Chi Delta Mu's dine, dance consider needs of youth, too

By LULA MACKAY

Thank your stars that you didn't get a tummy ache, didn't break a tooth or need your prescription filled, Sunday night.

Had you needed any of these services you just might have been in trouble, unless you were a dinner-dance guest at the Tall of the Fox, that evening.

For the doctors, dentists and pharmacists were looking good themselves and showing off their pretty ladies at the annual Founder's Day banquet of Chi Delta Mu Fraternity.

And in their wake as a flow of equally pretty people, their guests for the affair.

• • •

THE PARTY began with cocktails at five in the afternoon. With Sherman Lewis' Combo providing the music, dancing began almost as soon as wraps were checked.

Supper at six-thirty and following this, the group stopped for a moment for a beautiful prayer by Dr. Cyril Ashby, a warm welcome by Dr. Robert Phillips, and a peppy talk by Judge George Russell.

• • •

JUDGE RUSSELL told the group that he is concerned, greatly concerned over any prospect of passage of a curfew bill. Such a bill, he pointed out will certainly not deter those youth bent on crime, he said.

On the other hand, he said, it will contribute to the violation of the rights of juveniles, and will add to the power of some who already abuse the law.

He is also concerned, said Judge Russell over the lack of concern affluent and educated citizens take in the problems of youth. Many of the latter, under the pressures of threatening atom destruction, of careers threatened by military duties and of lack of jobs, find the world too much for them . . . and decide to "get off," he said.

What they need, said the Judge, is not punishment, but rehabilitation; not more constricting laws, but added motivation.

SPECIAL GUESTS at the banquet were officers and executive members of the Grand Chapter of Chi Delta Mu.

They had, the same day, held an executive meeting pertaining to the convention which is to be held here in June. Their session had been in the Holiday Inn.

Included were:

Dr. Nolan Atkinson, grand president, and Mrs. Nolan and Dr. and Mrs. Daniel Wilson of Philadelphia; Dr. Alexander Bell, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Allen of Washington; and Dr. and Mrs. Allen of Richmond, Va.,

Also on the executive committee are Drs. Walter E. Shrvington, a past grand president; and Dr. Warren Lee, president of the host chapter, both of this city.

HOSTESS AT the banquet and their wives included:

Dr. Edward McDaniels,

Perrys entertain

Mr. and Mrs. James Perry of 2402 Calverton Heights Ave. recently entertained their young cousin Joey Mills Jr., from Portsmouth, Va.

Joe is a junior at Hampton Institute in Hampton Va. and had won a scholarship from that college as a participant in the development program in Europe.

He boarded his plane at New York's John F. Kennedy Airport for research work in London, Wales.

His project is "experiment in International living."

Household Hints

ABOUT TO paint a high ceiling? Follow these hints from the National Paint Varnish and Lacquer Association. Rig a raised platform by putting a plank on the rungs of two sturdy stepladders.

Allow the plank to extend at least a foot beyond the step of the ladder on which it rests. Make sure that the ladders are fully open and locked in position before you begin.

Used unwisely, advance household Finance, it can create problems and sometimes leads to serious financial difficulties. Use only as much credit as you can comfortably repay out of future come.
