IN MEMORIAM

May we let our light so shine that it will illuminate that which is good and beautiful, and magnify our Father which is in heaven. May we stand strong and firm against despair, falsehood, rudeness, hatred, pessimism and prejudice.—Carl Murphy, Editor-Publisher—1889-1967

Needed: Brains Not Bayonets

President Johnson's Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders last week began its widely heralded search for the keys to what causes ghetto after ghetto to erupt during a succession of "long, hot summers" and how to deal with them.

Of course, the 11 members of the commission could adjourn without any prolonged deliberation in deciding the underlying causes of ghetto discontent.

It is no secret.

These people are bitterly angry and with just cause.

Dilapidated housing for which they are forced to pay exorbitant rents, their children are jammed into crowded classes in ancient school buildings, inadequate recreation facilities and regular abuse by bigoted policemen are daily reminders of studied official indifference to their problems.

If it is to render a real service to the nation, the commission should address itself chiefly to what must be done quickly to eliminate the causes of these violent explosions.

There are two schools of thought developing.

Those who like the "hard nose" approach foolishly believe that law and order can come without justice.

Congressional leader of this faction is the ex-Klansman, Sen. Robert C. Byrd, the West Virginia Democrat, who insists riots "should be put down with brutal force." His solution: "Shoot them on the spot."

He offers no suggestion about improving the appalling living conditions in the ghetto; he's not interested in upgrading schools or finding jobs for the unemployed; nor is he moved by ghetto complaints about rats and roaches.

Concurring to a degree in the Byrd peace formula of suppression as the best way to silence the anguished outcries of the oppressed are FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, the aging columnist, David Lawrence, the segregationist Georgia governor, Lester Maddox and Mississippi's gift to the House of Representatives, Thomas G. Abernathy.

Hoover, would clap the leaders behind bars. Lawrence would deal out swift and certain punishment to any who protest. Maddox would not only employ brute police force, but would immediately cut off relief checks to all colored citizens. Abernethy would repeal all federal civil rights laws.

We fervently hope that Gov. Otto Kerner and his commission, in their report to the President, will give short shrift to these insane proposals.

Suppression is clearly not the answer. Deep resentment will only invite even greater violence, more terrifying holocausts, a series of explosions that could shake the very foundation of America.

What is needed now is not bayonets but brains and boldness. The message must be put across to the President that the same urgency he applies to the Vietnam war must also be given to the plight of the ghettoes if the nation is to ever enjoy peace in our lifetime.

Ordeal By Committee

In an article for his newspaper, New York Times writer Fred P. Graham notes that hearings on the nomination of Thurgood Marshall as a Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court revealed that the present procedures serve only as a punishment to a future Justice by political enemies.

He describes Thurgood's three weeks before the Judiciary body as an "ordeal-by-committee."

We certainly agree with this estimate of the filibuster produced by Democrat Senators Ervin of N.C., McClellan of Arkansas, Eastland of Miss. and ex-Democrat Thurmond of S.C. — aided and abetted by Republican Dirksen of Illinois.

We are gratified that the show ended Wednesday, and that Thurgood's name will now go to the full Senate as the recommended nominee of the Committee.

The final excuse for holding up the nomination was that Senator Ervin wanted to await publication of the transcript of testimony before proceeding to vote — obviously a staff, designed to grate the nerves of a distinguished American and to appeal to the baser racist views back home.

The tactics of the Southerners on this nomination have been unworthy of responsible representatives of the black and white constituencies of N.C., Miss., S.C. and Arkansas. And frankly, we are surprised at Senator Smathers of Fla., who joined the infamous four in voting against Thurgood's appointment.

We view the majority's carefully contrived two-week hiatus for the filing of the minority Southern views as an unearned and unmerited nod to obstructionist irresponsibility. In our estimate, these men are no more responsible in their roles than are H. Rap Brown and Stokely Carmichael in theirs.

We are fast approaching the day, even in the South, when colored voter-strength will effectively curb such shenanigans as went on around the Marshall appointment.

Black boys in the ghettoes, with stones in their fists and firebombs stashed in the garage, read the papers. They may not be able to follow the procedural niceties, but they got the message that "Soul Brother" Marshall was being stymied.

We hope the black voter-strength will do its job on the Thurmonds, the Ervins, the Eastlands, the McClellans and the Smatheres — not to speak of the Dirksens (his is another problem) — before the black boys grow more weary of waiting than they already are.

