MRS. PAUL FREEDMAN SCOTT, JR.

Miss Ann Frances Randol bride of Paul F. Scott of Baltimore

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Miss Ann Frances Randol, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood E. Randol of this city, and Paul F. Scott, Jr. of Baltimore, Md. were married in All Saints' Episcopal Church, here, Friday.

The ceremony, at six in the evening, was performed by the Rev. Fr. Joseph W. Nichols, and a reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

• • •

THE BRIDE, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white chiffon over an A-line under dress with lace trim at neck and sleeves. The floor-length train was of satin and chiffon, and her shoulder-length veil was caught by a lace flower head band.

She carried a cascade of phaelenopsis, orchid and stephanotis with ivy satin loops.

• • •

MRS. DAVID B. PRICE, Jr., of this city, matron of honor, wore a chiffon print over blue satin, with matching head bow. She carried a cascade of white carnations.

Bridesmaids were Miss Gail M. Young of University City, Mo., Miss Franciile Rusan of Richmond Heights, Mo., Miss Brenda J. Andrews of Cleveland, Ohio, Miss Valda J. Harris of Montgomery, Ala., Mrs. John W. Days of Washington, D.C., and Mrs. Elwood R. Randol, II, of Los Angeles, Calif.

Their gowns were in pink, orchid and green shades and the cascades of carnations matched the individual dresses.

• • •

JOHN W. DAYS of Washington was best man for Mr. Scott. Ushers were Jesse L. Porter of Nashville, Tenn., William O. Daniels of Dayton, Ohio, John J. Oliver, Jr. of Baltimore, Md., Frederick Sweets of this city, Elwood E. Randol, II of Los Angeles, and David B. Price of this city.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Randol wore pink cotton with lace bodice and matching coat. Mrs. Scott's ensemble was also in pink.

• • •

FOLLOWING THEIR wedding trip to Kentucky Lake, Mr. and Mrs. Scott will be at home at 2208 Morena Ave., Nashville, Tenn.

Mr. Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul F. Scott, Sr. of Baltimore, is a graduate of Fisk University and a teacher of elementary education. Mrs. Scott attended Drury College and Fisk University.

Wall-Arrington ceremony held

ENFIELD, N.C. — The Daniel Chapel Baptist Church was the setting for recent wedding of Miss Clyde Gwendolyn Arrington to Elroy Wall of Laurinburg.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Arrington Sr. The bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wall of Laurinburg, N.C.

The double-ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Frank L. Bullock. An informal reception followed in the church dining hall.

Music was by Troy C. Hardy of Rocky Mount.

• • •

THE BRIDE escorted by her father, wore a gown of white silk organza over taffeta with a bodice of Alencon lace, reembroidered with seed pearls. Her short veil was attached to a tiny hat of orange blossoms and she carried a cascade bouquet of white carnations and mums.

The bride's mother wore a two-piece dress of champagne lace with matching accessories. Her corsage was an array of yellow mums.

Mrs. Dorothy Lawrence Busch of Enfield and Greensboro was the matron of honor. Miss Vera L. Arrington, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Calpurnia E. Arrington of Washington, D.C., sister-in-law, of the bride, were bridesmaids. Gwenneite Arrington was the flower girl for her aunt.

• • •

GROVER WALL was best man for his brother. The ushers were Luther N. Arrington of Seat Pleasant, Md., brother of the bride; and Gilbert Wardell of Greensboro, N.C. Anthony Pittman, of Newport News, Va., cousin of the bride, was the ring-bearer.

The bride is a graduate of Elizabeth City State College and is currently employed in the Charles County Public Schools of Maryland.

The bridegroom attended A and T College, Greensboro and is employed in Washington, D.C. Following their honeymoon through the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia they will reside at 1819 Belehaven Drive, Landover, Md.

Mini skirt is Saigon issue

By MIKE DAVIS

SAIGON — Should the mini-skirt be outlawed in Vietnam?

