IN MEMORIAM

May we let our light to shine that it will illuminate that which is good and beautiful, and magnify our Father which is in heaven. May we stand strong and firm against despair, falsehood, rudeness, hatred, pessimism and prejudice.—Carl Murphy, Editor-Publisher—1889-1967

Adding Fuel To Raging Fires

With the old unholy alliance of Northern Republicans and segregationist Dixiecrats in full control, the 90th Congress like the proverbial ostrich, has foolishly convinced itself that legislation designed to put Stokely Carmichael in jail will actually cool the "long, hot summers" boiling in community after community over the nation.

The "Stokely Carmichael" bill, introduced by a Florida Democrat, William Cramer, quickly won the enthusiastic support of Republican leaders in the House, insuring its speedy passage.

The measure would make it a federal crime to operate across state lines with intent to incite riots.

Most constitutional lawyers are convinced the Congress is wasting its time; that in the first place it will be next to impossible to prove "intent" and secondly should a conviction happen to be secured, it would be quickly overthrown with its first court test.

The hard fact that supporters of this ill-advised legislation refuse to face is that these riots outbreaks in every instance are not the result of fiery utterances by "outside agitators," but are the handiwork of broken promises, ghetto despair and official indifference.

The silly anti-riot bill, which Congressional reactionaries have embraced so enthusiastically wouldn't have prevented what happened in Watts, nor would it have calmed the fierce anger of Newark.

Ironically, the Republican leaders who worked so untiringly for legislation they said would "shut up the loudmouths" form the same hard core of opposition to rent subsidies, open housing, war on poverty bills and other programs which really address themselves to the horrible plight of slum dwellers.

Spiteful measures like this anti-riot bill will not quell the seething frustrations that continue to boil over in the nation's ghettoes. If they do anything, they will add fuel to the raging fires.

Moreover, if the unholy coalition succeeds in its senseless determination to put Stokely behind bars, it should be warned that where there is now one Carmichael, 10, 20, 30 or perhaps a 100 far more militant than he would rise angrily out of urban ghettoes to take his place.

Now that the House has once again demonstrated its blind insensitiveness to the wholesale injustices that trigger rage and despair in the breasts of slum dwellers, it remains for the Senate, for the sake of the nation, to give this bill the sidetracking it deserves.

Re-orient The Police

One does not have to be wise nor exceedingly moral to denounce the damaging and deadly riots perpetrating in Newark and other cities during the past three or four months.

We expect that most persons, black and white, are appalled by the statistics: 34 dead, 2,000 injured and 3,000 arrested in 20 cities.

These cities range in attitudes and reputation from the traditional liberalism of Boston, the cradle of liberty, to the historical bigotry of Jackson, Mississippi, the incubator of segregation.

What then shall Americans do other than shake the head and wring the hands?

We think a dynamic reaction would be a national demand, perhaps led jointly by the National Council of Churches and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, for the federal authority to address itself to the wide-spread problem of police brutality.

Over and over, rioters, witnesses and experts have affirmed the criminal and inhumane acts of police as the catalyst that sets off the riot fuse.

Ghetto residents go along for years, even decades, suffering the variety of deprivations they know too well. Then, to add the malicious insult to their familiar injury, some "smart cop" hurls an insult, pulls a weapon, shouts an unauthorized command or just assumes a nasty, arrogant manner.

Then holocaust!

The anti-poverty programs and the social scientists' engineering are all important and necessary. But a community must be preserved in order for these programs to have time to take effect.

And community preservation, as the events of the past few months clearly show, is constantly threatened in the face of police brutality.

We call for the immediate formation of a federal ad hoc committee to undertake the re-orientation of police forces from California to Maine in their proper functions.

They need to be forcibly reminded that they are supposedly unbiased civil servants — protectors of persons and property — not as too often the case, bigoted civil bullies — purveyors of prejudices and criminality.

