—Flying into Siagon no fun

soldiers patroled the area in jeeps with machine guns mounted on the hood.

ARMED SENTRIES manned posts stacked with sandbags and trained eyes scanned all crowds as they moved through the field's main entrance.

The Saigon weather, which is hot and sticky, was refreshingly cool because of a recent rain.

After checking through customs I was met by members of MACV (Military Assistance Command, Vietnam).

A staff car sped me through the Saigon country side and to my quarters at the Caravelle Hotel in the heart of the city.

I had travelled more than 13,000 miles, since leaving tired from travel I found relief in knowing that at last I arrived at the world's number one dateline.

Sunday night I had dinner in the restaurant on the ninth floor of the Caravelle.

THIS IS the place that correspondents call "the window on the war" and it was from this vantage point—high over Saigon that I got my first taste of war.

Less than 15 miles from the city, in the direction of North Vietnam you can see U.S. Air Force planes drop flares that light up the area for ground troops engaged in combat below.

And at night, especially when you are in bed, you can hear the sounds of exploding shells in the distance and the sharp reports of the big guns zerroing in on enemy held positions.

It is at night that you realize that this is a country at war.

I went to bed early Sunday night to prepare myself for the full day of accreditation and briefings that I would begin in the morning.

I SLEPT WELL and got up about 7 a.m., dressed, had breakfast and walked the two blocks down Place Lam-Son to MACV headquarters.

MACV headquarters, a large building which also houses the officers mess and the press control center, is surrounded by barbed-wire barricades, concrete abutments and soldiers armed with machine guns.

Security here is at a maximum because of the ever present threat of terrorists who might lob a grenade through a door or a window.

All Vietnamese civilian employees of MACV must wear identification badges and all are searched before they are allowed to enter the building and report for work.

MY CREDENTIALS and accreditation had arrived before me and it was only a matter of minutes before I was a fully accredited war correspondent.

During the day Saigon is a busy city.

People hurry through the streets, buying their daily provisions at the market places.

They walk or ride in small automobiles, on bikes and in small pedi-cabs which look like arm chairs mounted on the front of tricycles.

Street vendors send little children out to pull on Americans in an attempt to get them to make some small purchase at a curb-side stand.

They believe that all Americans have a lot of money and the war-time economy is one of marked inflation.

There are two systems of exchange here.

THE LOCAL EXCHANGE is the piaster and you can get 118 of them for one U.S. dollar. But 118 piasters don't go very far if it is spent in the local economy.

An American-made soft drink will cost 30 P and you will only get it at this price after you bargain with the vendor who will usually quote an initial price if 50 P.

At the briefing session you are instructed that it is necessary to bargain whenever you spend money in the economy.

And it is very important to establish the fare in advance when hiring a pedi-cab.

The U.S. command here feels that inflation has been caused by too many Americans who freely spend money.

"BARGAIN with the vendor," a military representative advised me," until it looks like he is going to by and that chances were pretty good that at least 20 of every 100 would be members of the Viet Cong.

The terrorists often strike on Saigon streets and for this reason all Americans are instructed not to linger in the streets or congregate out in the open.

Though they have oriental features the influx of western culture has acquainted them with the modern world of chemicals and most of them over use cosmetics and are caked with powder and lipstick.

The children approach you on the streets and beg for "P please" and it is not uncommon to find them attempting to run through your pockets or trying to get your watch off your arm.

They have been taught to believe that Americans represent wealth and power and that they are not too particular about what they do with their money.

It's really all pretty tragic. THESE CHILDREN are often enticed by their elders to walk the streets begging and stealing anything they can get their hands on.

Sanitary conditions in the downtown Saigon area are efficient, though the perimiter of the city is a pageant of squalor and dissappointment.

But there seems to be a desire on the part of the people to rebuild the city and uplift living conditions here.

The steady influx of American money has done much to raise the living standards and the construction of new buildings and the recent improvement of a new water system are all indicative of the fact that Saigon is a city with a future.

But for the time being the people must concentrate on the problems of war and it may be many years before the country can get back on the beaten path.

meals there.

There is no way of distinguishing the enemy in Vietnam and they say that the same fellow that makes your bed in the morning might be out shooting at you in the rice fields that night.

Precaution and safety can not be over emphasized here.

