Angelos taking to 'low road'—Tommy

Thomas D'Alesandro, the front-running candidate for the Democratic nomination for mayor, took off his kid gloves late Monday and unleashed a blistering attack on his key opponent, Peter G. Angelos.

Sticking to his flat refusal to mention Mr. Angelos's name, the president of City Council, accused former Third District councilman of "mud-slinging, name-calling, and distorting facts."

In the strongest personal indictment of Mr. Angelos he has issued to date, Mr. D'Alesandro accused him of "taking the low road" and conducting a campaign of "character assassination."

Complete text of the D'Alesandro attack on his unnamed opponent follows:

"The City of Baltimore deserves a campaign based upon issues and facts and not name - calling mud - slinging and the distortion of facts.

"I have conducted my campaign in this manner — upon my record and upon my platform of plans and programs for Baltimore's future.

"I am totally committed to making city government responsive to the needs of all our neighborhoods and all of our people. I am totally committed to bringing people from all walks of life into City government.

"Unfortunately for the people of Baltimore, one of my opponents has attempted to take the low road. His campaign has been a campaign of character assassination.

"He has attempted to hoodwink the community into believing he is something he is not.

"The voters of Baltimore should ask themselves: 'What has this candidate been doing during the past years while I have been on the front lines sponsoring and supporting every major piece of civil rights and social reform legislation in Baltimore City?

"The record shows that the answer is nothing.

"I am proud of my record in public life. On civil rights, that record speaks for itself.

"In 1963, I sponsored and led a successful fight to enact the most comprehensive civil rights bill to ever come be-

Parks questions 'stop-gap' actions

"It is high time for us to stop waiting until we are caught in the grips of crisis before we attack conditions which lead to trouble."

Fourth District Councilman Henry G. Parks, a candidate for re-election, offered this advice Monday while questioning the value of what he called "stop-gap measures, crash job programs, and highly publicized hedge-hopping to ghetto trouble spots."

While not mentioning the recent inner city tours by Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin, the councilman made obvious reference to these and other "anti-riot" activities which have drawn constant public notice over the summer.

• • •

"THE NEED for this kind of action —of questionable value on a long-range basis— grows out of the city's failure to take early corrective measures," Mr. Parks declared.

"The next city administration," he predicted, "will need to have a mayor, City Council, and other public officials who are not only aware of the needs, but who are knowledgeable and determined enough to do something about them before 'riot scares'."

Heading a Fourth District slate of candidates including Del. Victorine Q. Adams and Community Relations Commissioner Mrs. Emma Michaels, Mr. Parks called for the election of experienced city officials who "have know-how in running a big city in these complicated times.

"This is not time to saddle voters with city officials who have nothing more than promises to offer in return for their election," he told the AFRO.

Specifically Mr. Parks declared there is no comparison in terms of experience and know-how between members of his team and other candidates in the Fourth District.

"We can, with justification, point to achievement in behalf of our constituents. What do the others have to offer?" he asked.

"The next four years will be critical ones for Baltimore," he declared, adding, "We can afford nothing less than competent, courageous, and determined people in office.

"This not only holds true for the districts," Mr. Parks, who was the first councilman to warn of the city's pending financial crisis, said. "It also applies to the 'top of the ticket' candidates."

• • •

THE COUNCILMAN-businessman and his slatemates are supporting the mayoralty ticket headed by City Council President Thomas D'Alesandro and including Councilman William D. Schaefer and Comptroller Hyman A. Pressman.

"We must have a city government which acts, instead of reacting, to prevent crises," he repeated.

Labor Dept. finds wages due workers

Unpaid wages of $1,414,754 were found due to 3,238 workers in Maryland and the District of Columbia during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1967, according to the U.S. Department of Labor.

Investigations revealed 200 cases where minors were illegally employed.

The Divisions administer Federal laws relating to the minimum wage, overtime pay, child labor and equal pay standards.

The information was released by Thomas J. Finucane, district director, who said the investigations were conducted by the Baltimore and College Park field offices, under the supervision of Hilard Curland and Morris Terkeltaub.

