If you want copy of housing code you have to buy it from printer

Property owners and tenants interested in complying with the stipulations of the new Baltimore City Housing Code will find it pretty difficult to get their hands on a copy of it, unless they are willing to purchase it from a private commercial printer.

AN AFRO reporter, doing research on a housing story, went by the offices of the Building Inspection Department on Druid Hill Avenue and attempted to get a copy of the code.

After being shifted from office to office the reporter was informed that the city didn't have any copies of the new ordinance for the public and that they could be purchased at the offices of King Brothers Printers at 208 W. Calvert St.

A spokesman at the printers said that copies of the code are available at .50 each.

IN A LETTER to Mayor Theodoore R. McKeldin the Citizens' Planning and Housing Association has requested that copies of the new code, which became effective in December of 1966, be made available free to interested persons.

"The law," the letter says, "depends upon the cooperation of an informed public and for this reason we advise that copies of the housing code be made available for free distribution to interested parties.

"We feel it is even more important that the city prepare a handbook outlining the specific responsibilities of property owner and tenant.

"We feel that only in this manner can the city get the assistance and cooperation of the public in the enforcement of the code."

* * *

A NUMBER of building inspectors, asked if they had copies of the code, said they had either lost or misplaced them but that they had committed the important parts of the code to memory.

Robert Dietrich, chief building inspector, said that initial training courses familiarized department employees with the code regulations and that many inspectors function effectively without it.

Clay to take case to Supreme Court

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — A federal judge Wednesday rejected three draft appeals by Cassius Clay, paving the way for his induction into the Army April 28. Clay's attorney said he would take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Barring action by the High Court, the rulings by Judge James F. Gordon meant that Clay must report for induction at Houston, Tex., April 28 — a date set earlier in the day by the Houston Draft Board.

"I'll answer to the government when the time goes, not to the press," Clay told newsmen when asked if he would report for induction as scheduled.

"My prayers, my sacrifice, my life and my death are all for Allah," said the heavyweight champion, who has taken the name Muhammad Ali.

"If I thought my joining the war and possible dying would bring peace, freedom, justice and equality to the 21 million so-called Negroes, they would not have to draft me.

"I would join tomorrow."

IN ARGUING the government's case, Justice Department lawyer Fred Drogula said Clay was seeking "not equal treatment, but preferential treatment."

"This is a routine case," Drogula argued. "It is this man's turn to go, and he has had his day before the Selective Service System."

Clay's attorney, Hayden Covington of New York, said: "The Japanese are not invading; the Communists are not invading; the Germans are not invading. There is no necessity for denying him this judicial review."

Covington said he would seek a Writ of Mandamus from the U.S. Supreme Court to get a three-judge panel to hear the suit, a motion Judge Gordon rejected.

WHILE CLAY watched intently, Gordon — in rapid order — denied requests that:

— An injunction be granted to block enforcement of the Selective Service law until the question of constitutionality was settled through appeals.

— A temporary restraining order be issued to block Clay's induction while Gordon's decision was carried to the Supreme Court.

Gordon noted that he was denying a three-judge panel and injunctive relief "without reaching the fundamental claim as to the violation of constitutional rights by the lack of representation on Draft Boards."

"This constitutional question has not at this time matured," the judge said.

He upheld the government contention that the question of constitutionality of the Selective Service law, permitting an all-white Draft Board to handle Clay's case, could not be posed until Clay was inducted or refused to be inducted.

Gordon said it would not be justified for the court or a three-judge panel to begin hearing a constitutional question which could disappear by reason of "rejection of the registrant, a change in his health, or by death itself."

COVINGTON — emphasizing his arguments by slamming his fist on the table and shoving his chair across the floor — said to make Clay decide between induction or jail was "like walking on coals of fire . . ."

Drogula said the choice was the "same decision every man must make under the Selective Service law."

"It's true the world is not going to come to an end if this man evades the draft," he said.

"But if the government had to go to court every time it wanted to draft a man and was faced with multitudinous losses of these cases, it would be a severe injury to the public interest."

Covington pointed out that a colored member, was named to Caly's Draft Board in January "but dragging this man out of the woodpile at this stage is a confession of error on their part."

If Clay's Local Draft Board was a "neighborhood board" as originally intended by the Selective Service law, Covington said, "you can bet there would be a lot of black men on it."

Knee 'feels better now,' so Frank plays

MIAMI (UPI) —Slugging Outfielder Frank Robinson of the Baltimore Orioles had fluid drained from his right knee Thursday and returned to the starting lineup.

It was the same knee which veomber for the removal of a torn cartilage. Robinson has been bothered by discomfort and swelling in the knee and played only four innings of the Orioles' last four games.

"It feels better now," Robinson said. "The doctor said the fluid was normal and is liable to build up again. I guess I could get through the year having it drained every once in a while, but I hope don't have to."

Big 10 edict bias charged

CHICAGO (UPI)—Earl B. Dickerson, a Chicago Attorney and insurance company president, inferred Wednesday that the Big Ten's decision denying eligibility to seven University of Illinois athletes was influenced by racial prejudice.

Dickerson, in a statement to a nationally circulated Magazine, pointed out that eight of the 14 athletes involved in the investigation were colored and added, "It's strange that of the 14, 8 colored players were declared ineligible, 5 permanently and 3 temporarily."

"It is strange that out of the 14, no whites were permanently denied eligibility but 5 colored were," he said. "It seems to me that the amount of money that is involved should not be a standard to judge for the eligibility.

