Miss Gardner, Maceo Felton married in double-ring ritual

With Lula Jones Garrett

Lovely wedding of the week was that on Saturday, when Ann Gardner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Gardner became the bride of Maceo Nesbit Felton, Jr. of Syracuse, N.Y., and Washington, D.C.

The ceremony took place in St. James Episcopal Church at two in the afternoon. The Rev. Donald O. Wilson officiated at the double-ring ritual. William O'Maro was soloist.

Eight hundred guests witnessed the marriage and attended the reception which was held in the Alcazar, replete with buffet, champaign, bridal cake on lace-draped table and punch flowing from a fountain.

Miss Gardner, a Morgan State College graduate, doing graduate work at Howard University, is a social worker. Mr. Felton, who is attending Howard Law School, is currently on the staff of Sen. Robert Kennedy in Washington.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of English net and Alencon lace over taffeta. The molded bodice featured three-quarter sleeves with old-fashioned ruffles; and a scalloped Sabrina neckline. The modified A-line skirt fell from the Empire waistline in soft folds; and a chapel train was attached at the waistline.

A lovely old mantilla of matching lace was worn as a headpiece. She carried a draped design of white roses, centered with an orchid and marked with satin streamers.

Her attendants, all in pale pink chiffon gowns, carried clusters of shell pink pompons centered with a large chrysanthemum. They were Misses Arie Felton, Melvina Green, Sarah Clark and Hedy Beck.

Mrs. Eleanor Alexander, matron of honor, wore a deep pink chiffon gown and her flowers were in candy pink.

Robert Penn was best man. Ushers were George Edgecomb, James Felder, Jim Long and Thomas Queen.

Harriet Cole, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Harry Cole, was flower girl. The ring bearer was Dwayne Carter, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Carter.

For her daughter's nuptials, Mrs. Gardner was crowned in beige chiffon with accessories to match and a pink flower hat. Mrs. Felton wore blue crepe with matching shoes and a flower hat.

ON SATURDAY afternoon, Mrs. Reuben Jones entertained at a lingerie shower for Myrtle Jackson, bride-elect.

Mrs. Jones was assisted by Mrs. E. Clinton Knox, Miss Shirley Watkins and Miss Eula Watkins.

Guests included Mrs. Alice Portlock of Philadelphia, Misses Carole Johnson, Brenda Watts, Sonja Branson, Colleen Thomas, Joyce Ann Parker, Vivian Scott, Kaye Wesler of Washington;

Mesdames Brenda Hammond of Washington, Vonzella Ford, Jessie Hudgins, Laura Pair and Andrea West.

JACK AND JILL members met this week to install new members, complete the year's agenda and elect officers. The installation ceremony conducted by the president, Kay Carter, was impressive in its simplicity and beautifully carried out by candlelight.

Pink and blue carnations and baby's breath were featured in the centerpiece and the corsages presented by the group to the mothers and their Jills, with boutonnieres for the Jacks.

Jack and Jills emphasis on family group participation was evident in the presence of many fathers.

Later, the group enjoyed a songfest, along with an informal reception.

New members and their children include: Jean Adams and Stuart, Cynthia A. Brown and Vernon, Edwin Burke and Melanie, Flozella Clark and Harolyn, Doris Cole and Susan, Harriet and Stephanie, Catherine Howard and Catherine, Dorothy Johnston and Cecil, Norma Lamb and Arthur and Michelle, Cornellia Locklear and Michael, Norma Maiden and Cathy, Maethelda Medders and Janis;

Also, Betty Moore and Gigi,

THE BRIDE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Barnes of Turner Station, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of beau de soie with lace train. Her veil was of matching lace. She carried a Bible marked with a bouquet and ivy-tipped streamers.

Mrs. Sylvia Jones was matron of honor, and the maid of honor was Miss Lorraine Venable.

Bridesmaids were Misses Anita Matthews, of Severn, Md., and Darcel Glenn, nise Glenn of Glen Burnie and Joyce Martin, of Turners Station, Md.

The bridesmaids wore tent dresses in pink with white headdresses and carried bouquets of green tinted flowers.

The matron of honor and maid of honor wore tent dresses in green with white headdresses and carried bouquets of pink tinted flowers.

Pink was also worn by flower girls, Stephanie Thornton and Johna Thornton. They scattered rose petals in the path of the bride.

B. and P. award to Mrs. Lena King Lee

BY ELIZABETH M. OLIVER

Mrs. Lena King Lee, member of the Maryland House of Delegates and local attorney received the coveted 1967 Sojourner Truth Award the highest honor of the National Association of Business and Professional Women's Clubs last week.

The distinction was accorded Mrs. Lee Sunday at the organization's breakfast held annually and attended by more than 400 persons.

Also honored were Mrs. Sarah Jane Bundy, school teacher and Cherry Hill community leader, who received the Community Service Award and Mrs. Doris Cooper Hill, owner of East Baltimore's Avalon Shoe Store who was presented the Business Award.