Draft Law Watchdog

L. Mendel Rivers, the South Carolina Dixiecrat, who by grace of seniority presides over the House Armed Services Committee, has named Rep. F. Edward Herbert of Louisiana chairman of a subcommittee to keep tabs on the operation of the draft.

The gross inequitability of the new draft act is the handiwork of Mr. Rivers.

Ignoring the sensible recommendations of the President's Special Commission on the Draft, he rammed through a lopsided law protecting sons of the wealthy from the life or death risks of service in Vietnam, while placing an unfair burden on the backs of colored youths and the poor.

Making Mr. Hebert the Congressional guardian of the operation of the new law is a logical followup of the South Carolinian's determination that the business of sending young men to possible death in Vietnam shall remain largely in white hands.

Representative Hebert's state of Louisiana with a colored population above thirty per cent has never seen the justice of naming any colored person to sit on its local selective service boards.

Choosing him to stand watch over this new subcommittee is akin to choosing a big, hungry alley cat to bird-sit over a caged canary.

They Don't Know Why We're So Unhappy Down Here

Wilkins Speaks • By Roy Wilkins

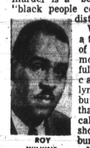
Narcotic Thrill Before Shakes Of Disintegration

It marks some kind of step on some kind of road in U.S. race relations that in 1967 Americans are told that murder is a "beautiful example" of "black people controlling their own districts."



ROY WILKINS

We are now come to a time when the killing of a human being by a mob is called "beautiful!" Colored Americans have been lynched by white mobs but it is not recorded that any mobster ever called a killing by shooting, hanging or burning beautiful.

Lynchers have staged Roman holidays. Mothers have held up their little ones so they could better see the spectacle. White people have gouged out eyes and chopped off toes. Once in a Southern town they set fire to the courthouse and roasted two black men alive who had been locked away from the mob in a top-floor jail.

But afterwards, nobody called bestiality beautiful. Some vomited. Some swore. Some got drunk and beat their wives, trying thus to rid themselves of the mark of Cain. But beautiful? No one thought of that, not even Hitler and his haters. For them it was "necessary" to kill Jews. They devised fiendishly efficient methods of wholesale slaughter. But even some of them vomited. Some committed suicide, unable to live with themselves. None called it beautiful.

Snarling statement of a hater

No, it has remained for a "leader" of a youthful group to discover and to preach beauty in the stomping murder of a Plainfield, N.J., white policeman.

Of all the terrifying developments of recent years, none should awaken white American more than this snarling statement from a driven young man.

For, if the signs are correct, white America has committed more than the crime of creating a 23-year-old hater of white people; it must answer for creating a man so blinded in eye and mind as to be unsuited for living in a world of human beings, whatever their color.

Alarm bells should ring

Calculated and cold-blooded murder may be defended in some instances. But when, in the minds of its prophets and practitioners, it becomes beautiful and acceptable as a means of "controlling" (whatever that means) a geographic area, alarm bells should ring.

By this frenzied scream black Americans are being urged to fashion a social order (of their own, naturally) where murder will be released from its anti-social prison and be brought to sit at the "black" society table. A ruthless individual can make his way with hate and blood and death. He can rise, for a little span, to wealth and power, but a whole people — never.

What do black people want from life? To be a Czar, a Medici, a Prussian, a Hitler, a Simon Legree, a Grand Dragon of the Ku Klux Klan? Haven't we seen enough of bent bodies, shrunken spirits, hatred and death not to want more of the same for anyone? Not to want all these as a lion loose in the streets of what some devotees call a black world?

Quite aside from the conflicts, real or conjured up, with big and little white seats of irritation and power, the basic question beneath all grievances and all strategy to redress those grievances is: "What kind of people do colored Americans want to become?" The language disdained by the New Left declared that a man shall not profit if he gains the whole world and loses his own soul.

Whether the course is the suicidal one of separatism (as in Rhodesia and South Africa) or the tortuous one of struggling together for man's freedom, the creed that holds mob murder to be beautiful is only the narcotic thrill before the shakes of disintegration.

Lotsa Laughs

Chairman William Colmer called it the "civil rats bill." Then the fun really started during a House Rules Commitee hearing on a bill to allocate federal funds to help eradicate rats from the nation's urban slums.

"Why not subsidize cats instead?" quipped Rep. Colmer. Another congressman noted that the federal government opposes discrimination and asked: "If the black rats complained, what would happen?"