Regional Director William Hargadine Jr., said that, for the entire region, unpaid wages of more than five million dollars were found and over 800 minors were discovered as having been employed in violation of the Federal regulations during the 12-month period.

Most of the underpayments were due to failure of employers to comply with the Fair Labor Standards Act. There were also violations of the McNamara-O'Hara Service Contracts Act, the Equal Pay Act and the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act.

The region consists of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia.

Court hears sad saga of fickleness of love

Love went its usual fickle route in Municipal Criminal Court Monday morning. Two lovers re-united; another couple bitterly parted company. Both males were in court on assault charges.

Linwood Taft, 28, and his estranged girl friend, Miss Charlotte Madden, stood before Judge Henry Stichel's bench and recounted the sad saga of their love.

Miss Madden claimed that on May 5, Mr. Taft "hit me in my eye," and her brother, not summoned to appear in court, showed up as a surprise complainant charging that Mr. Taft, in addition, had recently poured sugar into the gas tank of his car.

Ignoring the brother's grievance, Judge Stichel asked the couple if they lived together.

"Yes," Mr. Taft answered in the same breath that Miss Madden declared, "No!"

APPARENTLY indignant over her response, Mr. Taft shot back, "I've been living there for two years!"

"Ain't no two year!" the girlfriend retorted.

At the Judge's insistence, they finally agreed on "one or two nights a week."

"Has Mr. Taft stayed there since May 5?", Judge Stichel asked the complainant.

"Yes,' I'm scared not to let him stay," she explained.

"If I don't come," Mr. Taft

Added free protection for Expo '67 motorists

Maryland motorists planning to drive to Montreal for Expo '67 are urged to take advantage of additional free motor vehicle liability protection, which is available to policyholders who carry the minimum limits of $15,000/30,000 for bodily injury and $5,000 property damage as required by the Maryland Financial Responsibility Law.

Insurance Commissioner Newton I. Steers Jr. states, "All of the Canadian Provinces require motorists to carry at least $35,000 for both bodily injury and property damage.

"Most insurance companies writing automobile liability in Maryland have agreed to issue non - resident interprovince motor vehicle liability insurance cards, when requested by their policyholders.

"I am advised that this will serve as proof of adequate insurance coverage in Canada, and that there will be no charge for this additional protection if the motorists's stay in Canada does not exceed 60 days.

"Should a motorist fail to meet the Canadian minimum following an accident, he might be suspended from driving in Canada, his auto might be seized or other legal action might be taken against him.

"I strongly urge Maryland auto drivers who are planning a visit to Expo '67 to contact their insurance agent, broker or company and secure the card I have mentioned."

NAPE charges Postal Services employment bias

Postal workers, meeting in Washington Thursday, issued a sweeping resolution charging the U.S. postal service with racial bias.

In a statement sent to President Johnson the National Alliance of Postal and Federal Employees contended that since its start the postal service has stood as a "symbol of white supremacy from which qualified colored persons have been barred."

The group charged that "past methods of promotion and job denial were based on the rash judgement that 'No qualified non-whites were available.'"

The Inspection Service of the postal system also came under attack. The Alliance maintained that colored persons have been "systematically rejected" from this area on the assumption that they all failed to measure up to 'some mystical standards established by those in charge."

Out of 1100 postal inspectors in America, they said, only seven are colored.

• • •

THE GROUP recommended that the President request the Civil Service Commission to conduct an in-depth investigation of hiring and promotiin on a national basis.

They also suggested that the Post Master General conduct an "intensive" search for workers qualified for inspection Service. In addition, they urged programs for postal employees in general service in order that they might qualify for advancement.

3 jailed in disorder at 'trouble spot'

Trouble flared Sunday night in the unit block E. North Ave. problem spot police say they have been watching for weeks.

Three youths were arrested after a bottle throwing spree shortly after the Crystal Ballroom's Sunday night dance crowd spilled out onto North Ave.

