing 63 to 70 at that time."

Speed limit on the interstate highway at night is 65.

* * *

GOAN, DRIVER of the parked truck, testified that he had stopped to aid two persons in a car that he had struck some 10 or 15 minutes before the bus slammed into his rig.

Goan said the car, driven by Eugene Erwin Smith, swerved into his path after coming on the highway from an exit ramp. The car then crossed the highway's dividing median, crossed two lanes of traffic, ran through a fence and ran into a tree.

Neither Smith or his woman companion, Delane Dawkins, were seriously injured. Goan and several bystanders were aiding the two when the bus struck the truck.

Several eyewitnesses to the crash said the truck's emergency flashing and regular running lights were on at the time of impact. One said the truck was "Lit up like a Christmas tree."

All the witnesses to the crash said traffic was moving at a regular pace by the truck just before the bus crashed into it.

Littleton, who arrived in his patrol car at the scene shortly after the crash, said the bus apparently was headed straight toward the rear of the trailer and then swerved to the left a moment before impact. The truck was completely off the highway at the time of impact, he said.

When it swerved to the left, he said, the right front of the bus met the left rear of the trailer. The impact then ripped the bus open, spilling passengers in a jumbled heap in the twisted interior of the bus and onto the highway.

Oral arguments set for schools' appeal

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals changed its mind Wednesday and agreed to hear oral arguments in an appeal of its landmark order requiring total desegregation of all public schools in the deep South by next fall.

The 12-judge court will hear arguments March 10 in Jacksonville, Fla.

The decision was handed down last December by a three judge panel of the court. The vote was 2-1.

* * *

LOUISIANA AND Alabama asked for a rehearing by the full court and the court agreed Feb. 9 to the rehearing, but said it would do so without oral arguments.

However, Judges Walter Gewin of Tuscaloosa, Ala.; J. P. Coleman of Jackson, Miss., and John C. Godbold of Montgomery, Ala., said they felt oral arguments should be permitted.

The December opinion, concurred in by Judges John Minor Wisdom of New Orleans and Homer Thornberry of Austin, Tex., in effect adopted the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare school desegregation guidelines as court policy.

* * *

THE SWEEPING ruling called for an end to desegregation in all phases of public school activity by the coming school year.

The one exception was faculty desegregation. School districts were given an additional year to deal with this problem.

U.S. Dist. Court Judge William H. Cox of Jackson, Miss., dissented from the December ruling. He said the decision was too sweeping and too important to be made by only two judges and called for a rehearing by all 12 judges.

Louisiana Atty. Gen. Jack Gremillion and Alabama authorities appealed the decision and asked for an opportunity to present oral argument.

The appeal was brought on behalf of six Louisiana and three Alabama school districts.

Trinidad-Tobago becomes OAS member

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Trinidad-Tobago Wednesday became the 22nd member of the Organization of American States (OAS).

The OAS Council scheduled a rare meeting away from its Washington Headquarters to welcome the newest member of the young Caribbean nation.

Trinidad-Tobago was the first nation to apply for OAS membership since the organization was founded in 1948.

It was met entrance requirement that prospective members must ratify the OAS Charter and all Inter-American agreements and treaties.

Of the 21 present OAS nations, one, Cuba, has been suspended because of "Political incompatibility," but is still technically a member.

HEW lauded for cutting off Ala. funds

Secretary John Gardner of Education and Welfare told the Senate Finance Committee Thursday that he had no legal choice but to cut off welfare aid to Alabama when the State refused to comply with all civil rights regulations.

Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., charged that Gardner simply "wanted to cut off" some $100 million annually in Federal funds although it would hurt 200,000 welfare recipients.

Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., said it was Alabama, and not the Federal government, which jeopardized Federal aid to the aged, the blind, the disabled and the impoverished in Alabama.

"INSTEAD OF BEING a villain here you have performed your function admirably and I compliment you on it," Hartke told Gardner.

Gardner appeared to answer charges by former Alabama Gov. George Wallace that HEW was making illegal requirements.

"I think the truth of it is Mr. Wallace doesn't like the law and is doing everything he can to avoid complying with it," Hartke added.

