Liquor Board swearing in set Monday

Elmer O. Harris and the other two members of Baltimore's new Liquor Board will be sworn in office 4:30 p.m. Monday in ceremonies at the Lord Baltimore Hotel.

The other two members are David Shay, who will be chairman, and Joseph G. Finnerty Jr.

All are appointees of the Republicans' new Gov. Spiro T. Agnew.

Mr. Harris, a communications clerk with the Baltimore Transit and Traffic Co., will be the first of his race to serve on this board in its history.

He is a veteran Republican party leader in the city and lives at 3025 Wolcott Ave. in the 5th District.

* * *

LIVING UP to a campaign promise to integrate this all-important board, Gov. Agnew named Mr. Harris in his first "Green Bag" appointments list.

Mr. Shay and Mr. Finnerty were named later in that order.

Following the ceremonies Monday afternoon, a reception will be held at the hotel.

Howard Henson, crane operator

Funeral services were held for Howard Henson, 55, 2427 W. Lanvale St., Thursday at St. James Methodist Church.

He was employed as a crane operator at Revere Copper and Brass company for 29 year. He was a member of St. James Methodist Church.

In addition to his wife, Mrs. Eliz Carter Henson, he is survived by two daughteers, Mrs. Beatrice Henson Smith one son, Howard Henson, Jr.; four grandchildren, one sister, Mrs. Julia Johnson, and a brother, John Henson all of Baltimore.

Interment was in Mt. Calvary Cemetery.

Welfare strike appears certain for next week

Baltimore welfare workers have apparently rejected a last minute appeal for patience by Raleigh C. Hobson, director of the State Department of Welfare, and a strike scheduled for Monday will take place unless salary demands are met.

Mr. Hobson said that state officials are working on a new pay schedule for all state employees and that there is a good chance that starting salaries for welfare workers will be raised to $6,000 per year.

The welfare union wants starting salaries raised from $5,350 to $6,321. Baltimore caseworkers' salaries are paid by the state and the $6,321 is the figure recommended for city jobs which require a college degree.

Mrs. Terry Bloch, an official of the Social Service Union, said that Hobson's plea for an extension on the strike deadline, was proof that the strike had been timed right.

The state legislative council is scheduled to meet on new salary requirements next week.

Home show is May 3-4

Baltimore homemakers are getting ready to take part in two big days at the AFRO's 37th Cooking School and Home Service Exhibition.

Not only will they have a chance to learn new and exciting methods for preparing foods but will also have the opportunity to share $1,000 in cash and other valuable prizes.

The show will begin at 6 p.m., May 3, at the Winchester Armory, located at the corner of Winchester St. and Braddish Ave.

On Thursday, May 4, a matinee show will begin at 2 p.m. and run until 5:30 p.m.

This will be followed Thursday night at 6 p.m. by the regular show.

* * *

AFRO home economist Mimi Roberts will be on stage demonstrating the very latest methods in the presentation and preparation of exciting, economical dishes.

Prizes in addition to the $1,500 cash will include a modern stove and a refrigerator as well as 150 prize food baskets stuffed to the brim with items from participants in the show.

Admission for each session of the show is .50.

Participants for this year's show include Washington Flour Co., National Beer, Schmidt Bakery, Koesters Bakery, Hauswalds Bakery, Carlings Black Label Beer,

Youth charged in death at amusement park

One teenager has been charged and two others are awaiting waiver of their juvenile status in the fatal stabbing of a 17-year-old high school student last Sunday at Gwynn Oak Amusement Park.

Charged is Dennis Leslie Goburn, 18, of the 3300 block Burleith Ave.

The dead youth, Jackie Covington, of the 2800 block Riggs Ave., received multiple stab wounds on the crowded midway of the park, near the bumper-car ride.

* * *

POLICE RECOVERED a screwdriver and another weapon near the scene of the incident.

Baltimore County police said they believed the homicide grew from a stabbing incident at the park a week before.

The other two suspects, youths aged 17 and 16, will be brought to a hearing for waiver of their juvenile status next week, police said.