Mrs. Lee was cited for aggressive leadership in political action and in "all activities advancing the status of women."

The president, Mrs. Rosalie McGuire, in conferring the plaque described the honoree as a champion of minorities, defender of human rights, one who has promoted interracial goodwill and distinguished herself in fields of politics, law, education and civil rights.

IN RESPONSE, Mrs. Lee urged all women to push the horizon to endless limits in "big, bold political action" which she said "can reap much success."

She also urged women to register and vote to "elect our own candidates who know better how to represent us than any white person alive."

She stated, "Regardless of who it might be, put your strength behind our candidate who is running," and added, "It is better to have a colored citizen representing you, filling the spot for you."

Referring to the 1967 Legislative scene, Mrs. Lee said because there were insufficient numbers of elected colored lawmakers in Annapolis, white legislators kept the death penalty in, "watered down" the housing bill and signed not one bit of nate and her invaluable contribution to society especially in her own community, Cherry Hill.

In response she praised members of her community and read a poem her small daughter Lona Gail dedicated to the club members.

Active in the Lawyers Wives group, the National PTA, NAACP, Provident Hospital Development and various Cherry Hill church, civic and community groups, Mrs. Bundy has been a school teacher 17 years.

Present at the breakfast were her attorney husband, James L. Bundy, their children, Henry, Deborah and Gail; and many persons from the Cherry Hill area.

MRS. HILL, the shoe store co-owner along with her husband was praised for example as a business women and her aid to the needy. She responded saying: "This is truly an honor I accept with humbleness of heart."

Among her relatives and friends present were Samuel Cooper Jr., Ezra Hill Sr. and Jr., Misses Doris C. Hill and Constance Hill.

Guest speaker for the occasion was Dr. Marjorie H. Parker; history professor of the District of Columbia Teachers College and nationally known educator.

Dr. Parker asked colored citizens to accentuate the positive in defending our American society. Hold the ideal and the dream, she stated and rather than protest, strive for the dream.

Also on the program were Mrs. Gwendolyn Dave, soloist and Mrs. Charlotte Swan, pianist, who provided music; Dr. Richard I. McKinney of Morgan State College who gave invocation; Mrs. Alice F. Ford who extended greetings; Mrs. Leltay Stokes, second vice president.

THE REV. HEZEKIAH L. RANDALL, right, was host at a party marking the birthday of Mrs. Randall, left, in the garden of their home on Vineyard Lane, recently. They are shown reading the AFRO, which the Rev. Mr. Randall, now 75, says he has read most of his adult years.

Miss Williams to be Saturday bride

Miss Priscilla Williams, daughter of Mrs. Alice Marie Williams and the late Ivy Leroy Williams, will be married to Michael Abney, here, Saturday.

The wedding will take place in Christ Methodist Church at four in the afternoon.

The prospective bride attended Peabody Conservatory and is now a sophomore at Morgan State College. Mr. Abney is studying radio electronics and television.

MISS PATRICIA WILLIAMS

Miss Alicia Wallace honoree at reception

Against the background of the beautiful Holiyday Room in the Village of Cross Keys, the debutante daughter of one of Baltimore's oldest families was honored at a reception and dance.

Miss Alicia Wallace, daughter of Mrs. Alfred W. Taylor and Norman Wallace, was radiant in a white silk organza gown. The bodice of this exquisite dress was pin tucked as was the front panel and the band that circled the full skirt. She had received two nosegays for the occasion.

One, a dainty ball of pink carnations and ivy which had been sent by Mrs. Edith Smith of Washington, D.C. hung from her wrist as she received her first guests. Later she was presented with a bouquet of small pink carnations and white rosebuds by her uncle, Cyrus W. Marshall.

A PINK and green color scheme was carried out in the floral arrangements, table decorations and the ensemble worn by members of the receiving line.

Heading the line was Mrs. David Glenn, in dainty pink chiffon with a beaded waist. Mrs. Cyrus Marshall, Jr., and Mrs. Lewis Richardson, Jr. were dazzling in shades of green chiffon. Mrs. Bruce Allenyne was stunning in a pale pink sheath.

Mrs. Taylor, mother of the honoree, wore an exquisitely draped shocking pink gown. All of the gowns were designed and made by Mrs. Anita Thomas.

Mrs. C. Carrol Owens, Sr., Mrs. Jay McRae and Mrs. A. Jack Thomas, all great aunts of the debutante, served as hostesses.

Other hostesses were Misses Rita Bass, Yvonne Dungee, Bonnie Randolph, Julia Scarborough, and Carol Sheffey. Miss Beverly Doswell of New York City also served as a hostess.

Miss Bronwyn Wallace, sister of the honoree, was dainty in green crepe. She greeted and registered the guests.

HOSTS ON the terrace, who escorted the guests,

TOMORROW (Saturday) will be the wedding day of Miss Paula Ashby and Kenneth E. Cullings, whose marriage will take place in St. Edward Catholic Church at noon.

Club re-elects Howard Mason
