D'Alesandro urges counties to go against discrimination

"If we are to build a healthy environment for all of the 2,000,000 people who now inhabit the Baltimore metropolitan region, then, we must remove the bars of discrimination in the housing market we operate, in the educational systems we support and in the employment opportunities we encourage."

Thomas D'Alesandro 3rd, City Council president, will urge these guidelines today (Friday) for better race relations in the Baltimore metropolitan area.

The occasion is the 12 noon luncheon program, Breakthrough: the Challenge of Regional Cooperation, at the Samuel Ready School, 5150 Baltimore National Pike.

Featured speaker is Carl Rowan, columnist and TV commentator.

Mr. D'Alesandro is appearing with county heads on a panel from Harford, Carroll, Anne Arundel, Baltimore and Howard Counties.

Hypnosis case back to court 10 a.m. today

Today (Friday) has been set for the hearing in Criminal Court Part II on the motion for a new trial made by James Milton Harding the defendant in the "Hypnosis Case."

Judge James A. Perrott who presided at the 6-day jury trial week before last will hear the new trial argument by attorneys for the Howard County man at 10 a.m.

If Harding loses the chance to return his case to court, he could get as much as 99 years since the crimes of which he has been found guilty carry unlimited number of years in sentence.

Angelos gets McCourt support

State Sen. Frank J. McCourt (2nd D.) surprised many of his wellwishers Wednesday by announcing his support of Peter G. Angelos for the Democratic nomination for mayor.

Mr. Angelos is a former City Council representative of the 3rd District, who consistently fought all civil rights proposals that came before that body during his 1959-63 tenure in office.

He was soundly defeated in his bid in 1963 for president of the City Council, largely due to his loss of the colored vote.

Sen. McCourt, on the other hand, has established himself as a liberal minded young lawmaker. He pressed unsuccessfully during the past General Assembly session for rent escrow legislation, to force landlords to maintain rental properties in safe and sanitary conditions.

CAR VICTIM

'He was a fine boy-'

"He was a very fine little boy . . . a fine looking child with big impressive eyes . . . we will all miss him very much. . ."

An aide at Baer School No. 301 was speaking of seven-year-old John McLean, 925 N. Gilmor St.

The partially deaf youngster was killed by a car at Gilmor and Mosher Sts.

Funeral services were held Thursday at the Hayes Funeral Home. Burial was in Mt. Auburn Cemetery.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy McLean; and three brothers and a sister.

Mrs. Madeline Murphy ko's 'name's-the-same' gimmick

"I just get sick and tired of that 'name's-the-same' business. I decided to fight it. And I won."

Mr. Madeline W. Murphy, 3217 Round Rd., mother of five and perennial civic battler, was telling Wednesday how she chalked up a major victory this week when she forced the Board of Supervisors of Elections to list candidates for the Constitutional Convention horizontally, rather than vertically.

Unhappy over what she termed "the names's the same is the name of the game in the Sixth District," Mrs. Murphy attempted originally to get the Supervisors of Elections to list the candidates' names in a single line across the ballot.

This request was refused on grounds that it was customary to list candidates in several vertical columns.

REPRESENTED BY her husband William H. Murphy Sr. and Milton B. Allen, Mrs. Murphy took her case to Superior Court Judge Edwin J. Wolfe, who ruled in her favor.

He held:

"In this instance the arrangement of the names should be in a column from left to right. And, if needed

Mrs. Murphy never shuns a good fight

How many persons you know can walk right into any situation and usually come out a winner like Cherry Hill's Mrs. Madeline Wheeler Murphy?

Very few have the luck.

However, with this leading woman citizen it's more than luck.

In civic and political affairs, with Mrs. Murphy it's a keen, alert mind, sharp decision, courage to dare to buck tradition when she's convinced she's right and power to go straight away and do the deed.

Mrs. Murphy's latest feat concerned her position as a Sixth District candidate on the June 13 Constitutional Convention Ballot.

Her name was listed in the vertical columns where it could not been seen advantageously. In addition, above and below her name were "two other Murphys" names, a situation she did

BBB warning on free wigs

The Better Business Bureau reports it has had numerous complaints about a wig company operating out of a nearby city.

The company has begun doing some business in Baltimore, the Bureau says, by sending cards at random to persons stating they have "won" a free wig.

After this initiating move, the "winner" is asked to pay only a fee for styling the wig — about $13 for two stylings — and the wig will be sent for no further charge.

But when the wig arrives, in the words of one recipient, "it looks like it could sell for a dollar and a quarter anywhere."

THE BETTER Business Bureau said the BBB office in the home city of the firm has received 147 complaints against the company, and now the complaints are starting to filter in here.

The wigs are not made of human hair, but of "animal hair, synthetic hair or fiber," according to the Bureau.

FRANK ROBINSON

Frank upset by pitcher

ANAHEIM, Calif. — "There are no two ways about it. Jim Coates just doesn't like our (colored) people. It is as simple as that."