* * *

"THEY WERE ALL getting money from the slush fund. The same yardstick should apply to all of them without regard to the amount that they received, for they were not the primary violators. The slush fund was given on the basis of need and we have established that the need of colored players is far beyond the need of whites.

"It looks to me that the Big Ten faculty was influenced by the fact that there are too many colored stars in the Big Ten. This action . . . would be a deterrent for Big Ten schools who have been seeking to bring in colored stars from the south to bolster their standards, and the gate receipts which come to them by reason of the action of these stars on the field."

Muhammad Ali is not in hurry to join the Army

DALLAS (UPI) — Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali, his induction into the Army momentarily postponed said he will just bide his time until the Houston Draft Board decides what to do.

The director of the Louisville, Ky., Draft Board, Ali's original board, said Monday the champion's scheduled April 11 induction into the Army has been postponed because his records have been transferred to Houston, Ali's present home.

"I'm a Texan now," Ali said. "I live in Houston. They're the judges, and we'll just have to wait and see what they (the Houston Selective Service Board) decide." Ali's attorneys had his records transferred from the local Draft Board in Louisville to Houston.

Grambling scores another victory

Clay at Bishop College, jabs at ignorance, bias

DALLAS (UPI) — Heavyweight Champion MUHAMMAD Ali (Cassius Clay) was punching away at ignorance Tuesday urging an enthusiastic college crowd here to "take every opportunity to advance your education."

He also got in a few verbal blows at the white man's oppression of colored people in this country while talking informally to 500 students at Bishop College.

The champion said "You never cease to learn. You should take every opportunity to advance an education."

He added, "I'm not here to show off — I'm speaking to you from my heart. When I show off, it is before 16 television cameras and six million people around the world."

* * *

THE HEAVYWEIGHT champion set the mood for the session in a humorous vein, saying "I didn't actually plan to be here today — it was just a spur of the moment type of thing. I'm supposed to be back in my hometown taking care of a little business with the Government," referring to his enduring battle with the Selective Service.

Asked why he had adopted the name of Muhammad Ali, he said, "When you hear the name Khrushchev, you expect to see a Russian. When you hear the name Mobula, you expect to see an African. When you hear the name McCarthy, you expect to see an Irishman. When you hear the name Atsuki, you expect to see a Japanese.

"But when you hear the names Smith, Brown, Jones or Clay, you don't know what color man you're going to see. When you hear the name Muhammad Ali, you now you're going to see a Black Muslim."

EXPOUNDING THE Black Muslim view of the white man's "oppression" of the colored man, the champion called out "who has done all this to you?"

The crowd of students roared back, "the white man."

Some of the crowd cheered the heavyweight champion on wildly, while others watched impassively.

Only one couple in the crowd openly disapproved of the champion's views. They stood and walked out in the middle of his talk—both visibly agitated.

Call-up postponed

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Houston Draft Board said Wednesday it had notified Ali to report for induction into the armed forces at the Houston induction center April 28.

Mrs. Josie Koonce, chief clerk of the Houston board, said the champion's papers had arrived from the Louisville, Ky. board, which had ordered Clay's induction for April 11.

She said the April 28 date was the next one available for Houston draftees at the induction center.

Emile trains for title bout with Nino

NEW YORK—(UPI) — Emile Griffith signed official contracts Tuesday to defend his world middleweight title against Italian Nino Benvenuti in a 15-round bout April 17 in Madison Square Garden.

Griffith, who won the title from Dick Tiger April 25, will be defending his title for the third time. In two previous defenses, he twice decisioned Joey Archer of New York.

The champion will receive a guarantee of $80,000 or 45 percent of the live gate and ancillaries while Benvenuti will get 15 percent of the receipts.

* * *

BENVENUTI, 29, arrived in New York Monday. He held the European middleweight title since winning it from Luis Folledo Oct. 15, 1965.

Griffith, making his second start of the year has won 52 while losing seven. Benvenuti, who will be fighting for the first time in the United States, has won 69 of 70 fights, 29 by knockouts.

Griffith is staying at the Concord Hotel in Kiamesha Lake, N.Y., during training sessions while Benvenuti will prepare for the bout at the Villaggio Italia in Haines Falls, N.Y. They began workouts Wednesday.

Betting even for Cokes-Harris bout

NEW YORK—(UPI) — Welterweight Champion Curtis Cokes, a 29-year-old veteran who has nine years professional experience, is rated only even money to beat Brash, 21-year-old Gypsy Joe Harris Friday night (March 31) when they meet in a contitle bout at Madison Square Garden.

Cokes is nearly unknown in the East despite an impressive record of 45 victories against eight losses and three draws while Harris; who has 16 straight triumphs since turning pro, has built a reputation for his flailing tactics and entering the ring in red tights and matching doublebreasted coat with a bow in back.

Excelsior Handicap to be televised

NEW YORK — The Excelsior Handicap, a race dating back to 1903, will be televised as the feature of "The Schaefer Circle of Sports" thoroughbred racing program and from Aqueduct on Saturday, April 8.

Sponsored by The F. and M. Schaefer Brewing Company, the Excelsior Handicap will be televised live and in color from 4:30 to 5 p.m., in Washington, D.C., WTTG-TV, and in Baltimore, WMAR-TV.

The Excelsior Handicap is an event for three-year-olds and up over 1 miles. It will have a purse of $50,000 added.

The more "partners" we have, the better.

Because we are an investor-owned electric company we have many, many direct shareowners.

And since insurance companies, mutual funds and pension plans invest in sound companies like this one, the people who save money through them are indirect "partners."

That's American enterprise in action, for as we grow to meet our customers' electric needs and desires, we help our "partners" grow economically, too.
