sary after the council investigation.

Williams, a militant minister who went to jail when he refused to testify about members of his congregation during a criminal proceeding, has complained that "persons from outside the neighborhood" have harassed his family since they moved into the section.

HE CHARGED that shots have been fired near the house, that motorists have stopped their cars in front of the dwelling and shouted obscenities and that someone recently dropped a copy of the Ku Klux Klan publication "The Fiery Cross" on his front porch.

Dr. George C. Simkins Jr., president of the Greensboro NAACP, sent a telegram to Gov. Moore Thursday morning after the window breaking incident and urged him to "utilize the full police power of the state to protect this family and prevent racial violence in our community."

Saturday, Simkins criticized the Guilford County sheriff's department for not giving the minister protection. "If Rev. Williams were getting proper protection," he said, "Many of these things would not happen."

SIMKINS SAID he approved of the action whereby friends have volunteered to protect Williams. "I think if the sheriff's department is not going to give him the protection he needs, let the people themselves protect him. It might be necessary to form a vigilante group just for protection," he said. "The only thing racists know is force."

Simkins said a representative of the Good Neighbor Council had contacted his organization, but "the last I heard" the representative had not talked to Williams. Williams verified this.

The 27-year-old minister said "I don't want any trouble, but I'm getting tired of this mess." He said he consented to allow citizens to protect him, but added that "these people will come here not for retaliation, but just to protect me and my family."

HE SAID "It is a bad thing that a minister in this country would have to have people come into his home to protect him from physical harm. The minute a black man tries to get into better surroundings, they try to push him back into the ghetto."

Williams said the members of his church bought the $22,000 home for him as a parsonage. "I have no intention of leaving it," he said.

"Many of our neighbors have come up and told me they welcomed me and my family to the neighborhood," he said. However, on Thursday when some reporters and television cameramen came to his home after the window incident, Williams said he heard one or two of the neighbors shout "I don't want to live next door to a n—r."

He said the neighborhood has been particularly tense since Thursday.

THE GREENSBORO native, who has a 24-year-old wife and a three-year-old son, was recently released from Guilford County Jail where he served eight days of a contempt of court conviction.

The celebrated case, in which Williams refused to testify more than a year ago about members of his congregation during a criminal proceeding, is said to be one of the factors which led the North Carolina General Assembly to enact a law protecting clergymen in court cases.

Williams appealed his conviction to the state and U. S. Supreme Courts, but no decision was reached.

The minister served two days of his sentence before the appeals and the remainder of it more than a week ago.

"Now that's a case in point," the young chaplain said. That boy came in here two days ago and his leg was in pretty bad shape. There was a possibility that he would keep it. We didn't think it would be amputated. But now it's gone."

What do you say in a case like that?" I asked him.

"I'll just have to convince him, Covington said, "that it's not the end of the world.

"Most of the time they will talk to you. You have to listen.

"You have to share the pain and the discomfort and become involved as Christ did," he said.

be assembled is not detailed at the moment, but Mr. Eney suggested interested persons check with the new president and secretary after they become known.

All three of the top presidential candidates have expressed a fairness in staff employment, in the matter of racial representation.

Mr. Eney stated:

"The need will be for experienced people, many specialized in research.

"I should think any colored persons who qualify will have the same opportunity for employment as anybody else."

Sen. Clark told the AFRO:

"The convention will require a staff of qualified people, and I would be fair about picking them.

"I believe a lot of support I am getting now for the presidency comes because people know I will be fair."

Senator James, now in his second term as president of the Senate, has consistently voted for equal the state's fair employment practices law.

been filed, but a Western District officer on the case said "progress" was being made.

Margie, looking pretty and speaking with an intelligence that seemed to outdistance her 11 years, told this story:

Margie and Isabelle slept over Friday night at the house of their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Presberry, of the 500 block W. Lanvale St.

They got up at about 11:30 a.m., Saturday, didn't hear their grandfather in the house. They looked out a window in the second floor front room to see if he was on the street.

The girls then heard what sounded like a firecracker. They said they heard two explosions. Both felt a bad stinging — "like a million mosquitoe bites."

Margie was hurt on the wrist, Isabelle on the neck.

When they looked at each other's wounds and saw blood, they ran looking for their grandfather.

They ran down the steps, through the hall and out the front, leaving blood stains. The girls found no one in front, and came back in and called their mother.

She told them she was coming "straightaway."

PEOPLE THEN began checking at the house. Arbor, Mrs. Margaret Lawson, neighbor, Mrs. Margaret Lawson of the 1300 block Division St., held the girls, and summoned police.

The girls were rushed to the hospital.

Mrs. Presberry called her father, and Lloyd Young, 1400 block Ward St. resident, who picked her up, and took her and her son Charles, 14, to the scene.

Mr. Presberry then took her to Provident Hospital.

Margie says she put her hand to her face in response to her sister's warning to "watch out!" "and probably saved myself from getting shot in the face and killed."