A MILITARY SPOKESMAN told me, semi-officially that you can stand on any street corner in Saigon and watch 100 Vietnamese walk by and that chances were pretty good that at least 20 of every 100 would be members of the Viet Cong.

The terrorists often strike on Saigon streets and for this reason all Americans are instructed not to linger in the streets or congregate out in the open.

A number of Americans civilians as well as military have been killed by grenades hurled in public places.

Fragmentation grenades, which they get from security men killed in action are smuggled into Saigon and other cities and snipers riding through the streets have been known to take shots at Americans.

The latest act of terror involves a young woman who rides through the street on the back of a scooter, and fires at passersby as her driver speeds her through the streets.

RECENTLY SHE killed two Vietnamese policemen, two U.S. soldiers and wounded two others.

"Stay alert and you stay alive" is one of the basic Saigon rules of the road.

You should stay off the streets as much as possible and an 11 p.m. curfew is mandatory.

"If a grenade is spotted," one of the security posters instructs," yell 'grenade' and throw yourself against the curb of the sidewalk and cover your face and head with your hands."

Terrorists place no premium on human life and they are more than ready to trade a life for a life.

If you stay off the streets as much as possible, avoid crowds and move quickly you are pretty safe. But you have to be cautious and you have to stay alert every minute.

YOU CAN'T LET your guard down and you learn very quickly not to trust anyone.

next door. She has yet to turn up.

The woman who described what Marcus said to the men outside was Mrs. Hattie Creech, 38, who lives at the same address.

"He came home from work Friday night and talked with the men on the corner for awhile," she said. "Then I cooked some fish for him and he came in and had dinner. He went to sleep around 11 and slept until he woke up from the noise," she said.

After Marcus complained to the men outside, they told him "You got nothing to do with it — we're knocking on the house next door," Mrs. Creech said.

"Then somebody said something smart and I heard the firecracker noise," she continued.

MARCUS FELL back into the room, she said, lying on his back.

"I been shot," she said he yelled.

"No you haven't been shot," she says she told him, but then she saw blood pouring from his chin.

"I kneve saw so much blood from a bullet hole," she told the AFRO Sunday hours after Marcus was pronounced dead in Provident Hospital. "He was soaked with blood."

The bullet had gone on through his neck.

Mrs. Creech awakened Charles Tramuel, 32, also of the same address. Tramuel, Mrs. Creech and Marcus had all been asleep in the front room of the house.

Tramuel said today, he tried to carry him to the hospital. He was walking, but hanging on to me. We got to the restaurant on the corner and he fell."

POLICE from Western district responded to a call for a shooting at about 4:20 a.m., Saturday. Marcus was admitted to Provident Hospital about 4:45.

"I saw him about 11 Saturday night," she said. "And they put an oxygen tent over him. Then I left. My sister went to see him later, and she told me they took off the tent.

"I knew he wasn't going to live then," she said.

Hospital physicians, according to police, asked that Marcus not be questioned.

The slain man's last words are believed to be what he said on the floor of his house, as he lay bleeding:

"Lord have mercy," Tramuel reported him as saying.

"If anybody had anything against him, then I don't know them," Mrs. Creech said.

"He was a friend to everybody," a neighbor said.

Marcus may have family in Baltimore, but none has yet appeared. Mrs. Creech said Marcus told her he had a wife and two children.

short-barreled revolver at Lee, and stood behind the counter with him, ready to take money from the register.

Police said Chase was pushed into a rear doorway leading to the basement. The assailant fired and Chase fell forward on his face, hitting the cellar door.

He then lay still and did not move again.

The assailant then "walked out" of the door and walked west on Dolphin St.

He turned south on Etting St. and broke into a run.

He was soon out of sight.

An ambulance crew pronounced Chase dead on the scene.

Western District police are seeking the gunman on charges of attempted armed holdup and homicide, and were searching for the man Sunday.

CHASE'S MOTHER, Mrs. Bessie Chase, also of the 200 block Amity St., was brought to the Western station house and told of her son's death.

An officer said "she took the news well," but "It was hard to tell if she really understood the full impact of what we told her."

No money was reported taken but the holdup attempt was the most recent in a series of holdups over the past several months.

Lee, of the 1600 block Appleton St., said after the holdup try he was retiring from pharmacy work.