That, believe it or not, may become one of the major issues in the Sept. 3 national elections to be held in South Vietnam.

Presidential candidate Tran Van Ly said if elected he would ban the mini-skirt in Vietnam.

"The mini-skirt is an un-Vietnamese thing," the candidate said. "It should be strictly banned in this country."

Just how popular the platform plank will be with Vietnamese women is unknown.

A large percentage of the younger girls have cast aside the traditional ao dais in favor of mini-skirts imported from Hong Kong, Britain and the United States.

FRANK HORTON FOR PRESIDENT

By SAM LACY

Those Republicans who are frantically searching for a presidential candidate for 1968, can certainly find a lot of support in my field for Representative Frank Horton, their man from New York . . . The honorable Mr. Horton last week began work on a bill that is designed to erase the tax liability for athletes winning special awards . . . Particular emphasis is laid on the Hickok Belt, presented annually to the top professional athlete of the year . . . S. Rae Hickok, head of the firm which makes the award, takes great pride in publicizing the fact that it is a $10,000 work of art . . .

Two recent winners of the prize are Maury Wills (1962) and Frank Robinson (1966) . . . The former, when told that Internal Revenue expected him to pay taxes on the bell, went to court . . . As do most of us in battles with the tax bureau, Maury lost the case . . . His lawyers contended that it was ridiculous to tax a man for being given something he didn't ask for . . . particularly when that something is a doo-dad he could neither eat, spend, sell or use . . . The argument seemed sound and logical to most of us in this business . . . and apparently, to Rep. Horton.

Sense in crazy world

He can't understand why awards given in other fields — science, literature, education and the arts, for example — are granted exemption from the tax laws, and those for athletic achievement aren't . . . Mr. Horton's research discloses that the Internal Revenue code covering this particular type of award fails to exclude those given to athletes from gross income . . . He reasons that a serious inequity is present here and something needs to be done about it.

In a crazy, mixed up world in which (1) AFRO correspondent Mike Davis writes that colored guys are doing most of the fighting and dying in Vietnam while their brothers are burning down their own homes in American cities . . . (2) young people abandon their endowment of good heads and fine physiques to wander in the weird fantasy of narcotics . . . (3) a government contents itself with mere swipes at mistreatment of 12 million people at home, in order to preserve democracy 10,000 and 12,000 miles away among people who don't even know the meaning of the word . . . and (4) squanders 2 billion dollars a day to sustain a war nobody can win, Congressman Horton comes up with one of the few things that makes sense.

'Mr. Charlie' awakens

Two years ago, A to Z addressed itself to the rampant segregation that persists in the filling of summer jobs in private industry . . . It pointed out that hundreds of deserving young athletes and other college students go without vacation employment because "Mister Charlie" deliberately looks out the window when the subject of hiring for seashore and mountain resort areas is brought up.

The column pointed up its awareness of the existence of thousands of little temporary jobs in Catskill and Poconoke restaurants, supermarkets, hotels and filling stations and Boardwalk shillelies . . . over 90 percent of which are manned by white youngsters.

This summer, the situation was remedied somewhat . . . At least one restaurant chain, Howard Johnson's, mixed its counter crew as well as its kitchen department . . . And at least one predominantly-colored college — North Carolina at Durham — awakened to its responsibility of seeking and obtaining vacation work through its student placement office. . . Both are to be complimented for their efforts.

Hard to believe

Listening to Angelo Dundee the other day, I found myself more disillusioned than ever by boxing, if that be possible . . . Angelo has long been regarded one of the few because in a sport that is admittedly beset with double-talkers and dealers . . . Then he pops off about his new heavyweight hope, Jimmy Ellis . . .

"He's the best fighter in the world," asserted the former manager of Cassius (Muhammad Ali) Clay . . . "He's always been the best, all he needs is to believe in himself" . . . Ellis, in the eyes of this writer and I'm sure to many others in my group, is strictly a second-rate sparring partner who is going nowhere, and not even getting there fast . . . And after listening to Dundee urge Ellis to believe in himself, one is shocked to discover how hard it is to now believe in Dundee.

