Blind Guianians 'look' to Baltimore eye bank

At a small hospital in Georgetown, British Guiana, three elderly blind victims of leprosy are quietly awaiting news from Baltimore.

The news, if it comes, will be flashed from the Medical Eye Bank of Maryland, and it will probably mean that their sight will be restored.

The drama began last week when a Baltimore opthalmologist received a letter from Dr. J. Goel, an opthalmologist at Government Hospital at Georgetown.

Dr. Goel advised of his recent success in restoring the sight of four blind lepers by grafting corneal tissue to their eyes. Normally, Dr. Goel pointed out, lepers are not considered good cases for corneal transplants.

Having heard of the work of the Medical Eye Bank of Maryland from a nun at Georgetown who recently visited Mercy Hospital in Baltimore, Dr. Goel asked whether four eyes could be flown to him in early August.

"It's not really so simple," says William H. Dobelle, executive director of the Eye Bank, "because an eye bank is very different from, for example, a blood bank.

"The Eye Bank coordinates the collection of eye tissue from deceased persons for use by surgeons in restoring the sight of people with certain kinds of blindness.

"But the transplanting must be done within a very short span of time — normally no more than 72 hours.

"This means that we are entirely dependent upon persons who have indicated their desire to donate their eyes upon their own death, or the permission of relatives of persons who have just passed away," he declared.

During the first six months of this year, the Maryland Eye bank which is one of the most active of the 70 eye banks in the U.S., received 176 eyes, most of these were used for operations at local hospitals, but many were flown for emergency use to other locations.

James Roberts

Funeral services were held on Monday for James Roberts, 78, S. Kresuth St. in the chapel of Morton and Dyett Funeral Home. He was 43.

Mr. Roberts died at home on July 26 after suffering a heart attack.

He was born in Griffin, Ga. and was married to Mrs. Lillie Roberts for 20 years.

The truck driver was described as being a "good provider" by a member of his family, and was a member of the Division St. Branch of the Elks.

He is survived by his wife, two sons, Erick Wayne and James Roberts Jr.; his father and stepmother, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Roberts Sr., of Richmond, one sister and three brothers.

Second panel shows mixed emotions of guardsmen en route to duty. Asked his name the serious-looking temporary soldier answered crisply, "I only speak in the line of duty, sir." Third panel shows the make-shift barricade erected by angry young militants. It said and they were soon dismantled by a squad of coldly efficient guardsmen. away to the East.

Dr. King repeated that gaining progress wheets a cease for more progress, and that Northern colored persons small gains may have made only more frustrated to achieve larger gains.

Dr. Wilkins, saying his point might be unpopular, took the sociological view that family stability and control were stronger in the South and that life there was not as de-personalized as in the "great anonymous cities."

Mr. Gregory, whose flair for irony caused a steely sort of laughter to mark the proceedings, said white Southerners had "always been honest" with colored persons, had not been.

As seen by Dr. Wilkins, while the white Northerner "Whatever trouble we've had in the South was in the struggle to get the rights; in the North, it's been the struggle to make the North give us what we're supposed to have."

ON OTHER matters, Gregory called Drs. King and Wilkins the "two most important men in America."

He said what they find on President Johnson's commission on racial rioting will "decide if America will survive or not."

Gregory also said the Commission needed more psychiatrists, more philosophers and more sociologists — and fewer politicians — to study racial problems.

He added that amid all the talk of looters, hoodlums and unlawfulness, no one was talking about "a theory called spontaneous combustion."

"When you put oily, greasy rags in a closet, and close the door so air can't circulate, nature's going to take care of the rest.

"You can call those rags ignorant, you can call them fool. If you don't have enough wisdom to open the door, it's spontaneous combustion.

"The black ghettoes in America today are America's oily, greasy, dirty rags," Gregory declared.

In audience questioning, one man asked Dr. King if he noticed any mass suicidal tendencies in the riots.

Dr. King said, "I do see in some riots a kind of saying "I would rather be dead than ignored."

IN ANOTHER question, Dr. King said the church must stamp segregation as evil, educate the people to fight "superstitious fears" about colored persons, and to continue fighting for civil rights legislation.

He added, "What we have here is basically a moral issue."

Asked why he was devoting "so much time" to protesting the Vietnam War instead of "getting scholarships" for colored persons, Dr. King said he did spent 95 per cent of his time in civil rights work.

He added, however, that as a churchman he must denounce war as "evil," that as a fighter for personal rights of humans he must be concerned with "the rest of the world" and that he had "worked too long to get rid of segregation in public accommodations to segregate his moral concern."

DR. KING also defended his proposal for a guaranteed minimum wage, saying he first desired a job for everybody before guaranteeing money.

But he said many were unemployable or required training and that these people must have a wage, too.

He added a new "definition of work" to include housework and student effort, was needed.

