In Council August 24. 1792

Jane Urquhart of Ann Arundel County by her Petition to the Board sets forth that at April Term last she was fined by the Justices of the County Court of the said County in two presentments to the amount of three pounds fifteen shillings, the one for selling a small quantity of Oats above the rates per gallon, and the other for selling a pint of Madeira Wine for three shillings and nine pence (which also appears by a transcript from the Clerk of the said County), that having supplied her house with the best Wine and Oats [p. 123] for which she paid the highest prices, she could not by any means afford to charge less, and even at those rates her profit was very small; she was likewise well informed that the Tavern keepers in Annapolis and other places received at the same rate for similar articles. She represents that she is very old and infirm and lives only by her industry, and therefore prays