This open and undiluted charge of race prejudice was voiced by Frank Robinson, the Baltimore Orioles leading hitter and offensive star, following Tuesday's attempted "beaning" by Coates, veteran righthanded pitcher of the California Angels.

ROBINSON, discussing incidents which occurred during Tuesday's and Wednesday's games here, told the AFRO Thursday morning that he "knows" Coates tried to hit him with a pitched ball at the height of the Angels' double shellacking by Baltimore.

"It was definitely not a case of his being irked by the beating," said Robinson "Coates just doesn't like our people. He has a history of racial animosity that colors him all the way back through the minor leagues.

"AS FOR his contention that he didn't try to hit me it's ridiculous. Everybody on both clubs knew his intention. So did the fans.

"There are no two ways about it. It is Jim's way of doing things when a colored player is involved. He hit me in the 1961 World Series when he relieved for the Yankees in the second game.

"Hank Bauer (Oriole manager) knows he tried to knock me down and said as much," Robinson concluded.

BAUER, HIMSELF a former teammate of Coates on the Yankees, declared: "I'd say he tried purposely to hit Frank. He's had that reputation for a long time."

Coates had argued that there was no intent in the pitch which felled Frank here Tuesday night.

"I didn't hit him, did I? If I had wanted to I sure could."

AT THE same time that Robby confirmed his accusation of Coates, the Bird slugger exonerated rookie Jim McGlothlin, who struck him on the right hand during the Tuesday will be a state holiday, as Maryland holds its much heralded, special Constitutional Convention election.

In Baltimore, a total of 410,163 registered voters 142,677 of them colored, are eligible to cast ballots.

Polls, as in other elections, will be open here from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m.

There are 272 candidates trying for this city's allotment of 43 seats.

Several hundred more are in races elsewhere throughout the state for the 99 seats alloted to Maryland's 23 counties.

The Convention will have a total of 142 delegates, with the same allotment to each political subdivision as it has House of Delegates seats.

The districts, their seats and the number of candidates in each are:

1st (six seats) —36; 2nd (eight seats) —59; 3rd (eight seats) — 63; 4th (seven seats) — 27; 5th (seven seats) — 56; 6th (seven seats) — 31.

Candidates will be listed alphabetically in lines across the ballot here, rather than in vertical lines up and down.

This is the result of a Court of Appeals ruling in a case filed and won by Mrs. Madeline W. Murphy, of Cherry Hill, a 6th District candidate.

Contest hits home stretch with flurry

You only have eight more days students.

That's right. Just eight more days before the AFRO's Student of the Year contest comes to an end.

And who do you think you are fooling?

Don't you know that the AFRO's contest editor knows about all those votes that "certain" students are saving up for the last splash . . . in that dash . . . for AFRO cash?

Do it that way if you want. It's legal. But remember that a lot of other cracker-jacks out there have the same idea.

Anyway it's sure going to make for one of the most exciting . . . inviting . . and stiff competition fighting events that the AFRO contest editor has every seen.

And that good old Baltimor postmaster has had to put three more mailmen on the route to help out that poor fellow we told you about last week.

THE DECKS are clear . . . the contest editor is here . . . and she has no fear of the dilluge of votes she knows will soon be pouring into her office.

To date, the AFRO has received 7,320,900 votes.

Denise Brandon of Northern High School is still in the lead with 551,800 votes.

Fairmont Hill's Howard K. Johnson (Howard we know what your program is) is in second place with 345,100 votes.

Brenda Pretlow of Edmondson High holds down the third place slot this week with 327,800 and in the number four position is Thomas Small with 286,200 votes. By the way Thomas we know your road game too.

Western's Vonnetters Saunders has 260,400 votes to anchor down fifth place.

BUT THOSE are just openers. Any day now the contest will pop wide open as it goes down to the wire . . . like a ball of fire. . .or Galent Fox's size.

Draft Bd, head sends in list

While Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin was issuing a plea to leaders in the colored community in an attempt to find qualified citizens to be appointed to state draft boards, state selective service chief Col. James Hays was busy mustering up a list of his own.

Twelve of the 16 non-resident members of Baltimore city draft boards resigned this week and the other four are expected to resign as soon as they return to the city.

Col. Hays announced the resignations after a week of controversy which disclosed that the 16 members did not even live in the city from which they selected young men for military service.

traveled from Pascagonia, Miss. to see him graduate from the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Wednesday morning.

For Ensign Huey and 888 other graduates of the academy, it was a day that culminated four years of study and the beginning of new duties and responsibilities as officers in the United States Navy.

Huey, one of two colored graduates in the Class of 1967, is a 24-year-old native of Pascagonia.

AFTER THE graduation exercises and the Commissioning ceremonies, at which Vice-President Hubert Humphrey delivered the commencement address, Huey paused on a stadium ramp-way only long enough to present the first underclassman to salute him a crisp, new one-dollar bill.

"It's all a part of the academy's tradition," the new officer explained as he waded through the crowds in search of his family.