The incident occurred only a few feet away from Gino's Drive-in Restaurant at St. Paul St. and E. North Ave., the scene three weeks ago of what police termed a wild, rock-throwing teenage crowd.

Bits of glass crunched under pedestrians feet walking last night along E. North Ave. between St. Paul and Charles Sts.

ARRESTED WERE Anthony Fleet, 19, of the 2800 block Boarman Ave., who was charged with assault; Donald Green, 19, of the 2600 block E. Hoffman St., charged with disorderly conduct, and Sheldon Henson, 19, of the 1800 block Colvin St., charged with attempting to assault a police officer.

The Police Community Relations Division reported that it had been watching the area "for the last three weeks."

A special detail of the division has been posted there daily, the police said.

Julian wants assistance for city's young

"While some progress has been made recently in helping the youth of Baltimore, there is still a great need for more positive action.

"This was the opinion voiced Monday by Dr. Emerson R. Julian, Democratic candidates for the City Council from the Fourth District.

Asked what should be done to make further advances, in this direction, he said:

"We must face up to the naked truth and level with youth helping them to realize that we have come to these dark days in human relations by virtue of moral degeneration and breakdown in institutions that have undercut the security and unity of the family.

"Our families in the disadvantage areas need not only financial assistance but real carefully planned social guidance.

"This is very essential to reestablish in youth a sense of security, a sense of belonging, and to aid them in overcoming an inferiority complex."

The councilmanic candidate further suggested that religious leaders, schools, and industry should really combine their resources to set up area counselling centers for the youth.

"To develop a faith on the part of youth, the purposefulness of his effort must be pointed up to him," he asserted."

He said these three sources could implement this plan. "More provisions should be

Cleveland daily backs Carl Stokes for mayor

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The Cleveland Plain Dealer, in a surprise move, Sunday, editorially supported the candidacy of colored attorney Carl Stokes for mayor of the city.

Stokes faces incumbent Mayor Ralph Locher and former Lakewood Mayor Frank Celeste, in the Oct. 3 primary for the Democratic nomination. It had been speculated earlier, the newspaper would back Celeste.

In a front page editorial, the Plain Dealer called Stokes "personable and young."

"He has the courage to try new solutions to the urban problems that are plaguing Cleveland and other cities — decay of central areas, the exodus to the suburbs, the decline of downtown, strangulation by traffic, the rioting of the ghetto poor, the poisons of air and water pollution.

"His experience as a State legislator and as an assistant police prosecutor, have provided him with an excellent background for city hall leadership . . ."

Candidates of color bidding for high posts

By MAX JOHNSON
AFRO Political Analyst

Baltimore voters face Thursday a municipal primary of historical significance, despite its surface-wise mildness and lack of blood-and-guts thunder.

Importance of this primary is that it could vastly further progressive, just and equitable government of this city.

Never before in the city's history has there been such opportunity for possible expansion of racial representation in city government.

Democrats and Republicans will nominate Thursday their party's candidates for mayor, president of the City Council and 18 Council seats in the city's six councilmanic districts.

• • •

FOR THE first time, two colored candidates, one of whom is on a major ticket, are trying for the Democratic City Council presidency nomination against a strong white contender.

They are the 4th District's State Sen. Clarence M. Mitchell 3rd, on the Annapolis-Valle slate, and William E. Roberts, a public relations

Of the two, Sen. Mitchell is a far front runner and will lose those votes taken by Mr. Roberts.

Colored Democrats registered in this city as of July 20 numbered 127,000, or 33.2 percent of the party's total.

There are 225,379 white Democrats on the books.

Sen. Mitchell and Mr. Roberts are bucking veteran Councilman William D. Schaefer, a member of the Jerry Pressman-Pressman ticket.

• • •

ON THE Democratic City Council side of the picture, expectations are that for the first time the 2nd District will nominate one, possibly two, colored candidates.

Top runners in that area are Robert L. Douglass and Floyd E. Rogers, both of whom are on major separate tickets in that district.

The 2nd District, under a realignment of boundaries, now has a colored Democratic majority of 54.3 percent, or 27,038 colored and 22,734 white party members registered.