In this country at least 14,000 persons, most of them children and babies confined in cribs in urban slums, are bitten by rats each year. Some of those children die. In Rep. Colmer's home state of Mississippi, children are literally starving.

Very funny.

Tells Black Power Boys Get A Hair Cut; Get Rid Of Robes, Turbans And Dark Glasses

A news report quoted one of the so-called black power advocates as saying that President Johnson was calling upon his house "n--s" for advice in connection with the riot problems. This ugly racial epithet that we have spent so many years trying to erase from the news pages and eliminate from the radio, television and theatre was spelled out in full by the publication that used the story.

CLARENCE MITCHELL JR.

There was a sad irony about this. The paper that used the quotation abandoned racial designations in crime stories a number of years ago. It went through the tedious arguments about whether the word "Negro" should be spelled with a capital or lower case letter. Its editors have tried to be fair in reporting the news generally. Its editorials are usually written in favor of civil rights. Its employment policies are not perfect, but it does make an attempt to hire without discrimination.

A closer look needed

It is my opinion that if a white racist had used the odious term "n--r" in speaking of the President's action it would not have appeared in the news story. Thus we have a throwback to a condition that was a major source of friction in the past. The person making the throwback possible was a colored man and not a white individual.

The foregoing suggests that we should take a closer look at some of the people who are making the pronouncements on so-called new racial programs. The first question posed: can a person who uses racial epithets be trusted to serve as a spokesman for any group of responsible people? Unless we are ready to say that our whole campaign against derogatory racial terms was a mistake, the answer to that question is an emphatic "No."

Another thing that comes to mind is the constant reference to burning and murder that characterizes the speeches and writings of these spokesmen. Through the years all of us have condemned the church burners and the cross burners. We have inveighed against the terror tactics Klansmen and bigots who show their displeasure with the lynch rope and the shotgun blasts. Obviously, we were not wrong in doing this. Equally it is obvious that those who advocate such tactics cannot be moving in the direction we have always wanted to move.

Then there is the name changing, the ostentatious dress, the unkempt hair and the liberal use of the term "soul." This, too, is not a new experience if we reflect carefully on the past actions of those who were trying to sell a package without revealing its true merits.

Recalls days of depression

In the days of the great depression we were afflicted with a plague of prophets and self-proclaimed divinities. Most of them had ordinary names like John Smith or Sam Brown. They knew that if John Smith or Sam Brown had something to sell the public there was a need to do the selling under bright lights and with full opportunity for the prospective buyers to make a close inspection.

Interestingly, when the Smiths and Browns changed their names to something exotic like Prophet Zingunga or the True God Schmoggles business would pick up. Meetings could be held in dimly lighted rooms, magic powders could be sold in sealed envelopes and the gullible fought for a chance to pay a dime for a "lucky number" or a special enemy-destroying rag doll.

Now the Smiths and Browns are adopting what they say are African names. They shave their heads in contrast to their prototypes who wore turbans and clothing roughly similar to the garb of the people of India. Where depression type prophets and godlings enjoyed using the poetic and sonorous phrases of the Old Testament or the Koran, their modern descendants like to use dirty four-letter words, bits of philosophy and a special jargon which they say is the language of the man in the street.

Can't see any difference

Perhaps the wearers of the so-called Afro hair styles are really sincere, but I know some of them who were steady customers in the "process" shops only a few years ago. Somehow, it is hard to see much difference between the type of person who wants to attract attention by letting his hair grow long and wooly and the person who wants to gain notice by getting the slickest treatment possible for carefully cultivated long hair.

I would like to make a suggestion to this new cult. First, give your real names. Next, discard the dark glasses so your eyes may be seen. Then get normal hair cuts. Get rid of the robes, the odd head gear and the dirty words. Drop the racial epithets and the advocacy of mayhem and murder. When these things are done, state your ideas in simple language. Only then will it be possible to know whether we are hearing a message from the heart or the usual claptrap of charlatans.

CHICAGO — Before the last "amen" had ascended from the lips of those who prayed on the last Sunday in July at the request and suggestion of the Nation's Chief Executive, the pyro-artists were setting fire to the shameful ghetto in Milwaukee.

Newspaper reports of causes of the "riot" (better defined as a form of revolution) indicated the many times residents had been "praying" or relief from the ghetto and all its inherent evils.