FOUR NAVY jets, flying in tight formation over the Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium, in which the ceremonies were held, drowned out the shouts of "Congratulations, Calvin," as his mother and aunt spotted him from an upper stadium tier.

Miss Joyce Phelps, Huey's fiancee and a teacher at the Kent Junior High School in Prince Georges County, was the first to congratulate the newly commissioned Naval ensign.

A smile of pride and accomplishment flashed across Huey's sharp-featured face as Joyce pinned the epaulets signifying officers rank on his starch-stiffened uniform.

"IT'S THE day we have all waited for," said his mother, Mrs. Eartha Huey.

The feelings she held for her son who had come from the state of Mississippi and graduated from one of the nation's top military institutions, more than compensated for the 1,400-mile trip she had made to Annapolis.

Also here from Mississippi were his sister, Linda, and an aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Campbell.

Dr. Paquin to push school staff mixing

By ROGER J. NISSLY

Expanding on his statement that criticism from teachers groups is sure to follow a superintendent's assignment of teachers to bolster integration, Dr. Laurence G. Paquin said this week he does intend to push for a large jump in the number of integrated faculties next year.

In a report to the School Board on integration of school staff last Thursday, Dr. Paquin observed that "the superintendent has the authority (to move teachers) — but if he chooses to exercise his authority, he leaves himself open to attack."

The superintendent cited the positions of the two rival teachers organizations, among them the public statement that "forced transfers are contrary to good personnel practices and good human relations."

REFERRING to the report this week, Dr. Paquin said he has instructed his assistant superintendents for both elementary and secondary education "to take a good hard look at these statistics."

The report on staff integration showed that racially balanced faculties (those with not less than 10 percent of one race) have risen from 26 in 1960-1961 to 100 this year.

But this figure, out of a total of 205 schools, leaves less than half the schools with integrated faculties.

"Why not 150 schools (integrated)?" Dr. Paquin asked Tuesday, indicating that the integration of 74 school faculties in six years is not that

Egypt agrees to cease fire

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United Nations Security Council's call for a "cease fire" with no strings attached, leaves Israel with the leverage to keep the Gulf of Aqaba open.

If the cease fire call is heeded — and military developments indicate the Arabs have little choice — Israel will be in the same position she was in 1957.

At that time she was able to secure free passage between Arab strong points into the Gulf of Aqaba in return for withdrawing her forces from Egyptian soil.

Considerable diplomatic fog will have to be dissipated, once the fighting stops, before matters get down to the hard tit-for-tat stage.

AND THE legacy of bitterness will linger as the United States and the Arab nations

Witnesses tell court of threats

On Wednesday in Criminal Court a pretty 32-year-old Social Security worker, mother of two children and married 15 years, was found guilty of performing an abortion in September, 1966.

The former school teacher fainted on Thursday morning as she heard sentence pronounced. She was given a two-year suspended term and $500 fine.

According to the presiding jurist, the rare case found the attractive matron employing "an easy way to make $100 from every victim she could find."

She fainted when the judge stated, "Why would a person of your standing elect herself to be a physician I do not know."

Sentence was pronounced after an eloquent plea by the woman's attorney, Samuel Cooper, who said he had known her family 25 years. Shaken from its very foundations the family would suffer tremendous repercussions if the mother were sent to jail, he stated.

The day-long trial Wednesday before Judge James A. Perrott witnessed crisis after crisis:

1. Two single women, ages 22 and 23 who said they had abortions performed on them at a home in the 2500 block W. Lafayette Ave. had to be placed under heavy police guard while in the courtroom.

Both women, one also a Social Security employee, said they had been threatened. One testified the husband of the accused woman had approached her by phone the night before and during the trial Wednesday morning.

* * *

2. WHEN THE matron was pronounced guilty, she fell prostrate to the trial table. She wept quietly a long time inside the courtroom but her cries rose to loud wailing when she was escorted by a sheriff to the hallway.

She continued to sob as she was led away to jail immediately.

3. The husband returned to the courtroom after his wife was led away and, accompanied by her attorney, wept fully half an hour. His white handerkerchief was soaking wet.

4. The two young single women who had testified against the matron were hurried into the judge's chambers for a private conference. They were accompanied by

Dr. Bryson to be named to Inner Harbor group

Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin is expected to appoint Dr. Winfred O. Bryson Jr., 4515 St. Georges Ave., to the Inner Harbor Steering Committee and thus integrate that group.

The announcement could come later today (Friday) or over the weekend.

Dr. Bryson is president of the Advance Federal Savings and Loan Association and chairman of the Department of Economics and Business at Morgan State College.

Under his leadership, Advance has become an institution with $3,900,000 in assets.

He is a graduate of Morehouse College, and earned his master's degree at Atlanta University. He holds a doctorate from the University of Pennsylvania.

His wife, Mrs. Prima-Lee Bryson, is associate professor of Business Education at Morgan State College.

Mayor McKeldin promised officials of ACTVISTS for Fair Housing several days ago that he would integrate this committee, in order that it might best serve the interests of the city.