Yette quits OEO post

By ART CARTER

WASHINGTON — The No. 1 civil rights inspector in the Office of Economic Opportunity is leaving Sargent Shriver's multi-million dollar poverty program, effective March 1.

During a question-and-answer exchange with newsmen attending the seminar, Yette strongly opposed a recent OEO order that gives regional offices authority to approve grants.

Yette insisted his office Is no longer required to check these grants for compliance with civil rights laws, and further emphasized that his office was "terribly understaffed" and unable to handle the many complaints it now receives.

* * *

PRESSED ON just how the new order, officially known as a "redelegation of authority" and issued on Jan. 12, last, damaged the program, Yette said "it was too early to tell" the full effect but under it the civil rights office was virtually scuttled.

Don Baker, general counsel; Theodore Berry, director of Community Action Programs, and Robert Levine, assistant director, Office of Research and Planning, took opposite views in the civil rights discussion.

Baker explained that "the only change" in the redelegation of authority was to give regional directors an authority to "sign off" on all projects whereas previously this authority was limited to projects involving less than $500,000.

Others agreed on this point and insisted that in issuing the order there was "no attempt to bypass or any suggestion of bypassing the civil rights director."

* * *

DIRECTOR — SARGENT Shriver was queried on the issue and agreed with Baker, Berry and Levine. He added that Yette's responsibility was to set policy and that all OEO personnel, inspectors, coordinators, directors and staffers, were concerned with executing it.

The next day Yette resigned and Shriver accepted the resignation. At the same time, Shriver announced that the Rev. Grady E. Poulard, former minister of the Peoples Congregational Church, Washington, D.C., would join OEO's unit rights staff.

SAMUEL F. YETTE

* * *

YETTE'S DEPARTURE from OEO climaxes two months of controversy over the civil rights deputy's duties. It began early in December when OEO was involved in the dispute with the Mississippi project and resulted in two aides in Yette's office quitting.

They were never replaced and a few weeks later the "redelegation of authority" was issued which, Yette insists, further weakened the prospect of the civil rights department doing anything constructive.

The two jobs are apparently still open but there seems to be no hurry in filling them.

* * *

IN COMMENTING on Mr. Yette's resignation, Mr. Shriver said: "From the beginning of OEO, we have benefited from the judgment and counsel of Samuel F. Yette, who has served since February of 1965 as special assistant for civil rights. Before that, he served for nearly two years as public information officer and executive secretary of the Peace Corps while I was director.

"After four years of valuable service at the Peace Corps and OEO, he has decided to consider new opportunities open to him elsewhere in the government or in journalism, his earlier profession. He will leave the agency on March 1.

"We at OEO are indebted to him for his help in advancing civil rights in the anti - poverty program throughout the country. We will miss him, but wish him well in his new endeavors."

Mr. Yette said "I have had no dispute whatever with Sargent Shriver. I am not resigning because of any "row."

"Sargent Shriver, through the programs which he has administered, ha adone more for civil rights than any other public servant.

"It is also my belief that OEO has done a better job in advancing the true objectives of civil rights than any other Federal agency."

* * *

A NATIVE of Harriman, Tenn., Mr. Yette joined the Peace Corps in 1963 as an Information Media Officer. From 1962 to 1963 he was employed as a city government reporter by the Dayton Journal Herald. He was director of information for Tuskegee Institute from 1959 to 1962, and an associate magazine editor 1957-59. He has also worked as a reporter for the AFRO - AMERICAN.

Mr. Yette holds the bachelor's degree in liberal arts from Tennessee A-T State University and the master's degree in journalism and govern ment from Indiana University.

Agencies push apprentice jobs

WASHINGTON — Four organizations interested in youth opportunities have started a program to get young applicants have apply for jobs in skilled trades.

Donald Slaimon, director of the AFL-CIO's Department of Civil Rights, said in an interview Monday that young people, especially minorities, just do not know what is available.

* * *

THE BUILDING and Construction Trades Department of AFL-CIO, together with the Workers Defense League, the A. Philip Randolph Education Fund and the U.S. Department of Labor have joined forces to give the apprenticeship program special emphasis.