He denied such a proposal robbed people of dignity.

Dr. Wilkins told a questioner that the way to educate colored slum children was to approach them as "educable" and to speak their interest in ways they understand.

He also said that crash building programs for slum clearance would need much cooperation from builders, city officials, contractors and all concerned.

MAYOR ALLEN said he was sure that a country that could finance the effort of World War II could marshal enough resources to eradicate slums. He said the job could be done in three to five years.

The panel touched on "the new revolution" and its methods. Gregory said the current phase came out of evolutionary growth.

He called a pregnant woman's nine month's gestation period "evolution," but said that when the baby was ready to be born, that's revolution."

Mr. Evans gave special thanks to Drew Pearson, the columnist, for arranging panel discussion.

I want to know who's running for office and how the city is solving it's problems."

Asked what he missed most about Baltimore the Army officer said," I miss steamed crabs more than anything else. You can get crabs here but I like steamed crabs Baltimore-styled."

Two merchant seamen who once lived in Baltimore and sailed from the Baltimore harbor recently arrived in Vietnam aboard a San Francisco freighter.

Chief Chef Maurice Franklin and first assistant Chef R. J. Lowe landed in Saigon Monday night aboard the Bucyrus Victory with supplies to support the U.S. war effort in Vietnam.

"Baltimore use to be my old stomping ground before I started shipping off the West Coast," Franklin said. "I use to at a lot of crabs and hang out at the Clown Club on Pennsylvania Avenue. I think they've thing comes in and nothing goes out without that changed the name of the club."

THIS IS THE first trip the two sailors have made to Saigon but both have sailed north to Da Nang on previous trips.

"The sea is a good life," Lowe said. "It takes us three weeks to sail here from California and the trip over is real nice until you get in Vietnam waters.

"We too long go one of the merchant ships was blown up when it hit a couple of mines in the mouth of the harbor."

All U. S. merchant seamen receive extra wages for tours in Vietnam.

Franklin and Lowe said that the trip back to the United States from Vietnam was always a "little rough."

"Saigon is a one way port," Lowe said. "Everything comes in and nothing goes out and with out that extra weight on board when you leave, if you hit a storm you just spin around out on that ocean like a child's top."

conference must be reserved for those who shun lawlessness, who win their places at the conference table by leadership that builds rather than destroys.

The problem-solving must be done by constructing militance such as the Wilkinses, Kings, Youngs and Randolphs — not by the Carmichaels, Joneses and the Browns.

But it should include the younger responsible leadership as well as older, more established leaders. Responsibility is the yardstick.

IT SHALL continue to be my firm policy to do everything possible to provide jobs, good housing, and better educational opportunities for the poor and underprivileged, both colored and white, in Maryland.

I will meet with any responsible leaders to discuss the problems that confront us. I will not meet with those who engage in or urge riots and other criminal acts as weapons to obtain power.

IN CONCLUSION, I commend the citizens of both races who have refused to conduct themselves with intelligent restraint in spite of great pressure.

I share the sorrow of those who have suffered and who continue to suffer from the wreckless acts of a few.

For the confused and weak, who seek to excuse, appease and rationalize for the criminals who threaten our society, I have only pity.

achieve human dignity.

"As a city councilman, I have repeatedly pointed out that the city is not an Equal Opportunity Employer. Also, in many instances the city is paying poverty wages.

"It is permitting a hierachy in labor jobs that prevent colored workers from advancing and this has added frustration.

"The city should take the lead in stop-gap jobs and industry and labor together with the city should take compensatory action to open up jobs at all levels, but especially entry jobs, that have been denied colored residents.

Right now the city should crash or "stop-gap" with hundreds of jobs even if industry has to pay part of the tab.

"Let there be made work, if necessary, for we can clean up the city empty lots and debris but permit and induce those being employed to enter specialized training with definite prospects for gainful employment.

"The city can play the role of the "feeder." It can create its own-on-the-job training for many jobs above the labor level that are now open and modify, in a practical sense, the entrance requirements.

"Thomas D'Alesandro (City Council President) and Parren Mitchell (Head of Community Action Agency) are to be commended for their alertness in securing the Conservation Employment Program known as CEP for Baltimore.

"Its starting date should be advanced. The Opportunities Industrialization Center, known as OIC, is an important concept that must receive, on an accelerated basis, the continued cooperation of industry.

"As fast as qualifiable persons can be produced, they must be gainfully employed. I am a member of the Voluntary Council on Equal Employment and the Board of our Chamber of Commerce.

"Certainly, I am reaching out, but the fact that I am there, on the inside so to speak, as well as in the City Council — has enabled me to help convince some employers of their responsibilities.

"Fortunately, for Baltimore, we have not been asleep. We have a long way to go, but present even's will stimulate and quicken action, training programs for people to fill them.

"We must quickly come up