No figures yet on new school plan

By ROGER J. NISSLY

The Department of Education still has no figures showing whether a plan adopted last week for distributing first year high school students from overcrowded schools will hinder integration.

Under the plan, this week letters are being sent out to ninth grade junior high school students notifying them that they received either their first or second choice high schools.

Jerry Cohen, a special assistant directing the Central Admisaions Office, said Wednesday that he does not believe the figures in question "have been captured in any way."

He added that the figure may be available "later on", after the department completes the massive task of mailing out the letters.

ACCORDING to Mr. Cohen, all except about 10 percent of the new high school students received their first choice

Harlem Park study project aids young, older citizens

By STERLING A. PAIGE

Anyone who doubts that people want to improve themselves educationally and culturally need only drop over to Harlem Ave. and Gilmor St. about 6 p.m. of any weekday.

There can be seen a hustle and bustle of hundreds of adults and children, making their way to School 78.

There is no legal compulsion to attend this school. The older ones are well above the age limit and include many grandmothers and grandfathers. Most of the young ones already have attended their regular day classes.

Common to these people is a compelling drive for self-improvement, a determination to grasp at the opportunity to prepare themselves for a better way of life, an opportunity many never had before.

They are heading for another session of the Neighborhood School for Parents at the Harlem Park Evening Center.

INTO THE brightly-lighted classrooms go the parents to study reading, mathmatics, even simple arithmetic. Some are taking the High School Equivalency Training Course to prepare them for taking an examination, passage of which would gain for them a high-school diploma.

Others study typing, office machine operation, sewing, foods and cooking, basic electricity and home nursing.

Then there are those who, never having learned to read, labor with letters and sounds that might help them achieve the now-phenomenal task of writing their names or reading a newspaper. Or maybe to help them to read the name of a product on a tele-

Clash with police brings heavy fines

A municipal court judge Wednesday complimented a police sergeant for his cool-headed handling of a potential riot situation in the Northwest District last week.

Judge Albert H. Blum stated he wanted to "congratulate Sgt. (Howard) Parrott on the way he handled this situation" in which a husband and wife were later charged with assault, including a charge of striking a policeman in the face.

Sgt. Parrott testified that a crowd of about 200 people, some of them jeering, gathered at the intersection of Delaware and Virginia Aves. Sunday, April 16, to watch police break up an altercation.

* * *

THE DISTURBANCE grew out of the husband's, Melvin Lomax, 17, of the 4700 block Delaware Ave., attempt, according to police, to draw a crowd as he was being questioned about assaulting another man.

He was arrested for disturbing the peace.

Officers said his wife, Mrs. Sandra Lomax," 18, of the

Redistricting to face court

By MAX JOHNSON

A challenge to the validity of Baltimore's new councilmanic districts begins Monday morning in U.S. District Court here before Judge Roszel C. Thomsen.

It is a suit filed by Councilman Larry S. Best (3rd D.) against the voter-adopted Modified Bard Plan, which sets a realignment of new district boundaries in conformity with the one man, one vote edict.

City voters gave this plan an overwhelming approval at the polls last November over

Wild dogs not expected to attack children

The recent attack, by a pack of wild dogs on a number of animals at the Baltimore Zoo, has caused concern among inner-city residents who feel that there is a possibility that the dogs might attack humans, especially children.

But George W. Schucker, assistant commissioner of health said this week, that though the city is faced with an unusually large number of stray dogs, there is little if any chance that the attacks would be directed toward humans.

"Dogs are in some respect like people," he said.

"They will follow a leader and most of the time they attack only when they need food.

"There have been a number of instances in the country in which packs of dogs have attacked domestic animals but in only a few cases have they attacked people.

"You won't find many dogs attacking people or animals in cities because food is rather easy for them to find. The incident at the Baltimore Zoo is an exception. There was no

Low-income housing plan gets favorable reception at hearing

A proposal, designed to promote home ownership among low-income, inner city families, was given a warm reception Wednesday at its initial airing in City Council.

