Pascal said he was sent to this country because there are no facilities available in Haiti to treat the kind of wound that was inflicted on him.

A hospital spokesman said that Pascal arrived at the hospital and was admitted on Feb. 26 and that he was accompanied by a personal physician and a woman who identified herself as a "sister."

He refused to disclose who had made the arrangements with the hospital or who was listed on hospital records as "next of kin."

Telephone operators have been ordered not t ediscloses his room number or the section of the hospital in which he is confined.

ONE SOURCE speculated that these were precautionary steps taken to assure Pascal's safety in the event that the shooting involved a political incident.

Another question yet unanswered, is who is paying Pascal's bills while he is in the hospital. The private, air-conditioned room cost more than $50 per day in addition to medical services rendered while in the hospital.

Pascal's bills, which are computed and presented by the Hospital's auditing service every 10 days, have to date been in excess of $3,000. His bill which is currently outstanding is $1,488.23.

HOSPITAL AUTHORITIES would not comment on who has been paying the bills but added that someone had said that a small musicians' union in Haiti has taken up a collection.

A State Department spokesman discounted this theory on the basis that the outstanding ledical fees would be far in excess of monies raised by a "casual collection in Haiti".

Baltimore police Lt. Clarence Roy said his office was not at the present time interested in the case because the incident did not appen in Maryland.

Haiti, the one French-speaking republic in the Americas, has been the scene of constant political turmoil for more than 10 years.

Tourist spending and foreign investments have dwindled under the regime of Duvalier, who in June of 1964 was elected president of the republic for life.

Since that time the republic has experienced a number of attempted coups which have been crushed by the existing regime.

THE STATE Department is checking into any possible connection between Pacal and any Haitian group attempting to overthrow the present regime.

The spokesman at the State Department said he was surprised to learn that Pascal had claimed o be nephew of Duvalier.

Just when Pascal is expected to leave the hospital and return to Haiti is not known. Though the hospital would issue no official prognosis it was learned that the Haitian is paralyzed from the waist down.

He entered the United States on Feb. 26 at New York City on a visitor's visa which is valid until August of this nonsense."

THE TEENAGER told the AFRO that she wore the bows, as she did all of last year and many times this year because "I have soft hair and it doesn't hold curls.

"I had gone to the hairdresser's the day before and I wanted to keep the curls from falling out."

Miss Jackson said she met Miss Johnson in the hall shortly after 9 a.m. and was told, "take those ribbons off and take them off now."

"I just said 'I refuse,' and she told me to go to the office." the teenager recalled.

WHEN SHE insisted on wearing her ribbons following a confrontation with Miss Johnson and Cyrus Marshall, another vice principal, Miss Jackson quoted Mr. Marshall as saying, "go home and don't return until you bring your mother."

Reuben F. Jones, principal, was asked about the "bow incident" late Thursday.

"I don't know a thing about it," he replied adding that he would call back as soon as he conferred with the vice principals.

"It was just a routine thing." Mr. Jones said on his return call. "She was sent home by Miss Johnson and Mr. Marshall but was back in school within the hour. It was just a routine thing,"he repeated.

MISS JOHNSON was asked why the teenager was sent home.

"I don't see why that would be a story at all. The student's mother came in. She was very gracious lovely, and cooperative. It was all straightened out."

The vice principal added that the teenager's ouster was due to her "attitude."

"Why did you want the bows off?" she was asked

"We felt they were inappropriately displayed and inappropriate for a high school student."

The vice principal, pressed to explain why she considered the bows inappropriately displayed, had this to say:

"They were distracting. They looked like pigtails."

Miss Jackson said she has never worn "pigtails."

"Can I speak with Mr. Marshall?" a reporter asked Miss Johnson. "Just a minute," she answered.

Following a brief silence, Miss Johnson cameback on the line to report:

"Mr. Marshall is not available."

MISS JACKSON, who says she hopes to attend the University of Maryland when she graduates next year, is still in love with her bows:

"I have never had any problems in school and I don't want any now.

"I am going to still wear my bows — even if I can only wear them at home," she vowed.

—Dr. Rhetta in jail

physician failed to show up at the Alexandria trial, Judge Lewis issued a bench warrant.