He has been in holdups in the Young's Laboratory in which he was tied up and locked in the cellar.

The following description of the assailant was listed by police:

A colored male, about 25 to 30 years old, between 5'6" to 5' 9" in height, and 130 to 150 lbs. in weight, black hair, brown complexion, and a heavy mustache.

The assailant was wearing sunglasses a gray windbreaker, and dark green pants.

Mini-skirts banned for women workers by Chicago postmaster

CHICAGO (UPI) — Postmaster Henry W. McGee took a look at the 1,600 women employees on the main post office workroom floor and then he issued an order: no more mini-skirts or other abbreviated apparel.

"We're not trying to dictate morals," he said. "We just want to see that the girls wear dresses that do not interfere with normal operations."

"After all, a mailman or woman in this case should look as if she could go through rain, sleet and snow in the performance of her duty."

AUTHORITIES SAID the two white boys had been forced to face a wall in a park pavilion before they were shot in the head and abodomen.

In closing arguments, State's Atty. William Nash told the jury, "hate is the obvious motive."

He asked the jury to "consider the four bullets fired by this defendant into those two boys."

Recent Weddings

THE WEDDING of Miss Yvette Myers and Cornelius Mays took place on Saturday.

MISS RALLEIGH CLARK was married to Scott E. Fall in Baltimore, Saturday.

MISS [illegible] and Mr. [illegible] were married in Mount Moriah Baptist Church, Sunday afternoon.

MISS [illegible] WILLIAMS and Michael Abney were married in the Christ Methodist Church, Saturday.

MARRIED in the Douglas Memorial Church Baltimore, were Miss Patricia Alma Dorsey and Henry James Exum

'I Had To Do Something...'

KOSCIUSKO, Miss. — "I decided I was going to do something about it. They couldn't do anything but kill me. Either things are going to change, or I'm going to die."

That was the explanation a foot-weary James Meredith gave Friday night for his painful march against fear and prejudice in Mississippi.

He was addressing the congregation of the Wesley Methodist Church here during a rally in the church where he was baptized. Sympathetic listeners raised $45 to help finance his trek.

DECLARING HIS WALK was designed to dramatize his protest against segregation, Meredith asserted:

"My people are still suffering. The day has come now when my people can be their own leader."

Meredith urged the audience to register and vote. Once registered, he asserted, "Our people could decide all important races because white folks have never been able to get together on anything except on how to keep us down."

Meredith, who was the first known member of his race to attend the University of Mississippi five years ago following bloody campus rioting, that left two dead, said his walk through his home state is "By far the most important thing I've ever been involved in because we are getting at the root of white supremacy."

MEREDITH AND 16 followers covered 14 miles Friday. His feet are blistered and he cut slits in his oxford shoes in an effort to relieve the pain.

The march has caused little excitement. Tourists have stopped to take his picture and chat, causing Meredith to comment that he is the biggest tourist attraction in Mississippi.

Meredith is completing a 220-mile journey from Memphis-to-Jackson trek he first started last year. He renewed the march from a spot where a sniper cut him down with a shotgun blast on June 5, 1966.

OTHER CIVIL RIGHTS leaders took over the 1966 march and turned it into one of the biggest civil rights demonstrations of the year. But Meredith said he was not satisfied with the outcome and renewed the hike.

He was welcomed along the route by groups who timidly offered him and his party a box of sandwiches and cold drinks. Meredith shook hands and said "Hi y'all" to the women, but the men remained in the background as the group sat under a shade tree to eat.

A Grand Rapids, Mich. family stopped to view the Meredith party. Mr. and Mrs. A. Cecil Houghton and three sons got out of their car and watched for a few moments.

Then Mrs. Houghton and two sons walked across the highway to shake hands with Meredith and the marchers.

"I HOPE YOU make it," Mrs. Houghton said.

Meredith replied, "I hope so too."

The highway patrol and FBI agents converged on the scene after four cars with Kansas license plates and Confederate flags on their radio antennaes halted beside the marchers.

The youths in the cars said they were members of the Olathe Rebels, a Connie Mack baseball team from Olathe, Kan.

Three white youths, one wearing an Ole Miss sweatshirt, stopped along the highway and Meredith shouted, "Why don't you come along and walk with me."

One youth responded, "We would but we've got to be in Hattiesburg tonight."