Mrs. Presberry, a clerical worker in a downtown store, shuddered as her daughter told of the incident "I've been treated for nerves for the last three months. This is awful, Im still shaky."

"Yes," Margie added. "We got a call Saturday night that Isabelle was on the critical list We were really afraid."

A family friend had called Mrs. Presberry explained, but had the wrong information.

The other Presberry children are Dana, 17; Angela, 15; Sigfried, 13, and Lloyd, 7.

Margie and Isabelle both go to elementary school near their home.

Mr. Presberry now lives in Philadelphia. He was informed of his daughters' mishap. He is a former Baltimore law enforcement officer.

Kennedy urges curb on ads by biased realtors

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., Saturday urged the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) to crack down on advertisements by realtors who discriminate. The Commission said it would be almost impossible.

Kennedy called for the crackdown after releasing an exchange of letters with the FTC dating back to May 8. He said the FTC should immediately begin a cross-section of test cases throughout the nation.

PAUL RAND DIXON, FTC chairman, told Kennedy such action would be almost impossible unless the Commission was given more money and a bigger staff by Congress.

"If the Congress or the administration wishes the Commission to enter this area, it should first arrange to have appropriated to us the funds necessary to do an adequate closing the residence and that the citywide YWCA residences be established.

THE BASIS for this recommendation was the crowded living conditions offered to young women at Madison Avenue, the lack of privacy, and the extreme inadequacy of the residence facilities, lacking as they do laundry and kitchen facilities.

"Recently, as a part of a total city-wide study of the YWCA, an architectural and engineering study of the Madison Avenue facilities supported the unofficial findings in 1960.

"As the Committee on Administration reviewed this latest professional report, it was their unanimous opinion that the YWCA had a moral obligation to discontinue the practice of renting 'make-do' facilities."

MRS. GATES pointed out that a meeting has been held with the Madison Avenue residence girls telling them of the decision and steps are now in progress for the transferral of those who wish to go to the Central Branch residence.

To assure that there will be rooms, the Central Branch has temporarily discontinued its transient service and is holding all available rooms in reserve for the Madison Avenue girls.

She also emphasized that program activities for children, teenagers and adults will continue at the branch and that more space will be available for activities. Consideration is also being given to the rental of meeting rooms to outside groups.

PURCHASED IN August, 1942, the building at 1912 Madison Ave., was originally built as three individual houses with major remodeling done about 1943. Although mechanical and electrical systems were replaced at that time the basic structure was not altered appreciably.

The colored community raised $86,000 to acquire the property for expansion of YWCA services.

Members of the Madison Avenue Committee on Administration are: Mrs. Ethel J. Day, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Moss, Mrs. Martha G. Bradford, Miss Mary C. Allen, Mrs. Thelma C. Ashe, Mrs. Walter T. system.

Mr. Levi stated that the Greater Baltimore Committee's investigation would be conducted by a special education subcommittee under the chairmanship of Walter Sondheim Jr., vice president of Hochschild, Kohn and Company and a former president of the School Board.

Also serving on the education subcommittee will be:

Robert W. Catzen, Dalsemer, Fitzhugh and Catzen;

Milton S. Eisenhower, former president of Johns Hopkins University;

Arthur G. Foster, works manager, Western Electric Company;

Harrison Garrett, chairman of the board, Robert Garrett and Sons;

Jerold C. Hoffberger, president National Brewing Company; William L. Marbury, attorney, Piper and Marbury;

Clarence W. Miles, attorney, Miles and Stockbridge; Archibald C. Rogers of the city planning firm of Rogers, Taliaferro, Kostritsky, Lamb.

L. Mercer Smith, vice president of the C and P Telephone Company of Maryland and president of Metropolitan Baltimore.

MR. LEVI gave as another reason for the involvement of the Greater Baltimore Committee the conviction among business leaders that no adequate official or independent effort is being made to forecast the needs of the community and the economy as the basis for education planning.

"The Committee's objective," he said, "is to gather all available knowledge which would enable the development of a long-range plan for public education and stimulate community awareness of the essential role public education has to be given in a changing urban society."

Mr. Levi stressed that the study will not take the existing public school system in Baltimore as a "given" and then simply seek answers to the traditional problems of more money and better buildings.

Rather, he said, the education Subcommittee will utilize nationally known authorities to review the basic concepts of public education and will "call on sciences, government and finance and persons equipped to advise on the role of education in a society undergoing rapid technological change.

AN IMPORTANT element of the study, Mr. Levi explained, would be the documentation of the true costs of top quality education in terms of personal fulfillment and economic and social vitality and, conversely, the indirect costs of poor education in the form of unemployment, crime and related socio-economic ills.

"Today," he said, "the community has no definitive idea of the hidden costs of inadequate education or the unrealized dividends paid by first-rate education.

"The Greater Baltimore Committee's intent would be to inject into the public conscience an accurate picture of the consequences of good versus bad public education.

"Hopefully, this broader understanding will lead to added citzen interest and support for its improvement at all levels of government as well as from the private sector."