First Come, First Served

Secretary Robert C. Weaver's Department of Housing and Urban Development last week issued an order to local housing authorities which nearly, but not quite, put public housing on a "first come, first served" basis.

Heretofore, the system was one called "free choice" in which an applicant could wait an unlimited time to accept available public housing.

This had the effect of permitting whites to await units in white buildings and of allowing officials to hold up colored applicants until units become available in a colored building.

Thus the practices in public housing, although never the announced policy, was to re-inforce segregated housing.

Henceforth, if an applicant fails to accept the first vacancy available (under one possible plan), or one of three vacancies (under a second possible plan), he is moved to the bottom of the list.

The Secretary's order also candidly notes that these measures are to achieve "substantial desegregation".

The only drawback we perceive in the new rules is that a locale may elect to continue its "free choice" if it can prove to HUD that this has not resulted in "substantial desegregation", that is, that "at least two-thirds of its housing projects . . . are desegregated on more than a token basis."

We anticipate that there will be much wringing and twisting and delay in some quarters to prove the unprovable to HUD.

On the whole, however, we applaud this forward step Secretary Weaver and his Department have taken. We fully understand the difficult diplomatic and administrative task the Secretary has accomplished.

Misplaced Hearts

"Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." Matt. 6:21.

The Right Reverend Clarence Edward Crowther, bishop-in-exile of 65,000 black Anglican communicants in Kimberley, South Africa, must have had these Biblical words in mind as he talked to American State Department officials last week.

He told Joseph Palmer 2d, assistant secretary for African affairs, that Americans have invested their treasures —$528 million at the end of 1965 — "on the wrong side" in South Africa.

This private American investment in that country's private sector, the power structure that disfranchises the South African black, is bigger than in any other African nation and has increased steadily in recent years.

The bishop revealed that the 3 million white South Africans know that "storm clouds are gathering" among the 11 million "totally, absolutely pitiful" blacks.

And Americans will have purchased 'a vested inflexibility", trying to follow and protect their treasure among the forces of segregation and apartheid in that beleaguered land.

We have no doubt that in the event of armed rebellion in South Africa the American Government will stand where it must: with the black freedom fighters.

The bishop has warned the private American investors; if they have no better sense and no greater commitment to freedom than to continue to misplace their treasures, they deserve the worst consequences.

Wilkins Speaks • By Roy Wilkins

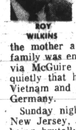
Newarks Could Become Samurai Swords

The two little boys sat with their mother and father in the National Airport in Washington, D.C. after one of the nightmare nights of the Newark, New Jersey, rioting.



ROY WILKINS

Both handsome and under 12 years of age, one slept in a chair as he awaited a plane but his brother greeted me with bright, alert eyes, a use of language and the now old-fashioned courtesy of the young toward older persons. Their travelling suits, their linen and their ties were tributes to their mother's taste. The father is an officer in the Air Force and the mother a college graduate. The family was enroute to West Germany via McGuire AFB. The major said quietly that he had done a stint in Vietnam and was looking forward to Germany.

ready smile, excellent

Sunday night, while in Plainfield, New Jersey, a white policeman was being brutally stomped and shot to death, a colored father and his two sons were strolling the observation deck at LaGuardia airport. The boys, like all boys everywhere, were zooming with each jet take - off. They hovered with each helicopter that settled down and made its way to the gate.

Are they stopping riots?

What are the young stomp-killers in Plainfield doing to the wholesome relationship (and its bright promise) between these two boys and their father? How are the roof snipers in Newark and elsewhere affecting the lives of the lads on their way to new experiences in Germany?

How can the colored children, left orphans by the killing of their mother as she sat on the sofa in her own living room, grow up to be firm believers in law, if the law is represented by National Guard bullets spraying into apartments indiscriminately, supposedly after a sniper, but killing your mother before your eyes? How does one thereafter respect law and order? Are the law enforcement people stopping riots or building bitterness?