And on the subject of Clay, it is interesting to note that the Florida Sportswriters Association included the deposed heavyweight champion's name among the 13 nominees for enshrinement in the Florida Hall of Fame at Jacksonville.

'Poor' Wilt

If there were occasion for any of us to take a look at the Dun and Bradstreet ratings at the moment, it would be inconceivable that the owner of a multi-million-dollar apartment complex, a stable of harness horses, two thriving night clubs and major insurance stock was thrown in jail just ten years ago because he didn't have $5.

That was the plight of Wilt Chamberlain, who as a player is the highest-paid performer in pro basketball . . . Bill Russell receives a little more in salary, but he's a player-coach.

It seems that Wilt, then a student at Kansas University, drove to Greensboro, N.C., to pick up his friend, Vince Miller; now the special statistician for coach Alex Hannum of the Philadelphia 76ers . . . Miller was a student at North Carolina A and T . . . They started to drive home, Vince piloting the car for the first 200 miles . . . Wilt then took over the wheel and after only 15 minutes he was stopped for speeding in Bowling Green, Va.

• • •

THE FINE was $75 . . . Wilt only had $40, and Vince and another companion only $30 between them . . . That made him $5 short . . . Wilt offered to pay half and wire the other half so that they would have some money for the rest of the trip, but the cops refused this offer . . . Wilt tried to contact his mother in Philadelphia so that she would wire the money . . . That was when he learned that Western Union was on strike . . . And that's when Wilt was placed in jail since he was the driver of the car.

All of his fellow prisoners thought he was Walter Dukes, who was then well known in basketball, although the authorities knew Wilt's real name . . . He spent the night in the hoose-gow . . . Eventually, his mother forwarded the necessary money by special delivery mail . . . It arrived the next day and Wilt and his companions went on their way.

• • •

The next time you see a 7-foot guy drive up to the curb in a $24,000 Bentley, and open the door with a hand that displays a 3-karat diamond, mention Bowling Green, Va., to him . . . he'll double down to your size in laughter.

GARDENA TIE — Bill Wright, former U.S. Public Links champion, tied for second in the Greater Gardena (Calif.) Open golf tournament last weekend. Wright's 288 put him two strokes off winner Chuck Green and in 3-way deadlock with Bud Holscher and Francisco Lopez. Effort netted lone colored player $664 in prize money.

'Sifford surge' is latest version of golf charge

HARTFORD, Conn. — Stealing a page from the book of Arnold Palmer, Charley Sifford came from well off the pace to capture the $100,000 Greater Hartford Open golf tournament, Sunday.

Emulating the famed "Arnie charge" and the brilliant finishing touch of Jack Nicklaus, Sifford abandoned his usually steady game and rallied from five strokes back to win his first major tourney in 14 years on the PGA tour.

Sifford, 44, had five birdies and a chip-in eagle for a seven-under-par 64 and a 72-hole total of 272, 12 under par. It was only the second tour victory ever by a colored player. Pete Brown was winner of the Waco Open in 1964.

• • •

IN SECOND place was young Steve Oppermann of San Francisco, whose strong final round nearly sent the tournament into a sudden-death playoff. But Oppermann, playing several threesomes behind Sifford, ran into trouble on the tricky par-three 17th hole and took a bogey to fall a stroke back. He finished with a 67 for a 273 total.

First prize was $20,000 and second prize $12,000 in the 16th renewal of the tourney, played over the 6,868-yard Wethersfield Country Club.

A TOURING professional since 1954 but never a big winner, Sifford said of his long career "I was discouraged a lot of times but my wife Rose wouldn't let me quit."

He had won $25,290 this year before entering the 16th annual Hartford event, formerly known as the Insurance City Open.

Of his triumph Sunday he said, "Hard work paid off."

