'Bride' Waited For Dope Victim

Cain denies racist role on docks

By STERLING A. PAIGE

The presidents of two Baltimore waterfront locals, along with International Vice President William (Bill) Haile, have been elected as delegates to the July convention of the International Longshoremen's Association in Miami.

Hershey Richardson and Mr. Haile will represent Local 858, while Lewis Carr will be the accredited delegate from Local 1429. Mr. Haile is a former president of 858.

John Kopp, former president of Local 829, was defeated in his attempt to serve as an accredited delegate from his old local.

Mr. Kopp, now an Atlantic Coast District vice president, will go to the convention as District representative but will not be able to serve on committees for Local 829, nor cast votes committing the membership of that local.

• • •

OBSERVERS SAY the defeat of Kopp was engineered by Local 829 president, Joseph T. Cain, who was elected as delegate over Kopp by a 2-to-1 margin.

Cain is also candidate for the Atlantic Coast District vice presidency now held by Kopp.

The Monday election was seen as a test of the chain's strength in the Port of Baltimor and indicates the 1400-member ILA local stands ready to back the power play of the controversial Cain.

The rivalry between Cain and Kopp for the District seat will be resolved at the July convention.

Mr. Kopp is now second in command in the port of Baltimore and the Atlantic Coast District, while the presidency of ACD rests in Thomas W. Gleason, also international president of the ILA.

• • •

CONTENDING FOR Gleason's position as Atlantic Coast president is Anthony Scotto, president of Brooklyn, N.Y. Local 1814.

The suave, college-educated Scotto is backing Cain's attempt to gain more power in the Port of Baltimore and in

Agnew to probe city draft boards

Gov. Spiro T. Agnew said Thursday he is "quite concerned" over the racial imbalance and non-city residency among members of Baltimore's draft boards and is launching an immediate investigation.

The initial steps, the governor said, will determine, to what extent he has legal authority to intervene to rectify matters.

A recent survey showed that 16 of 83 Baltimore draft board members live outside the city, and only 5 of the 83 are colored, though 42 percent of the city's population is non-white.

In addition, it was disclosed that of the 67 living in the city 43 of them do not reside in the areas served.

"I am quite concerned about this imbalance that exists on Baltimore's draft boards," Gov. Agnew stated, including the small number of colored members.

"And I intend to make a complete study of the matter, with a determination of my legal authority in recommending changes."

• • •

MEANWHILE Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin announced he is asking Col. James Leslie Hays 3rd, director of Selective Service in Maryland, to replace the nonresident draft board members with city residents as soon as possible.

"I consider," the mayor said, "recent revelations about the composition of city draft boards as posing a possible denial of constitutional rights to many of our city's youth.

"I specifically am very much concerned about the disclosure that non-city residents are serving on city draft boards, since this is in conflict with both the spirit and the letter of selective service regulations."

Earlier, Col. Hays agreed that it is vital that members should reside in the areas covered.

The draft story breakdown followed an AFRO story which disclosed that 26 percent of Maryland's deaths in Vietnam are non-white, though only 16.7 percent of the state's population is colored.

Teachers' election to be held June 16

In unilateral action yesterday, the School Board moved several steps closer to setting up ground rules for the election among teachers to select an exclusive negotiating agent.

A meeting called in the morning for the rival groups—Baltimore Teachers Union and Public School Teachers Association — broke up when the BTU walked out, charging the PSTA with "stalling."

Dr. Laurence G. Paquin, school superintendent, who had called the morning meeting, later formulated the recommendations on the election, which were passed unanimously by the School Board.

• • •

THE RECOMMENDATIONS followed the wording of the enabling ordinance passed on second reading by City Council the night before, but added these three new points:

1. A date for the election was set, June 16, the last day of school for teachers, when pupils will not be present.

2. The costs of the election will be paid by the Department of Education.

3. The Board of School Commissioners will employ the American Arbitration Association to conduct the election in accordance with recommendations, rules and guidelines to be adopted by the Board.

• • •

THE RECOMMENDATIONS, like the City Council ordinance, stated that an election would be held at a later date to select a representative for any person-

6 million votes cast in contest

"Oh my aching back," said the little man in the blue uniform as he left AFRO building early Thursday morning. "I've never in my life had to deliver such a flood of mail before."

And the AFRO postman, with the bent back, probably has good reason to complain because he has delivered more than 6 million votes to the AFRO's contest editor since the Student of the Year Contest began.

Unless the postmaster puts another carrier on the route our postman won't find any relief because his old mail sack is getting heavier and heavier with each new delivery.

DENISE BRANDON, a student at Northern High School has certainly done her part to increase the mailman's dilemma.

Thomas Small of Calverton High School is in fourth place with 253,100 votes.

It looks as if this year's student contest will be one of the best we've had.

And there is still time to help your favorite student win a share in the AFRO's $1,500 prize bag.

Lottery trial gets big name

The first section of a numbers trial that exposed how a big lottery operation works ended Wednesday in Criminal Court when Milton Howard Boardley, 35, 3800 block Roland View Ave., was found guilty of conspiracy.

Convicted mainly on the all-revealing testimony of a former "employee" and admitted co-conspirator, Mrs. Gertrude Jenkins, Boardley was fined $1,000 and sentenced to one year in prison by Judge J. Harold Grady.

Boardley, a well-known Avenue figure, posted $2,500 bail since he is appealing the verdict.

The second section of the trial that has heard Julius (Lord) Salsbury of the Block's Oasis Night Club described as "Big Boss," a phone number (LE. 9-2779) given and legendary "turnin" men named such as "Bo Jack," "Roughhouse" and some 18 others, begins next Wednesday, June 7.