Bad words out on streets

The big words are all trotted out in the conferences. High level formulas and sociological statistics are mingled with tough police procedures.

The bad words are all hurled out on the sidewalks and in the streets. Rocks and crude firebombs and deadly sniping carry the message of black disillusionment and desperation.

Caught in between are millions of black Americans who hate rioting as much as they hate injustice. They rear children, as does the Air Force couple. They maintain a stable family relationship and fathers carry their sons to airports to see the planes, to rivers to fish and to the stadium for the ball games. Mothers take their little girls shopping.

To what end? To cold, primitive, blanket group-branding by white Americans? To indifference or antagonism in the citadels of political and economic power? To hunger, bordering on starvation, among thousands of economic outcasts in a land where affluence rears everywhere its glittering head?

Concessions but not respect

To the mean level to which blind hatred lowers a people? To the despicable criminality of murder by sniping? To untriggered attacks on any person possessing a white skin? To the brutality of a killing by stomping? To the naked shame of looting to get not gold or power but liquor?

Improved conditions that may be wrung from these situations will not be broad enough or deeply enough rooted to help onward the boys now in Germany or the lads who skipped about their father at the airport. Concessions of a minimum nature are sometimes won through arson and pillage and murder, but never respect.

And respect is what these children need from the world around them. More importantly, they need it for themselves. The Newarks, whatever their value as alarm bells or as cathartses, could become Samurai swords.

FROM THE WORK BENCH • By Clarence Mitchell Jr.

Hopes This Will Be Last Summer Of Molotov Cocktail And The Looted Store

The speed with which the House of Representatives passed the so-called anti-riot bill and the ruthless tactics of New Jersey guardsmen in searching colored homes are sad indications of how little is learned from experience. It is unlikely that the anti-riot bill will halt anti-disturbance. It is possible that the tactics of the guardsmen may stir otherwise peaceful people into a state of reckless anger.

CLARENCE MITCHELL JR.

It is not likely that there could be a riot in an area of well-kept homes occupied by single families. Agitators could gather and even fights could ensue, but the small size of the resident population would be the principal reason why there would be no

Rabble-rousers seen aided

This background is seldom taken into consideration by those who seek emotional solutions to public disorders. On a hot night, when angry voices incite the irresponsible to mob violence, does anyone really believe that there will be in the crowd some rational man who will cry out, "stop, don't riot, that is a federal offense" a hundred or a thousand people can gather in a split second, the mere density of the population contributes to the expansion of a relatively minor incident into a riot and the hearers will disperse.

At this stage it appears that those who will benefit most from the passage of the anti-riot bill are individuals who were mentioned as the persons who made it necessary. They have already been given far more publicity than they would merit in a period of greater sanity, but now that Congress has lionized them they can look forward to greener and more abundant pastures in lecture circles.

If this bill became the law, the Attorney General of the United States would face a most unpleasant task. His first problem would be that of trying to be reasonably certain of what kind of conduct the bill makes unlawful. Next, he would be constantly harassed by the public clamor for prosecution of those who make ridiculous speeches but who do not, in fact, have the slightest effect on the conduct of those who hear them.

Finally, the Attorney General might very well spend his entire term of office perfecting and prosecuting a seemingly bona fide case. The bill is so questionable, however, that there would be little chance that a conviction would be upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Standard procedure for police

The conduct of the New Jersey guardsmen is similar to that of many law enforcement officers and soldiers. Again and again this kind of behaviour has been condemned by the courts. Again and again it has provoked even greater violence than that which it is supposed to quell. Yet it is almost standard procedure in a crisis.

I do not know how an orderly search could be made by a large number of armed men in a small room, but that is what the guardsmen and others like them seem to think is possible. They rush into the dwelling, smash furniture, break dishes and leave the place a general mess. Seldom, if ever, do they find anything.

One cannot help but feel that those making the searches do so to intimidate and wreak revenge rather than to accomplish any useful result. The reaction of the people of occupied Europe to Nazi searches during World War II should be a warning to those who use similar tactics. Regrettably, this is not the case.