• • •

THERE WAS a four-way tie for third at 274 among veterans Doug Ford, Ray Floyd, Dan Sikes and Gary Player. The 45-year-old Ford, winner of 19 tour titles and more than $360,000, was the last player on the course with a chance to tie Sifford.

He had a chance through the 17th, but failed to get the consecutive birdies he needed and finished with a 70.

• • •

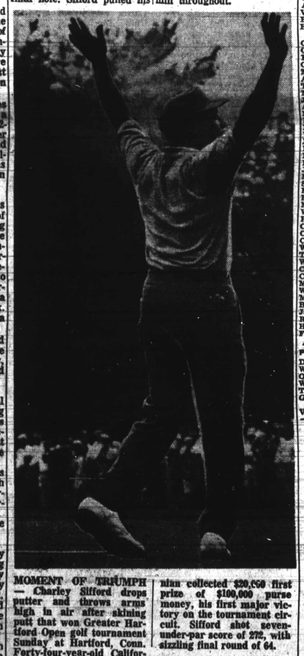
THE CIGAR-SMOKING Sifford, who lives in Los Angeles, got his eagle on the 497-yard par-five 14th hole.

He went for the green with his second shot but missed and ended in heavy grass beyond a bunker. He then chipped in from 40 yards out to tie for the lead for the first time.

• • •

IT APPEARED that Sifford would lose his lead to the 25-year-old Oppermann on the final hole. Sifford pulled his second shot on the 427-yard par-four hole into a trap to the left of the green.

But he put his sand shot four feet from the hole and sank his putt to the roars of the crowd which had cheered him throughout.



MOMENT OF TRIUMPH — Charley Sifford drops putter after throws arms high in air after sinking putt that won Greater Hartford Open golf tournament Sunday at Hartford, Conn. Forty-four-year-old Californian collected $20,000 first prize of $100,000 purse money, his first major victory on the tournament circuit. Sifford shot seven-under-par score of 272, with sizzling final round of 64.

Why bring it up?

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI) — My, how time flies and things change.

Would you believe it was only last spring, barely six months ago that:

A brand new sign over the Baltimore Orioles' dressing room at their Miami, Fla., training quarters advised everybody: "Through these portals pass the best baseball players in the world."

The best what in the where?

Cassius Clay was ordered to report for induction, and Zora Folley, his next opponent, felt so good about the upcoming fight that he said, "He may go into the army as the ex-champion."

Well, Zora, you batted .500, anyway.

Pittsburgh manager Harry Walker commented, "We came within two days of winning the pennant last year, and with what we added, I'd have to say we've made up at least that much."

At least.

Homero Blancas put a couple of hot golf rounds together and some people immediately went around saying, look out for that boy from Houston, this is really going to be his year.

Some people immediately go around saying things.

Mayo Smith, starting out with Detroit, sized up the American League race perfectly.

"I figure the Orioles are the club to beat. After all, they took the Dodgers in four straight and I think that momentum will carry over."

That's okay, Mayo. I picked the Tigers myself, and the Pirates over in the other league.

American league president Joe Cronin forecast a tighter race than usual in his circuit.

Aw, g'wan, Joe. You're always saying that.

Coach Allie Sherman admitted he'd be interested in getting Fran Tarkenton for his New York Giants, but he pointed out you don't get players like that for nothing.

That's right, Allie, money will do it everytime. Or three draft choices plus a player.

Red Schoendienst explained his modest plans for the Cardinals.

"We're not talking about winning any pennant here in camp," he said. "We just wanna move up, that's all."

Red's a shrewdie. He never did say how far.

Elston Howard gave me his personal guarantee he'd hit close to .300 and the Yankees would finish much nearer the top than the bottom. He said for me to wait and see.

I'm still watching and waiting, but that's okay, I'm in no hurry.

Ashe upset at Nassau net

GLEN COVE, N.Y. (UPI) — Lt. Arthur Ashe, America's top-ranking amateur tennis player, was upset in the quarter-finals of the Nassau Bowl Tournament of Champions Friday, by Chuck McKinley of Port Washington, N.Y., 6-4, 6-3.