Authored by City Council President Thomas D'Alesandro II, the proposal, Resolution 1967, was debated in a public hearing conducted by the Housing Committee, chaired by Henry G. Parks Jr. (D., 4th).

Richard L. Steiner, director of the Baltimore Urban Renewal and Housing Agency, strongly urged adoption of the resolution and suggested the council explore the possibility of tying the project in with Federal efforts now being made in this direction.

Due to a restriction of opportunities and means for inner city residents to own homes, any realistic program should consider two factors, Mr. Steiner declared.

These include the need to create significant home ownership opportunities outside the inner city for those now living within or to undertake a large-scale program to make major changes in environmental and housing conditions within, Mr. Steiner told the committee.

* * *

WHILE EITHER approach will be "fraught with difficulties" and expensive, the BURHA director declared, "neither is as costly as would be a continued tolerance of blight, deterioration, and human impoverishment."

Non existent city capital to finance the venture should spur the effort to involve the Federal Government and private industry using the pending Demonstration Cities Program to facilitate the former, he said.

As explained by Mr. D'Alesandro, his plan would enable low-income families, many of whom are now living in housing projects, to buy new or renovated homes on investments consistent with their income.

This includes low interest, small down payments, and long-term mortgages.

* * *

SPOKESMEN FOR the building industry, real estate dealers, and the finance industry supported the plan and Mr. Parks said views of other experts in the field will be solicited and examined before the committee acts on the resolution.

No date was set for the next public hearing.

SS summer Jobs open for youths

Approximately 250 youth opportunity corpsmen, aged 16 to 21 and from low income families, are expected to be hired for summer jobs by the Social Security Administration at the Woodlawn headquarters.

To be eligible for participation in the program, students will only be hired if they need summer earnings to continue their schooling. Persons not in school must need the earnings to resume their education.

Interested persons should apply at the Youth Opportunity Center, 1727 N. Charles St., or the Department of Employment Security, 311 E. Pennsylvania Ave. in Towson.

Honor society at Morgan initiates 46

Some 46 Morgan State College students were initiated into Promethean Kappa Tau Honor Society for freshmen and sophomores recently in Murphy Auditorium.

Dr. Albert N. Whiting, who will leave Morgan in July to become president of North Carolina College at Durham, was made an honorary member of the society because of his challenge to the students for the pursuit of excellence. Miss Stefanie Woolridge, president of PKT presented Dr. Whiting a key and certificate.

The honor students are from six states and the District of Columbia, including 31 from Maryland, six from Pennsylvania, four from Virginia and one each from Delaware, Georgia, New Jersey and Missouri.

Miss Brenda Joyce Williams of Baltimore, leads the list with the highest average. Others are:

Balto. County's PACE backs new housing law

The open-housing legislation recently enacted by the Maryland legislature has won strong support from PACE, the Political Action Committee of Educators of Baltimore County, and the bi-partisan group has called upon all citizens to abide by the legislation and become better acquainted with a larger segment of their community.

"Youngsters are not exposed to the real world when they are segregated exclusively into white, colored, or any other type of community," Carroll Miles, president of PACE, asserted.

"It is important to the future lives of all of our children that everyone, regardless of race or religion, is accepted on individual merit and exposed to the same advantages.

"Moreover, we are especially concerned that members of the teaching profession, whom we hope to be educated, responsible citizens, are now denied the right to live near their colleagues."

MR. MILES said that members of PACE will "actively oppose" anyone or any group that questions the propriety of the recently-enacted open-housing legislation which allows present dwellings to remain on a status-quo basis out requires that new housing must be open to all persons.

"We know that most citizens of Baltimore County realize the equity of the legislation, and we plan to do everything in our power to educate any others," he said.

"If persons wish to live in certain circumstances of their own free will, that is one thing, but to be forced by narrow-minded individuals to live under these conditions, without legal recourse, cannot be tolerated by fair-minded persons."

Membership in PACE is open to all Baltimore County educators. Now in its second year of operation, PACE is dedicated to securing qualified candidates for public office, supporting equitable and just legislation, and encouraging good government.