Perhaps the most sensible advice given during the House debate was that suggesting that cleaning up slums, providing more jobs and vastly expanding well trained law enforcement departments would give real help in preventing riots. Very few had any interest in these suggestions, perhaps because they seemed so practical that they could not possibly make a headline or rate a place on newscasts.

Dedicated persons at work

Fortunately, the thoughtful and dedicated men and women of our country are still at work in a hundred ways to improve the lot of those who live, suffer and sometimes die simply because they live in the areas where the latest riots have occurred. In the long pull, the work of these good citizens will bear fruit.

When government and the people really work as a team to prevent riots and to eliminate the causes of riots, we shall see a change in our country. Although the outlook is confused now, beneath the surface and in many troubled consciences in Congress there are hopeful stirrings which may well help to make this the last summer of the Molotov cocktail and the looted store.

WHAT AFRO READERS SAY

I wholly disapprove of what you say but will defend to the death your right to say it.—Voltaire on Helvetius

Time wasted on sex

NEW York — One of the important problems affecting Negroes today is the drive for full freedom and equal opportunity is that when we think we have made a racial gain, our leaders get lost and waste their valuable time in side issues and forget about the brother's problem.

A good example is the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Two weeks ago this agency, which was to help open more jobs for minorities, spent its time with guidelines on religious discrimination.

Last week it announced a new airline stewardess hearing on whether sex is a bona fide occupational qualification and that it would look into stewardesses' age and marriage rules.

What this agency did not say was that thousands of hours of its best time have already been wasted on this project. When "sex" was inserted into the Civil Rights Act, rumors went around that it was added by enemies of the civil rights movement to gobble the time the agency needed to combat hard core racial discrimination in employment.

Already we have seen that this has happened, with the colored commissioners taking the lead on the side issues.

The airlines case results from labor union pressure to keep aging and married stewardesses in their jobs. But what the EEOC was set up for, we thought, was not to freeze those who have jobs, but to open them for members of minority groups.

The question of more colored airline jobs has been completely lost. In addition, there are openings for only about one of 20 persons applying.

Elimination of the age and marriage rules would cut the openings by half on the airlines that still have them.

Many cities are potential powder kegs because of unemployment among colored youth and few major businesses are doing enough to give them opportunity, so I strongly feel that more concern about those who want a chance and less about those who have had it, would be more consistent with the EEOC's job of providing what it was created by law to do, providing "Equal Opportunity".

Another Congo graduate

Wenham, Mass — Upon reading your AFRO-AMERICAN Newspaper, (June 10, 1967) I was very proud to read about the first Congolese woman to graduate from the U.S. College. I too am from the Congo, and have been here as long as Mrs. Kasongo. I will be graduating about the same time as she.

The Congolese woman has not had as much privilege as her other African sisters to study in the states. Along with Mrs. Kasongo, I am proud to represent the Congo.

Ga. jails unhomogenized

Atlanta — Several years ago, I investigated irregularities in the Fulton County Jail, publishing my findings in the AFRO. I exposed the segregation and discrimination at the jail.

Several months ago, a federal district judge outlawed segregation and discrimination in the Fulton County jail, Atlanta's police department and the city prison. I have made another investigation of the Fulton County jail, state penitentiary and Georgia's prison camps.

I found that in spite of the outlawry of segregation and discrimination in all tax-supported institutions, colored prisoners are still being segregated and discriminated against in all of Georgia's prison camps and the penitentiary. I further found that no colored guards or matrons are hired at any of Georgia's prisons.

No colored matron is assigned to supervise women prisoners at the Fulton County jail. Two matrons have died but no colored woman was appointed to replace them.

Sheriff T. Ralph Grimes has a vice squad, but no colored deputies are assigned to work with white deputies.

A thorough investigation should be made of this situation.

FRANK L. ROBERSON

A Rambunctious meeting?

