ConCon candidate asks why interest in Tuesday election appears so low

By DR. HARR YBARD
President of the Baltimore Junior College

Have you had the experience of talking to people about the importance of the special election on June 13? Isn't it frustrating to note the lack of interest and even concern?

Yet this is the first time in 100 years that Marylanders will have an opportunity to change their Constitution.

Great as is the need for rewriting a constitution that was written for a rural society in 1867 and is hard to apply to an urban economy in 1967, the apathy toward the election next Tuesday may result in fewer than 20 percent of the eligible voters participating.

* * *

CAN IT be that people are not concerned about their rights such as freedom of speech, and press, and civil and religious liberties?

Of course, they care about rights as the last ten years of sit-ins, marches and other protests indicate.

The problems lies in the act that many people do not see the Constitution as being tied in with their daily living

* * *

TODAY WE are straightjacketed by a Constitution that has been changed 209 times since 1867. It is like an old house that has been patched up so often that the best thing to do is to build a totally new one.

Of course, the new Constitution to be written by delegates assembling in Annapolis on Sept. 12, 1967 will keep all the good points of the present Constitution.

But is should also embody some new ideas to fit our modern age. For example, why shouldn't sewage and water systems be built so the counties and Baltimore City share in the use —and each thus pay less to get the services.

This would not mean harming the City or the County governments which would still have their own local officers elected by the people who live in these localities.

* * *

WHY SHOULDN'T the concept of state aid of public education be written so that the state could be responsible for giving more assistance to colleges? (The poor are having more and more difficulty sending their children to college.)

Why should our courts not be state-wide, instead of having different structures in each county so that people get confused when they go to court?

Why shouldn't each county have home rule so that the State Legislature would not be harnessed with laws that are local and often trivial, such as increasing the rabbit hunting season in Somerset County by two days?

Why shouldn't the Legislature and Governor be given more power and made responsible for seeing that the needs of people are fulfilled?

* * *

IF GOVERNMENT is the servant of the people, need we fear it?

Let's make certain that the delegates who go to the Convention are people who know the Constitution, are sensitive to the needs for changing it, and seek to fulfill the promise to make it exist for the good of the whole.

Now, honestly, isn't there enough to be excited about the election next Tuesday?

If you believe so then study your candidates and select the ones you want to represent you, then be sure that you and everybody you know votes.

On Wednesday monrning you'll be proud to have played a part in this election — the first of its kind in 100 years.