Messrs. Douglass and Rogers, however, face the stumbling block of a large field of colored candidates who have stubbornly remained in the race, though chances of winning nominations are all too apparently slight.

There are ten colored candidates in a field of 25 in this district's Democratic Council race.

• • •

THE 4TH DISTRICT poses a different picture, for all but one of the Democratic Council candidates are colored.

Here there is a matter of a factional fight, with several independent candidates doggedly in the running.

The 4th District's Democratic Organization is fielding a ticket that includes Mrs. Emma M. Michael, Mrs. Victorine Q. Adams, a House of Delegates member, and Councilman Henry G. Parks Jr.

Mrs. Michael, through making an initial bid for public elective office, is not a stranger to city government. She is a veteran member of the Community Relations Commission.

Councilman Walter T. Dixon Sr. heads an opposing ticket of Robert C. Marshall, a Council clerk, and James W. McAllister, attorney.

The Dixon slate has the backing of the Pollack faction's Trenton Democratic Club.

Running under the banner of Sen. Mitchell's People's Democratic Action Organization is Dr. Emerson R. Julian.

The other four colored can-

Where We Stand

(AN EDITORIAL)

Unity, justice, equality, cooperation, and competence are commodities Baltimore will need in abundance during the next four years.

The only way we can be sure of getting them is for both parties to nominate in Thursday's primary election candidates best equipped to set and maintain a progressive course for city government once the November general election is over.

With this in mind the AFRO recommends that in the Thursday election Democrats vote for Thomas D'Alesandro 3rd and Republicans nominate Samuel A. Culotta.

For president of City Council the Democrats are urged to vote for Sen. Clarence M. Mitchell 3rd and Republicans should vote for Horace H. Ashby Jr.

For comptroller the AFRO recommends Hyman A. Pressman to Democrats and Melvin A. Callaman to Republicans.

• • •

THE STRONGEST plus factor giving Mr. D'Alesandro favor over his chief rival, Peter G. Angelos, is experience. Since entering public office as a neophyte and president of the Board of Supervisors of Elections, the current president of City Council has matured.

As leader of the Council — which on too many occasions has been less than a shattering success — Mr. D'Alesandro has either led or strongly supported the passage of all social and fiscal reform legislation.

As an inexperienced and youthful president of the Elections Board, he demonstrated a keen sensitivity to the needs of the total community.

Mr. D'Alesandro inaugurated mobile voter registrations. That precedent is responsible not only for a major portion of the present 143,000-plus colored voters, but increased the citywide voting rolls by taking the office to the voters.

On other and often controversial issues as the Anti-Poverty Program, the Bard Redistricting Plan, Open Housing legislation, Self-Help program, Rent Subsidy, equal job opportunities, and Minimum Wage

VC terrorists skip Soulsville

By MIKE DAVIS
AFRO Correspondent

SAIGON — Are colored soldiers on the streets of Saigon exempt from Viet Cong terroist attacks and sniper fire?

An Army enlisted man from Alexandria, Va., thinks so.

Sp/4 Russell Jordan told the AFRO this week that few colored servicemen have been the targets of VC terrorism.

The question has particular relevance this week as South Vietnam prepared to go to the polls Sept. 3 to elect a national government.

Increased terrorism in the Saigon area has resulted in a military directive warning Americans in the South Vietnamese capital to be "extremely alert" while on the streets.

A 7:30 p.m. curfew was expected. Last week Viet Cong terrorism directed at Americans increased threefold over incidents of the previous week and though two major attempts to blow up major U.S. installations including the press headquarters here have been thwarted, an all-out attempt to disrupt the elections is

Police hold husband for questioning

By BETTYE MOSS

The Labor Day holiday quiet of a swank Ashburton area block was disrupted shortly after noon yesterday when an ambulance responded to a call to 3600 block Copley Rd.

Shortly afterwards, Mrs. Sue Miles and her son, George Jr., 16, were admitted to Sinai Hospital with gunshot wounds.