Youth camp wins praise for Masons

NEW ORLEANS — Louisiana Congressman Otto Passman, speaking to the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons in their annual session paid a high tribute to the efforts of Prince Hall Masons in erecting a camp for the youth of the state.

The camp in St. Landry, La., appraised recently at $257,000 and this past week the board of directors voted to spend an additional $6,000 for play equipment and Master John Lewis, Jr., and Grand Matron Mrs. Mary McGriff Bell announced the plans.

Rep. Passman told the white Masons they should ". . .follow the example of the colored Masons and use their annual dues to construct youth centers".

ALFRED BAKER LEWIS, NAACP national treasurer, criticizing all-colored political parties: "They are stupid because they can't hope to get to first base and they are dangerous because they're likely to lead to all white political parties."

Mrs. Mildred Young named Keystone housing manager

DRUMS, Pa. — Mrs. Mildred S. Young, who has been prominent in women's social service agencies in a number of metropolitan areas, has been named manager of Residential Affairs for the Keystone Job Corps Center for Women at Drums, Pa., was announced recently by Dr. William A. Shine, director.

Her responsibilities will include the supervision of 24 residential advisors who will be in charge of the dormitories housing the young women who will be students at the Keystone center. The center is the first for women to be opened in Pennsylvania under President Johnson's Anti - Poverty Program.

Approximately 475 women between the ages of 16 and 21 will be trained at the center in clerical, sales and technical occupations.

* * *

MRS. YOUNG who is a resident of Philadelphia most recently was advisor for individual and direct services of the Women's Christian Alliance in Philadelphia. Before that she held a similar position with the Department of Welfare in Chicago.

She was executive director and adult program director of the YWCA in Pittsburgh from 1949 to 1955. She also served with the Lychburg, Va. YWCA for a time.

MRS. MILDRED E. YOUNG

From 1945 to 1948 she was education director of intergroup relations at the Hartford, Conn. YWCA.

Mrs. Young also served with the U.S. Government as an employee relations counselor and consultant for minority problems with the War Department during World War II.

From 1941 to 1942 she was educational secretary and director with the Midwest Office of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

A NATIVE of Lake Forest, Ill., she received her undergraduate degree from Lake Forest College and her master's degree from Northwestern University. She majored in speech, psychology, guidance, counseling and personnel.

She is a member of the American Association of University Women, the YWCA and the Pomona Cherokee Civic Council.

She has done volunteer work with the Girl Scouts of America and other community agencies.

Need for adequate training to meet new demands cited

RALEIGH, N.C. — "Education has been a prime mover in the technological and scientific revolution of the 20th Century," Myron A. Wright, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, told a Shaw University audience during a Public Affairs Forum recently.

Introduced by Dr. J. W. Goodloe, senior vice president of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, and treasurer of Shaw's Board of Trustees, Mr. Wright said at an explosive rate, the nation's educational system must prepare to cope with challenges far more complex and urgent than those of the past.

Mr. Wright who is board chairman of Humble Oil and Refining Co., said that educators should be equally alert to changes in the substance of the educational program.

"Unless the training and skills that are developed in the classroom are those which are demanded by the nation's economic and social institutions, the techniques and methods used — or even the rapidity of the learning process — will not be pertinent," the speaker said.

HE CITED a prediction that in 1975 some three - fourths of our labor force will be producing goods and services that have not yet been developed.

Unless educators and other policy - makers, both public and private, show keen foresight, he said, the nation's progress could be slowed by a growing disparity between the skills needed by our economy and those that are available.

Our first effort toward preventing a larger imbalance in the labor market could be an uplifting of education of our most deficient worker," he said.

"If they are not to become tomorrow's unemployable and poverty - cases, efforts must be made to improve their education and training and thus improve their usefulness to society."

Business can make an important contribution, he said, by developing a closer liaison with education and by helping decide what changes can be made, how much they will be financed.

"Through this process, the purposes of our educational system could be more clearly developed, and more efficient and effective means of achieving these goals could be applied," Mr. Wright told his audience.

