'Man of La Mancha' impells and compells

"Man of La Mancha" showing at the Morris A. Mechanic Theatre, this week, drew slightly less than filled house, but a thoroughly enthusiastic Audience, Monday night.

The musical, based on Cervantes' "Don Quixote" was chosen best musical of the 1965-66 season by the New York Drama Critics Circle, the Variety Poll and the Saturday Review of Literature, among others.

WRITTEN BY Dale Wasserman, the "Man of La Mancha" turns out more of a contemporary play than musical, and with a tongue-in-cheek message.

Setting for the drama is a Seville (Spain) dungeon, into which Don Quixote is brought near the end of the Sixteenth Century to await a hearing by the Inquisition. To avoid a kangaroo trial by fellow prisoners he engages them by acting out his story of a "Knight" whose quest is for Life as it should be, not as it is, and inspires others to aim for "The Impossible Dream".

The musical, at moments brutal, at other moments, erotic, has both pathos and power, and is one every lover of the theatre will enjoy seeing and hearing.

JOSE FERRER is in the lead role, but the most compelling player is Maura K. Wedge, who plays the part of a disillusioned prositute who Don Quixote impells to "reach for unreachable star" . . . Lula Mackay,