McKinley, ranked 10th nationally and a former Davis Cup player and Wimbledon champion, had full control of the situation after Ashe broke service early and took a 3-1 first set lead.

• • •

ASHE, an Army lieutenant, drew a first-round bye because he couldn't arrive until Friday, and then, seeded second, he went out and broke McKinley's service and took a 3-1 lead.

McKinley won seven straight points, holding at love with sharp service and putting Ashe at 0-40 on his service returns. Ashe rallied to 30-40 but doublefaulted to lose service and McKinley jumped on the chance, finally breaking Ashe in the 10th game to win the set.

McKinley broke Ashe again in the sixth game of the second set and won his last two services at love.

Halas critic finally accepts Bears terms

CHICAGO — Flanker back and kickoff return specialist Rick Gordon, a frequent critic of Chicago Bears coach George Halas, has signed a contract for his third professional season with the Bears.

Gordon, 23, played out his contract option during the 966 season and failed to sign a new contract after complaining publicly that Bear quarterbacks did not "throw" to him enough. The Bears reportedly tried without success to swing a trade involving the former Michigan State University speedster.

Coach Bill Russell Alcorn lecturer

LORMAN, Miss. — (NPI) — Bill Russell, defensive genius and player-coach of the ex-champion Boston Celtics pro basketball team, last week, was among the lecturers at Alcorn A and M college's coaching clinic.

Russell lectured and demonstrated some of the basic basketball patterns currently in use. He also gave high school coaches some guidelines to better coaching.

Purpose of the clinic was to provide high school coaches with information on the newest trends in football and basketball.

Sifford chides caddy after win

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Charley Sifford, who won the Greater Hartford Open Sunday, said his caddy is the "worst in the world." But this drew only a broad smile from his baggtoter.

"He's kidding when he says that. We get along very well," said Vic Marshiello, 19, of Rocky Hill, Conn., who has been caddying for nine years at the Wethersfield Country Club where he shoots in the 80's.

"I put Charley down as one of my choices four years ago and I've caddied for him in this tournament ever since," said Vic, who chuckled, "I may be the worst caddy in the world but he takes my advice."

Frank pulls away in AL, Clemente surges to NL top

Weekend batting statistics show ten players back in the driver's seat in each of the major league batting races.

Frank Robinson, who had sufficient cushion to sustain him through 28 days of idleness, has commenced to open up the gap between him and his nearest competitors in the American League, and Roberto Clemente has apparently launched the late-season surge that is characteristic of his National League title quest.

ROBINSON MAY have double vision but he's all alone in the American League batting race.

The star Baltimore Orioles rightfielder, who won the triple crown last year, claims he can only see the ball as a blur as the result of an inury he suffered earlier this season when he collided with Chicago's Al Weis.

But Robinson has a comfortable lead in the batting race with a .332 mark while Carl Yastrzemski of Boston, is second at .314 and Detroit's Al Kaline is third at .309. The only other .300 hitter in the American League is Cleveland's Tony Horton, who's hitting .301.

IN THE meantime, with just six weeks left to the baseball season, the race for the NL batting crown is still wide open.

Clemente leads with a .344 mark but Rusty Staub of Houston, is just two points back at .342.

Two other players are close behind, too, with Orlando Cepeda and Curt Flood, of St. Louis, hitting at .339 and .331.

Three players are in the .320s and are the longshot category. Tony Gonzalez of Philadelphia is at .327, with Pete Rose of Cincinnati at .323, and Manny Mota of Pittsburgh also at .323.

THE KING!

AND THEN TEARS — The shout of victory turned to tears of joy for Charley Sifford as he received $20,000 first prize check and trophy emblematic of his conquest of tough field of veteran pros in Greater Hartford golf tournament.

Snap the crown off a bottle of Bud.. You'll know why it's King... and the biggest-selling beer in America!