Urban League to open first S.C. chapter soon

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — The National Urban League announced this week it will open its first South Carolina chapter within two weeks. The chapter will be in Columbia.

J. Harvey Kearse, association director of the League's Southern Regional office, said organizational work has been underway since August after civic and industrial leaders asked for the chapter.

The League will help the Labor Department train high school and college dropouts. It will operate on a $42,000 annual budget for two years, with $25,000 coming from the League and $17,000 from the federal government.

The League will also work on problems of housing, employment, family relations, munications and leadership in Columbia, Kearse said.

"The housing problem here is as acute as in any city I have ever visited," he said. "It's particularly affecting people in the central city area where they will be displaced by any number of special projects."

Job consultant projects Operation Native Son

NEW YORK — A vast pool of untapped professional talent awaits industry's and minority groups, said Charles L. Fields, a management consultant, last week, announcing Manpower Days April 7 and 8 at a Baltimore motel.

"A successful recruitment of minority - group members for professional positions in industry involves more than bringing man and company together. Success is determined by in-depth preparation of both parties to meet in an atmosphere of mutual understanding and expectation, Fields said.

This program at the Rownlowner Motor Inn is the seventh recruitment conference Fields has conducted since he began in 1964.

It will afford minority group college graduates an opportunity to obtain information on professional employment opportunities in industry, and to be personally interviewed by recruiters from some of the nation's leading companies.

THE FIELDS emphasis is upon the candidate's careful self-evaluation of his interests, background, and potentials, as well as detailed research into the employment opportunities offered by various participating corporations.

A pre-interview is held to acquaint the candidate with the positions available, and let him review them with respect to his background and interests. Fields and his staff are available to answer questions and offer pertinent information.

Fields will hold pre-interviews for the Baltimore program at the Rownlowner March 1 - 5, at Washington's Gramercy Inn March 8 - 12, and at Holiday Inn Central, Richmond, March 13-18.

OEO Upward Bound grant to Winston-Salem

WASHINGTON — Winston - Salem State College of North Carolina received a grant of $105,622 from the Office of Economic Opportunity this week to finance its second summer Upward Bound program.

The Upward Bound program is designed to give capable boys from low income families the determination and academic background to get into college and stay there, to convince them that training after high school is possible if they work to get it.

The first phase of the program is an eight-week term Winston - Salem State. The second place is a year - long follow-up that includes Saturday studies on the campus, tutoring, counseling and help in securing scholarships.

All expenses are paid from Federal funds. In addition, each of the 108 boys will receive an allowance of $10 a week during the eight weeks in the summer and $4 a week during the follow-up program.

Dr. W. Archie Blount, vice president of Winston - Salem State, will be director, with a staff in part from Forsyth County schools and from Winston-Salem State.

The boys will live in Brown Hall, a men's dormitory, from June 12th to Aug. 11th.

'Didn't get true picture' say Job Corps dropouts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A poll of Job Corps dropouts revealed last week that more than half quit because screeners failed to present a true picture of the program.

Louis Harris and Associates, surveyed an 11 per cent sampling of 10,858 young men and women who either resigned or were discharged from Job Corps before completing their training.

Of those who left, 42 per cent indicated the training wasn't what it was cracked up to be.

THE HARRIS report said there was evidence of a "believed communications breakdown.

"Whether this is the result of what the screeners said or of the magnified expectations of the young people is difficult to determine," the report said.

Others who said they didn't get the money promised, living accomodations weren't as good as told, they couldn't leave camp at night or they weren't told about fights. The Harris report said many cited a fear a fights and a desire to avoid trouble.

THIRTY THREE per cent said they weren't helped by the training because they weren't trained for a specific job, didn't stay long enough or didn't like the training.

On the other hand, 37 per cent said the training was helpful—four in ten felt they were learning a lot—71 per cent liked the orientation program, 76 per cent liked the instructors, 52 per cent liked the pay, and more than half thought they had good chance to meet people in adjoining communities. Sixty per cent said they'd like to come back to Job Corps,