Northwestern District Patrolmen Charles Brown and Dominic Mateo reported when they reached the house in response to a call to "investigate a shooting," they found Mrs. Miles and her son at the home of a neighbor.

• • •

Mrs. Miles sustained a gunshot wound of the right arm and the son was struck in the abdomen, the policemen said.

Both were taken to Sinai by municipal ambulance.

Young Miles underwent surgery shortly after he was admitted.

A Sinai spokesman told the AFRO today (Tuesday) that both mother and son are in "satisfactory condition."

The officers quoted Mrs. Miles as saying they were shot during an argument over "a domestic issue."

Her husband, George Miles Sr., 46, who listed his occupation as a Housing Authority manager, was arrested at the Conely St., home (3604).

He was being held for in-

Boyfriend charged in death of nurse

"We've got it wrapped up," Det. Capt. Anton Glover, head of the Murder Squad, was announcing the arrest of a 24-year-old man in the death of Mrs. Edna Pierce Carter.

George Melvin Brown, address unlisted, has been charged with murder and is being held without bail pending action of the grand jury.

Identified as a boyfriend of the Crownsville State Hospital psychiatric aide, Brown is accused of the gangland-like murder of Mrs. Carter, whose bloated body was fished from the Chesapeake Bay five days after she was reported missing.

MEANTIME, funeral services for the pert nurse, daughter of a well-known West Baltimore family have been set for 11:30 a.m. Wednesday at the Arlington S. Phillips Funeral Home, 1727 N. Monroe St.

Burial will follow in the Baltimore National Cemetery.

The body of the nurse was lifted out of the Bay by the Coast Guard, and had an 18-pound cement block dangling from the right leg.

An autopsy by the Medical Examiner showed that death was due to two bullet wounds of the head.

The nurse's sports model car was found, without a license tag and splattered with blood, in Delaware.

Go, Go Girl is dead; foul play hinted

A pretty Go, Go dancer, Mrs. Vivian Sturdivant, 23, 3600 block Bonner Rd., was found dead Monday in an apartment in the 3400 block Walbrook Ave.

Northwestern District police reported that the cause of death is pending the completion of an autopsy by the Medical Examiner.

They reported that evidence indicates that she may have been a victim of an overdose of dope.

The mother of three children, who danced at a downtown nightclub, was found by police around 10:30 a.m. She was in bed at the apartment and unconscious, police said.

An ambulance was summoned, but Fireman John Willingham of the ambulance crew pronounced her dead, according to police.

Patrolmen John Kennedy and Joseph Mailler said they were called by a tenant in whose name the apartment is rented.

They quoted him as saying

Eartha Kitt collapses during 'Peg' show

WASHINGTON

Eartha Kitt, the nightclub entertainer and singing star, fainted Friday evening while performing in "Peg", a pre-Broadway musical, at Shady Grove.

The Saturday matinee performance was cancelled.

She has been hospitalized and is under the care of orthopedic surgeons.

"She fainted just as she finished a number," said Robert Barry, the assistant manager of the theatre. "It was about 14 minutes before intermission."

• • •

BARRY SAID a back condition was the cause of Miss Kitt's collapse. "She's had a back condition for some time. It finally just gave way in her."

Luane Metivier, who has worked as an understudy under Miss Kitt, was scheduled to replace the nationally-famous singer, who first gained fame in Europe.

• • •

CHARLES FARROW, who reviewed the musical said in the AFRO (Sept, 2) that Miss Kitt had been on the "gruelling schedule" as she prepared for her "opening in the Big City".

He said the sensually-voiced singer had been "burning up the roads between here and New York City".

Miss Kitt had performed for seven weeks in the 1929 period play about a rough individualist who is changed into a lady of quality.

• • •

BARRY SAID a physician in the audience gave medical treatment to Miss Kitt until the theater physician arrived.

"She fainted at the top of the aisle in the backstage area," said Barry. "Her wardrobe mistress and the stage manager were with her at the time."

A physician was with Miss Kitt as she was rushed by ambulance to the hospital.

Barry said that her condition had improved. "She is resting comfortably."