DR. RHETTA was placed under arrest at his Annapolis offices April 14 by U.S. Deputy Marshals George McKinney and Earl Brown from the Baltimore Headquarters and transported to Baltimore at 8:15 a.m. to await arrival of the Virginia Federal deputies.

According to U.S. Marshal Frank Udall, Dr. Rhetta was confined to the Marshall's lockup at the Baltimore Post Office building until the Virginia deputies came.

Dressed in a dapper outfit, he wore a red coat and light trousers.

Marshal Udoff also revealed that Deputy U.S. Marshals McKinney and Brown have been cited for their work in executing the bench warrant from Virginia in less than 22 hours.

Unable to locate the physician at the Baltimore Hilton St. address, they followed information that led them to his ocean-going yatch tied up in Annapolis.

Subsequent information led them to the physician's office in Annapolis and they were able to take the physician into custody shortly after 8 a.m. there.

BEFORE Dr. Rhetta reappeared before Judge Lewis in the Virginia court, he was released on $2,500 bail.

Records show Dr. Rhetta reported to the Federal judge on Wednesday at 10 a.m.

According to his testimony, he was unable to appear at the white slavery trial because he had been called to New York to treat a patient who was threatening to commit suicide.

When Judge Lewis asked him to name the patient, the physician refused.

Before imposing the 30-day contempt sentence Judge Lewis informed Dr. Rhetta he could have invoked his Constitutional rights under the Fifth Amendment and declined to testify at the white slavery trial, if he had felt he would have been incriminating himself.

DR. RHETTA was summoned as a government witness in the white slavery case of the United States against Donald Pollock and others.

The white slavery law concerns transportation of a female across state lines for immoral purposes.

The wealthy physician is under two indictments for abortion in Baltimore and was charged by the Grand Jury here on Feb. 2 at special presentments.

Prosecuting witnesses are two women...both white, in their early 20's.

One, age 21, is a Summerville, Mass. resident and student at Radcliffe College, who according to the court records says she journeyed to Baltimore to see a physician after friends, Harvard students, made the recommendation.

Records also say the alleged operation was Sept. 8, 1966 in Baltimore and that the young woman returned to her Massachusetts hometown where she was confined to a hospital.

Also before the court are records that contend the other of the two young women, a Baltimorean, age 20, of the 1700 block Freedomway, allegedly underwent an operation Oct. 14 and later was confined to Union Memorial Hospital here.

ASSISTANT STATE'S ATTORNEY Raymond Faby of Baltimore recommended $5,000 bail be set in each case, making a total of $10,000. However, Dr. Rhetta was released on his own recognizance.

The physician was arraigned March 10 before Judge James A. Perrott in the Baltimore Criminal Court and represented by Attorney Joseph Kaufman.

Assistant States Attorney Faby has given Dr. Rhetta and his attorney an extention to April 21 (today, Friday) to file any motions before the court.

The trial will be set within 30 days, to come sometime in May, if no motions are filed. Mr. Faby states.

—Golf club may integrate

wrote the Park Board he was refused membership because of his race. He noted the club was using public property.

Subsequently, Douglas S. Tawney, director of Baltimore's parks, asked the City Solicitor's Office for an opinion.

In a 3-page document dated March 23, 1967, Joseph Allen, city solicitor, said not only is it contrary to law to allow a segregated group regularly to use public property but the Park Board has the responsibility to see that no such organization uses the property.

ON MARCH 27, Mr. Tawney informed Mr. Cupp by letter the membership would have to be open or (1) it shall be necessary for the club to discontinue meeting at the clubhouse (2) that all properties owned by the club including the membership list, should be remover.

Also, (3) all future activity of the group at the golf course including tornaments must be integrated or necessary permits will not be granted.

AT THE Park Board meeting Tuesday, Mr. Tawney was informed the golf club has not moved its possessions.

He stated, "I had word they might integrate, take in colored members. Maybe that's why."

Mr. Cupp said about three weeks ago a sign "Membership Open" was placed up on the clubhouse at Mr. Tawney's suggestion.

He told the AFRO that Mr. Murphy's application had not been fully received since the $3 membership fee was not attached.

He said previously Mr. Murphy asked that several applications be mailed to him. This was not done, nor the letter answered because as Mr. Cupp put it, "Whoever heard of sending applications through the mails. It just isn't done that way. We never heard any more from Mr. Murphy. He was never denied membership. We got another application but no
