SECOND GRADERS from the Collington Square Elementary School became the first group of students to tour the William L. Moore Center, 433 E. 25th St. The 38 pupils gained a deeper understanding of the contribution made to the nation by colored Americans, according to Norman Reeves, an official of the center which still is seeking to win its tax-exempt status. The class teacher Mrs. Sarah Elias, holds the pupils' attention as she explains highlights of the life of Maryland's Frederick Douglass, "Father of the protest movement." The center still is asking for donations of materials on colored persons and volunteer workers are urged to attend meetings. The next one is March 13 at 8 p.m.

Senate set to pass death bill

ANNAPOLIS —The Senate is expected to give its final approval today (Friday) or Monday to the Controversial bill to abolish the death penalty in major crimes.

The SB 82, sponsored by Sen. Royal Hart (D. Prince Georges), will still face House of Delegates action.

Tentative approval came in the Senate Wednesday afternoon, after days of wrangling and attempted amendments, most of which failed.

As the bill now stands, it would provide life imprisonment rather than death for the major crimes, except in the murder of a policeman or penal guard.

* * *

HOWEVER, IN the life imprisonment cases there would be no parole.

Among those leading the opposition to the bill were Baltimore's Senators Joseph J. Staszak (D. 1st), Joseph L. Manning (D. 3rd) and Paul A. Dorf (D. 5th).

Proponents of the bill argued long with statistics that the death penalty was not a deterrent to crime.

Senators Verda F. Welcome and Clarence M. Mitchell 3rd (both D. 4th Balto.) were among those favoring the bill.

Dr. Paquin testifies in Washington

Dr. Laurence G. Paquin, superintendent of public instruction testified before the House Education and Labor Committee in Washington, D.C. this week on proposed amendments to the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965.

Paquin told the federal panel that the Baltimore public school system had not been able to make the best use of federal education funds "for the simple reason that the staff and time to plan effectively for the use of the money has not been available."

"Like most large urban centers," Paquin said, "Baltimore is having difficulty in recruiting teachers.

Not only are we having difficulty in getting teachers — we are also having difficulty getting teachers with special qualifications and skills which it takes to function effectively in inner-city schools.

* * *

"LAST FALL, for example, the Baltimore Public School System opened with a shortage of nearly 200 teachers.

"Furthermore, many of the individuals we had to assign to classrooms were sub-standard in terms of their preparation for teaching. In Baltimore, about one out of every four teachers lacks the minimum requirements for state certification. They are in classrooms simply because without these people, we would have to close down."

Paquin said he was hopeful that proposed amendments to the education measure would bring the National Teacher Corps into the mainstream of the federal aid program and relieve the critical teacher shortage in Baltimore public schools.

Miss Wharton going on four with students

Miss Linda Wharton, a senior of Western High School has been selected to tour nine European countries this summer with the all student Band U.S.A., Orchestra and Chorus.

NAACP hits 'race baiting journalism'

In a telegram to Mark Collins, publisher of the News American, the Baltimore Branch NAACP condemned what it called "race baiting journalism" in connection with the newspaper's recent series on busing school children.

Complete text of the telegram, signed by Dr. Lillie M. Jackson, president, follows:

* * *

"THE BALTIMORE Branch NAACP strongly protests the series of articles on Woodbourne Junior High School which are racially inflammatory and do not reflect the true story of the successful desegregation at this school and other public schools in the city, under the constructive leadership of the Baltimore City School Board and our dedicated superintendent, Dr. Lawrence Paquin.

"We are shocked that incidents involving a handful of children are blown out of proportion in a one sided portrayal which appears to be designed to arouse racial hatred and to provoke racial strife.

"In times like these, when our boys are dying every day in Vietnam for democracy, it will behoove any responsible newspaper to engage in this type of race baiting journalism."

Madison group honors Morgan coach Banks

The SB 993 would raise from $35 to $75 the daily rental for elections and registration polling places on private properties.

Sponsor of the bill is Sen. Verda F. Welcome (D. 4th Balto.).