SEVERAL TOURISTS snapped pictures of Meredith, who said he might be the biggest tourist attraction in Mississippi but "they don't appreciate it."

Marching with Meredith on the 175-mile journey were 12 young colored men and four white men, including three civil rights workers.

Joe Murphy, 24, of Hackensack, N.J., Joel Rosen, 20, of New Canaan, Conn., and Bob Dinwiddie, 23, of Birmingham, Ala. were working in Huntsville, Ala. this summer but have been with Meredith since the march began.

Among the other followers were Tom Brown, 31, and Limas Jefferson, 25, who is colored, both engineers from the Manned Spacecraft Center at Houston.

"I FEEL WE have a stake in it, really," said Jefferson of the march. "I want to show my concern." He said he and Brown took an extra day on their July 4 holiday and hoped to complete the march with Meredith.

Meredith said his left foot was growing more painful and he worked on it "quite a bit, and got it taped up."

His largest — and most enthusiastic — greeting has come in Grenada, where about 1,000 persons welcomed him Tuesday sight.

Several women have asked him to let them join the march. Meredith has rejected all women marchers for fear they would be hurt in possible violence.

HIS STATE TROOPER guard has been courteous.

One patrolman asked Meredith politely to make sure that none of the hikers walks on the highway.

"I sure will," Meredith replied.

Foot-weary Meredith keeps on painful walk through Miss.

Gregory sees U.S. destroying black man here and abroad

By BAKER E. MORTEN

The United States is systematically trying to destroy the black man in America by having him shot to death in Vietnam, and starved to death down South.

This is the opinion expressed in a Washington interview, by humorist Dick Gregory, who plans to run for President next year as a peace candidate opposed to all wars.

He accused the Federal Government of "genocide on two fronts" in an attempt to kill off black Americans just like Hitler tried to exterminate the Jews.

GREGORY CHARGED that the U.S. is accelerating "its shipments of black soldiers to die in Vietnam while at the same time starving black men, women and children to death in the South by refusing to purchase food stamps so poverty-stricken families can eat."

He referred to a recent tour of the rural South by a team of doctors who found economically-deprived black families suffering from malnutrition on a wholesale basis, afflicted with such rare diseases in the U.S. as rickets and scurvy.

Gregory said black people are starving in the South because the Federal Government refuses to buy food stamps to feed them.

He said the U.S. Government has paid "47 farmers in the South a minimum of $100,000 each not to plant crops" at a time when black Americans down South are practically starving to death. Because of this, the comedian said he will visit "every Communist country on earth, beginning in August and ask for money to help feed hungry colored people in the South."

"IT'S A d-n shame," he declared, "that the richest country on earth can give money to Radio Free Europe and send billions of dollars overseas in foreign aid packages, but it can't feed its own citizens in the South."

Gregory interpreted the Government's war action as a move to systematically exterminate black people altogether, and called for "all men to stop killing other men in war. I believe America is worth dying for," he said, "but I have found nothing worth killing for."

A PACIFIST and a vegetarian, Gregory said he will begin campaigning for the presidency in September as an independent candidate for peace. His campaign schedule calls for speech-making appearances at colleges and universities from coast-to coast.

Asked about his qualifications for the job, Gregory quipped, "I know of no school for presidentology; therefore I am as qualified to run as anyone else. I may be more qualified than most candidates because I am in tune with the people."

GREGORY RAN for mayor of Chicago as an independent candidate last year and lost to incumbent Mayor Richard Daley — but, in losing, he polled more than 22,000 write-in votes. He said he decided to run for president in 1968 because another dialogue is needed to meet the hardcore problems that exist in this country, and are ignored by the two major political parties."

Gregory suggested that more independent candidates need to enter political races around the country in order to make the major parties "shape up."

ASKED WHAT he thinks about heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali ducted into the Army, Gregory declared:

"Muhammad Ali is the only person in the world who has defeated the U.S. Government. He didn't go to Canada to dodge the draft as many whites are doing. He stood up and told the world he was not going into the Army and would go to jail as long as necessary, if necessary.

"I have five daughters, and if they grow up with as much moral principle and courage of conviction as Muhammad Ali, I will consider myself a success as a father. The heavyweight champion is the only man I know who divorced his wife because her dress was too short."