At that time, Boardley will be arraigned before Judge Grady in his "Numbers Court" on a charge of lottery violation in what has been called one of the largest operations ever to come before the court.

The actual trial, the third section, will also be called up next week, according to pro-

NAACP publishes school texts list

NEW YORK — Roy Wilkins, executive director of the NAACP, announced the publication of the association's "Integrated School Books" listing which covers a range of 399 titles of pre-school and elementary subject textbooks and story books together with annotations indicating the extent of "integration" reflected in each publication.

This project represents a major factor in the accelerated NAACP campaign to make school curricula reflective of the racial diversity of American life.

As Francis Keppel, former United States Commissioner of Education, said in his Forward, "The nation has begun to learn how tragically blind we really were. Simply because we did not see the colored person, we left him out of our records — thereby distorting the black man's history and the white's as well.

"But the schools have less reason than the rest of us, perhaps, to remain blind. Because of our past, we must ask our schools to be especially clear-sighted in the future," he said.

• • •

MR. WILKINS said, "In the crucial effort to guarantee to all our children white and black, a curriculum that makes sense in a multi-racial society, such a listing is long overdue.

"We believe that publication of this bibliography and its conscientious use will not only meet an immediate need in scores of communities, but will help to accelerate the attainment everywhere of curriculum and materials adequate to the times."

Miss June Shagaloff, NAACP director for education program, who is directing the project, said the association has two goals in mind in making this listing available. "First, we want to show school officials, parents and interested community groups that multi-ethnic texts are available.

"Second, we will urge that these books are used in both public and private school systems for all children. There is no longer any excuse for using the outmoded textbooks which pretend that our country is entirely white

Wedding guests felt dead man had got scared

By ROGER J. NISSLY

"I thought maybe he was in a car accident. I sat up in the room. I was upset. Then I ran out of the house to look for him, but I couldn't find him."

The distraught bride-to-be described what her feelings were on Saturday night, which was to have been her wedding night, when her intended husband never arrived.

Instead he kept an earlier date with death, from an overdose of narcotics, police said.

• • •

THE 21-YEAR-OLD prospective bride, Miss Christine Brooks, of the 600 block N. Payson St., recounted how she and 80 friends waited for the intended bridegroom to appear for the wedding, which was set for 8 p.m. in her and her mother's house.

"They thought maybe he had backed out," she said, "but I knew something had happened to him."

At the hour set for his wedding, William Joseph Gibbs, 22, of the 400 block Robert St., was lying in the Baltimore City Morgue. Police were unable to identify his body.

His body was carried to Provident Hospital at 12:15 that morning by two unidentified men and pronounced dead on arrival from what doctors believed to be an overdose of narcotics, police said.

Western District police also reported that doctors found numerous needle marks on the body of the man.

The bridegroom-to-be was found without identification and police followed several false leads until they were able to ascertain his identity through fingerprints sent to the Bureau of Identification.

The family was notified Monday morning of his death.

When the wedding failed to proceed, it was decided to continue with the reception, with hopes the young intended groom would appear.

"The minister was late, so we thought he might be late too," recalled Mrs. Daisy Brooks, mother of the bride-to-be.

"But all the people thought maybe he got cold feet," she added.

Not knowing the man she had been engaged to for a year and a half was dead, the disturbed Miss Brooks finally had to run out of the house.

The guests had arrived in a jubilant mood for the wedding, bearing gifts for the newly-married couple.

• • •

THEY HAD, 'some' kind of gifts," observed a next door neighbor, Mrs. Carrie James, who had been invited to the wedding-reception.

"The friends said I could keep the gifts, after my father explained to them what had happened," Miss Brooks said.

Stokely says he's marked for death

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Stokely Carmichael accused police Tuesday of trying to assassinate him by starting a racial riot in hopes of making him a street target for police guns.

Carmichael told a news conference that 100 policemen blocked streets in the area where he was staying during last month's rioting at Fisk University.

"One officer started shooting," he said, "in hopes that when we came outside, they could shoot us down in the street."

When no one left the apartment building, Carmichael said, police broke in and "placed bottles in there so they could accuse people of making molotov cocktails."

• • •

APPEARING WITH Carmichael at the conference was Rap Brown, who succeeded him as chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC).

Brown said that as a result of police action during the riots, Nashville has been chosen as SNCC's prime project area.

Brown said SNCC's activities would be concerned with "field operations" and would include an anti-draft project in high schools. He declined further elaboration.

Carmichael, who recently stepped down as chairman of SNCC, said that Capt. John Sorace, head of the Metropolitan Police Department's intelligence division, had testified that police had Carmichael under surveillance here.

He said officers knew he was staying at a Jefferson Street address on the night that rioting broke out near Fisk University and started firing into the air only a few houses down the street.

The controversial youth leader said officers had intended to block off the area

Will Mello be by-passed in new police promotions?

(AN EDITORIAL)

The retirement of Deputy Police Commissioner George H. Deuchler, effective this week and the death last week of Police Maj. Vincent DePaul Gavin, head of the Division of Inspectional Services, has set off a chain reaction which will see at least five officers moving into the high echelon.

The death of Maj. Gavin, who guided the State's Attorney's Investigation Bureau from its inception in 1950 until he was put in charge of the Division of Inspectional Services a year ago, opens the way for a promotion for Capt. Dennis P. Mello.

Capt. Mello, currently commanding the Western District, and the first person of his race to be promoted to
