Project Mission digs in on goal of readying inner-city teachers

By ROGER J. NISSLY

Tickets for the special presentation of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" were available "without regard to race, color or creed," the college senior told his fellow students.

The humorous overstatement brought laughs from the other 26 prospective teachers enrolled in Project Mission and underscored the realistic approach to this experimental program to teaching in the inner city.

One complaint of some educators, especially those studying the responses of inner city children to teaching, is that often the teachers who are least equiped — psychologically or otherwise — for ghetto schools are the ones that end up there.

These are the teachers who have themselves made their way out of the ghetto and cannot empathize sufficiently with the children still there, a feeling summed up in the phrase, "I made it, Why can't you?"

THE CRITICS point out that such teachers have somewhere gained an orientation to education (enabling them to do well in school and make it out) which is lacking in their young counterparts.

The fact is being recognized that in Baltimore, like many large cities, the majority of school children will soon be urban-oriented and disadvantaged.

The answer to two questions must be found: how to recruit teachers who want to teach in the inner city schools and how to train them so they will be equipped to succeed with the special problems in the inner for the interns ends about 5 p.m. every day and includes five college courses leading to 34 credits.

In addition the interns are expected to provide enrichment experiences for their pupils, such as field trips on Saturdays.

The interns teach in three city schools: Margaret Brent and Columbus Elementary Schools and Clifton Park Junior High. The college courses are held in a specially equipped seminar room in the Brent School, at 26th and St. Paul Sts.

Both the director, Jacob Epstein, and assistant director Mrs. Cecelia Fink, are voluble in their enthusiasm for the program.

THE PROGRAM questions all conventional ways of teaching, says Mr. Epstein. For example, "Why should every child be taught 'Julius Ceasar'?" he asks

"Here is a child ready to go out and earn a living," Mr. Epstein answers, "and you're teaching him 'Julius Caesar.' "

"There are many inovative things going on," he continues, "new things, new methods. We try to teach the students in ways relative to their experiences."

Inovation in the teaching has included: the use of video tape recording of the teacher's performance, demonstration classes, educational games and paperback book saturation of the classroom.

The latter features paperback racks of books (like those found in drugstores) which have been found to simulate the youngsters' interest in reading. Over 1,500 such books have been

Perhaps the main accomplishment of the project will have been the forcing of colleges to take stock of their training for inner city teaching, and the setting up of many guidelines for such courses.

Second, the project directors hope it will have the effect of making inner city teaching exciting and interesting. It has for the interns in the program.

There is a ray of hope: one local college is planning a course of study especially for training inner city teachers—a course which will carry on the work of Project Mission after the end of its three-year grant.

Rawls show set at Civic Center

Lou Rawls, Capitol Records No. 1 recording artist will be at Baltimores' Civic Center for one show on May 19, at 8:30.

Rawls just passed the five million dollar mark in record sales since April 1966. With him on the show will be two other attractions.

M.C. will be "Fat Daddy" Johnson of radio station WWIN. Ticket prices are $2.50, $3.50, $4.50 and reportedly going fast.

'Restless Ones' to Civic Center

The stark realism of teenagers groping for meaning and direction in their lives and the problems this creates for them, and for their parents, is the engrossing subject of the motion picture, "The Restless Ones," making its

Nixon begins new assignment

John G. Williams, superintendent of the Baltimore City Bureau of Recreation, has announced the appointment of L. Clements Nixon as unit director for the bureau, eriective May 1.

Mr. Nixon's latest assignment has been as district supervisor for the Bureau of Recreation. Mr. Nixon came to the Bureau of Recreation after graduating from Douglass High School and Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va.

His recreation assignment included South Baltimore Recreation Center, Peach Street and Chick Webb Memorial Center.

WHILE SERVING with the Army druing World War II, Mr. Nixon served in Europe as a First Lieutenant.

Mr. Nixon's present assignment include the supervisors of the Northwestern and Southwestern sections of Baltimore City, as well as specialists in the field of Boys' and Men's and Girls' and Women's Activities, and Music and Dramatics.

Mr. Nixon, his wife and two sons reside on Dennlyn Road.

Mrs. Manns, 63, stroke victim

Funeral rites for Mrs. Carmilla Manns, 2821 W. North Ave., were held Wednesday at the Gospel Tabernacle Church, where she sang on the choir.

Mrs. Manns, 63, died of a stroke in the City Hospitals on May 6, a week and a half after she entered the hospital.

Born in Rocky Mount, N.C., Mrs. Manns came to Baltimore when she was in her twenties. For a part of her life she worked as a domestic.

She is survived by her husband, Samuel Manns, a son, George Presley, and a granddaughter.

Fallon urged to back Powell

Maryland's Congressman George H. Fallon was urged this week to support the seating of Adam Clyaton Powell, and to influence Baltimore's other two congressmen to do likewise.

In a letter to Congressman Fallon, Greenville B. Whitman, 2809 N. Calvert St., gave these four reasons why he thought it vitally necessary Mr. Powell should be returned to his House of Representatives seat:

"1. To seat Mr. Powell would help heal some deeply-rubbed and raw nerves in the American colored community, not only in Harlem but around the country.

"2. In the present racial crisis in the United States, unseating Mr. Powell was, in effect, a racist act and this will have pernicious results in the immediate months to come.

"3. The unseating of Mr. Powell is legally questionable and failure to resolve the contradictions involved here may lead to a grave constitutional crisis.

"4. Mr. Powell has erred more, perhaps, than some of his colleagues, less, perhaps, than others. Public opinion of Congressional ethics, never very high, is now at an all-time low and the high-handed unseating of Mr. Powell has led to justifiable crises of Hypocrisy."