Their prayers were unanswered either by God or by the Great White Fathers, and so fire became the order of the night and the day that followed.

Opponents have condemned the technique of non-violent demonstrations and marches. Violence by whites characterized the Open Housing Marchers of Chicago '66.

Cars were burned, bricks and bottles hurled. One caught Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., on the head. There were no echoes from Congress then showing any interest in anti-riot legislation.

When we are suggesting is that there is a time for prayer and that there are those who, in addition to the prayers of oh, so many years, have designated a time for burning. At this point most of us would welcome the return of non-violence marches in place of burnings.

There is a time for prayer and such a thing as prayer purpose. Traditionally most prayer purposes are by persons asking something for themselves. Prayers of contrition and intercession are rarely heard.

A day of contitional prayer — sorrow, detestation and penitence — for the sins of racism in the hearts and minds of the guilty black and white alike: a day of intercessory prayer on behalf of those victimized by cancerous racism, would be most timely and meaningful.

A potent force could be unleashed in our society more meaningful than the torch or molotov cocktail that could well be initiated by the black church.

Black men need to STOP their beggin, self-centered prayers and start praying with a purpose. Pray that "whitey" will be forgiven for his racism. Pray to be imbued with man's most potent force: LOVE.

Meanwhile, at Mr. Charley's church, they ought to be raising prayers on contrition and confession for the major sin of racism.

Two separate Altars of Prayers that could soon merge into one — an Altar of Mutual Love and Concern — are awaiting those who know when and what to pray for.

Wee minds in Congress

DURHAM, N.C. — It is tragic fact that at times of crisis in our Republic some afflicted with little men who sit in high office. A case in point is Republican Rep. James Gardner.

For weeks now he has made it his personal mission to attack and downgrade the anti-poverty program in Durham, and those associated with it. He has even presumed to interject himself into the Newark tragedy.

It would be interesting to know to what extent the congressmen's inflammatory remarks contributed to the breakdown of law and order in Durham.

I charge that Rep. Gardner is as guilty of racism as the most extreme of the militants. Attacking poverty programs, voter registration drives, and other programs, that benefit the powerless is a slick way of appealing to white voters who want to keep colored people "in their place."

I challenge Gardner to present any evidence that he has supported programs designed to alleviate the terrible living conditions of the poor. He recently voted for the anti-riot bill.

But the very next day he was recorded against consideration of the bill to provide money to exterminate rats which plague the city slums, biting children and spreading disease. Big man! Such behavior provides a real lesson in values.

A great country and little minds (and hearts) go ill together.

WILLIAM E. JACKSON JR.

Whitey wouldn't listen

ROSEMONT Pa. — Race riots that are bringing death and destruction to our American cities are saying something to us — if only we have ears to hear.

They are saying, first, that burning, looting and killing are Black Power's reprisals for the intolerable living conditions in the black ghettos of the nation; reprisals for the rat-infested tenements, the overcrowding, lack of adequate educational and job opportunities, the galling humiliation of second-class citizenship, the disillusionment and despair attendant upon poverty and destitution.

And coming through loud and clear is the warning that burning, looting and killing will continue, with increasing destructiveness, so long as these conditions remain unchanged.

The riots are saying, second, that pouring thousands of lives and billions of dollars into a war against Communism halfway around the world does not make sense while we placidly and self-righteously overlook conditions that breed Communism here at home.

Thundering from every hilltop in Vietnam are these withering words: "Physician, heal theyself!"

JOHN C. SLEMP

Rockets' glare unneeded

NEW BRUNSWICK N.J. — As this letter is being written an angry crowd is gathering in downtown New Brunswick. Their demands parallel those we have heard so often — jobs, housing and recreational facilities.

As of now the line which separates these people from the destructive forces we have witnessed in Newark and Watts is very thin.

Is it conclevable that a nation which can spend three million dollars a day in Vietnam, build supersonic airplanes and multi-million dollar nuclear reactors cannot find the impetus to alleviate conditions which are making life in our cities intolerable?

It is obvious that money alone will not solve these problems. Every citizen has a moral responsibility to demand that government at all levels give this matter its top priority. The alternatives are clear. Civilization or social chaos.

He expresses more genuine concern about life in the ghetto areas than any other mayor, including LaGuardia. JVL grows in stature everyday. I salute New York's greatest mayor. Long live Lindsay!