Philadelphia — On Wednesday, June 21st, 16 people were arrested. They were accused of having plotted the assassination of Roy Wilkins and Whitney Young, "moderate colored leaders," and of belonging to RAM-the Revolutionary Action Movement.

It is my belief that this was a deliberate frame-up attempt designed to crush RAM, and to set the atomosphere for the assassination of any or all African-American leaders.

I, also believe that certain forces, enemies to our enslaved African-captive nation, are using the New York police department as a front to create sensational alleged plots to divide and confuse us and lay a trap for our destruction.

It should be noted that the alleged assassination plot came from the same police department that developed the alleged Statue of Liberty bomb plot, the police force that did nothing to protect the late Malcolm X. There is speculation from "reliable sources" that they may have even been a part of the force that assassinated him.

I feel it is very important that we discuss the subject of our people's survival before our common enemy begins to assassinate our leaders, saying that we killed one another. The present time calls for us to Unite before we perish.

I, therefore call Roy Wilkins, the NAACP, Whitney Young, the Urban League, The Honorable Elijah Muhammad, Martin Luther King, SCLC, Floyd McKissick, CORE, Rap Brown, SNCC, Robert F. Williams, the Revolutionary Action Movement, Stokely Carmichael, and other African-American leaders and organizations, to a Black Unity Conference to discuss the formation of a National African-American United Liberation Front.

Summer battle trinity

NEW YORK — Newark, N.J. should be discussed whenever Vietnam and the Jewish-Arab conflict are. It is not an isolated phenomenon; it is what has happened there unexpected. That is its greatest tradedy. Each of the three world events presents in a different manner the menace of American imperialism.

The little city of 400,000 people that lies across the Hudson River has 240,000 non-white residents. While unemployment plagues every black ghetto in this country, Newark presents a picture that overshadows all others in misery and deprivation.

Almost 50 per cent of its non-white residents are jobless. The city is increasingly related to poverty nationally. It reflects the logic of the racist policy of government, its foreign affairs program and tactics. American racism contains the germs of war and genocide.

But the heroism of its colored youth is unsurpassed and their struggle against tyrannical government will go down in American history beside the magnificent record of those who rebelled against slavery.

Newark is a battlefield in a genocidal war being waged by the political rulers of the USA on a world scale. Their police and courts select the tactics. These agencies of legal terror have been given a free hand to degrade and dehumanize.

With 60 per cent of its population colored there are none in charge of policy making agencies on any level of human relations.

No one can gauge the psychological impact on colored youth. The terrorist attack upon Newark's colored citizenry cannot be fully or clearly explained if the reaction to it is basically emotional or if it is formulated solely along racial or color lines.

The limits of that viciousness are immeasurable, the depth of its immorality cannot be fathomed. A monstrous thing is taking place. Imperialism seeks to dehumanize white America through the myths of white supremacy.

With no administration and staff to protect me I fear the evils of sickness, disease and death.
He fills my head with unfulfilled promises, my patience runs short.
Surely I shall be forever exposed to the evils that all men fear and all the days of my life I fear I will dwell in an eternal tomb of inequality.

Lifer paroled after making seven appeals

James Tull, 53, Somerset County, Md., was released on parole recently after spending 26½ years in prison on a life sentence for murder.

His freedom, under supervision, for the balance of his life, was granted after he appeared before the parole board seven times.

The life sentence imposed by the Somerset County Circuit Court was for the murder of a man in an affray following a gambling game in Crisfield.

Tull posted $100 bond and went out of state to reside with relatives following his release.

ALSO PAROLED was Miss Ruth Nance who was convicted by Judge Joseph Carter in Baltimore Criminal Court of robbery with a deadly weapon of a Poppleton and Mulberry St. grocery in 1962.

The sentence of 20 years was imposed in April, 1962 and Miss Nance, 42, was released after serving five years in prison. She will be under supervision until April, 1982.
