THE BRIDE given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of silk peau.

Appliques of re-embroidered Chantilly lace enhanced the bodice and neckline. The gown featured long pointed sleeves, and a panel, from the shoulders, swept into a chapel train.

Her veil of imported illusion was held by a double tiered crown of re-embroidered Chantilly lace and edged in seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of carnations, showered with ribbons and centered with orchids.

MISS DEBORAH LOCKWOOD was her sister's maid of honor.

Bridesmaids were Misses Jill Collins, Wilhelma Garner and April Henson.

The attendants wore floor-length gowns of maize saki, fashioned with empire bodices and sheath skirts, and topped with matching full length coats of puffed saki.

Their headdresses were flirtation veils attached to flowerettes, and they carried nosegays of blue and yellow pompoms.

Miss Lockwood's ensemble was identical, but in mermaid blue, and her flowers were yellow carnations.

JO ANN BROOKS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Brooks, was flower girl. Randy Brooks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Brooks, was ring bearer.

Both are cousins of the bridegroom. The flower girl was in blue and carried a basket of multi - colored spring flowers. Her headpiece was of the same flowers.

DWIGHT BROOKS, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

Ushers were Gilbert Brown uncle of the bride; William and Gilbert Brooks, cousins of the bridegroom; Wilbur Warfield, Larry Brown and Eugene Gaither.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Lockwood wore an aqua silk sheath which had an overlay of drop leaf pearls at the neckline, and a matching coat. Her shoes and hat were in the same color and her corsage was a white orchid.

THE BRIDEGROOM'S step-mother wore a gold crepe sheath with matching jacket and accessories in the same color. Her corsage, too, was a white orchid.

INTERESTING ENOUGH were the old customs while visiting a temple, mosque or a mausoleum, when one must remove their shoes, and the version of the handskake.

The word "Nammaste" is spoken as the palms of the hands join in front of the chest. The word, itself, serves the purpose of "Good Morning," Good Afternoon," Good Evening," "Good Night, and "Good Bye." For "thank you" one says "Dhanyavad" or "Shurkriya."

Miss Vimala told about the educational system, which is under the jurisdiction of the Prime Minister of the Central government of India. The country, which is considered a democracy, has the parliamentary system of government, when there is also the President, head of the Indian Republic.

She demonstrated the arrangement of her costume, the sari, and explained other dress of India by showing costumed dolls. Customs and the caste system were also discussed.