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — The phony war on poverty is backfiring and we are in the twilight of anarchy. The eruptions in Newark, Detroit and elsewhere have been mild compared with what will come next.

America will continue to sit on a powder keg until the people allow themselves to recognize the truth about our domestic troubles. The root cause is not race or civil rights, but money.

That shifts the color spectrum a little.

The millionaire and the pauper must ultimately be made to vanish because each breeds the other and pauperism is producing our turmoil.

A Colonial is a Colonial

Brooklyn, N.Y. — How strange, Washington and London are all upset over the Middle East crisis. This didn't happen when Arabs were driven from their land. It seems to me, when the shoe is on the other foot, they kit shout for Uncle.

In Africa, 225,000 whites subjugate four million Africans in Rhodesia, Angola and other areas under the guise of Christianity.

Those old enough haven't forgotten 1936, when Italian troops invaded Ethiopia, murdering black men, women and children as they went. Washington and London were unimpressed.

Much more recently there was the Sharpeville massacre by whites calling themselves South Africans. I don't know how much more of this we can stand.

The continent beckons. Are we ready? The house we live in is about to cave in. Egypt fell; Greece fell; Rome fell, rose, and is on its way out again. Tell me, What are we waiting for?

man who has to have everything "just so."

His attorney said he has made as much as $45,000 a year in legitimate real estate transactions but now has not even a change of clothes.

His lawyer also said on the many occasions Rochkind has been in prison so compulsive was his gambling habit he would bet with other inmates for cigarettes although he does not smoke.

In trouble "all his life" from gambling, he said he has nothing left even from the $27,000 he made in 1965 and the large sums he made in 1966. His real estate license was not renewed in 1965.

AS TO Rochkind's prison record, a Federal marshall told the court he had violated parole of a 10-year California sentence for forged securities. He had served five years and now would have to be returned to the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga. to complete the term, the agent said.

Records also show a December, 1963 forgery sentence of one to 14 years, paroled in 1956 and Baltimore convictions November, 1950, larceny, 18 months suspended. That probation of two years was violated in August, 1951.

"We all need money, we all have a compulsive need, so it is a waste of time to tell me. He has no mental defect. He obtained most of the money by the newspaper advertisement.

"In each case the sentence is five years concurrent and probation subject to any other sentence (in Federal Court) and restitution and costs."

THE HOUSE - for - rent scheme came to light in February when Mrs. Bernard Burley, 1000 block W. Lafayette Ave., went to the States Attorney's Office to report she thought she and her husband had been victims of a tall man driving a green cadillac.

She revealed she read the ad a "Morris Harris" had in the AFRO Jan. 24 about a house for rent in the 6200 block Robin Hill Rd. and called him.

According to testimony, "Mark Harris" showed her and her husband the house Jan. 25 and obtained two months advance rent of $260 cash.

A "contract" that was to be mailed to them never arrived, she said.

Checking before they were ready to move into the house, the family found the owners had no knowledge it had been rented.

Det. Herbert Armstrong of States Attorney's Investigation Squad said within a short time other similar complaints came in.

During intense investigation in February and March, he and Det. Richard D. Nevin were able to find the real name and address of the "real estate salesman."

Rochkind was arrested in April and Det. Armstrong took the cases to the Grand Jury as "specials."

Rochkind drove a green late model cadillac. Among various addresses he used were the 5600 block Denmore Ave.; 6600 block Sanzo Rd. and the 2100 block Tucker Lane, address of an apartment house which he gave the AFRO as residence.

The other families and the amounts he obtained from them are:

"to relieve the critical condition in housing."

The indictment and demand came in a statement entitled, "Position Paper No. 1," adopted by the civil rights group's executive committee and signed by its president, Samuel Gilmer.

A spokesman for the group noted that copies of the statement have been sent to county executive Joseph W. Alton, Jr., and Annapolis Mayor Roger W. Moyer.

The statement adopted last week is prefaced by the fact that while the NAACP does not approve of riots;

"We comprehend the despair and loss of faith that have motivated the riots."

THE DIRECTIVE notes, "The need for prompt action in housing by local government has been well documented in numerous studies by religious, civic and government-appointed groups.

"The time for study has passed. Now is the time for action."

The group asks that critical housing be relieved by:

1. The city constructing the 250 approved low cost public housing units;

2. The county contracting with the Federal Government for low cost public housing;

3. The passage of open occupancy legislation by both the city and county.
