—150 walkout

rium.

Before the ceremony, Dr. Nathan Hare, dismissed from the University earlier this year, informed newsmen that in a little while "everyone be coming out that door (of the auditorium)."

A STATEMENT of the reasons for the walkout was circulated during a press conference outside the auditorium immediately after it occurred.

It said, "Students and faculty members walked out of the formal opening exercises today to protest 100 years of obscurantism. Neither students nor faculty have rights at Howard University.

"All rights and power belong to a small corps of administrators who have used their absolute authority to expel both students and faculty who spoke out against the dictatorship.

"Students and faculty members walked out to protest broken commitments which have made a mockery of student government. Dr. Nabrit promised before a panel of students last year that no punitive action would be taken against politically active students or teachers during the summer months.

"DR. NABRIT also formed an 18-member student-faculty committee to devise a code of conduct and judiciary system which was promptly discarded and replaced with a document which institutionalizes the present dictatorship.

"Students and faculty members walked out to protest the police state which had developed at Howard and which police in and out of uniform oversee all university functions and in which administrators compiled lists, even as they mouth promises of true democracy for students.

"Students and faculty members walked out to serve notice to the University this year the oppressive system which has spawned the past year's activism will no longer be tolerated."

HARE CALLED on the students to stay away from classes. "Everytime a student or faculty member enters the classroom, they brand themselves as Uncle Toms," he said.

Dr. Keith Lowe, dismissed English professor, called the University faculty a bunch of cowards for not demanding contracts for their tenure.

"I exact all faculty and students to rally round Dr. Hare," read his book (The Black Anglo-Saxons) and understand what black power is all about," he said.

Participating in the walkout were the president of the student assembly, Ewart Brown; the president of the Liberal Arts Student Council, Miss Barbara Penn; and the editor of the University newspaper, "The Hilltop," Miss Adrienne Manns.

WHEN ASKED his reason for getting involved in students' problems, Hare replied: "There is an erroneous notion that students and faculty rights are separated. It is a common problem. If I am not free to teach the truth, the students are not free to learn."

Lowe pointed out that it was precisely because of that attitude that the faculty came to the defense of students who were seeking their right of expression.

The outcome was the dismissal of the students and teachers involved.

BY THIS TIME the ceremony had ended and an argument developed between the protestors and two members of the faculty of the College of Medicine.

Dr. Edward Hawthorne interrupted the proceedings in an attempt to appeal to the students, "All we say," he pleaded, "is that we must sit down and discuss our problems. We cannot solve them in the street."

Lowe answered, "It is because of you docile, tenured faculty that we are out here on the public sidewalk. You have collaborated with a system that stifles freedom of expression."

Some in the crowd shouted, "Where were you last semester?" Dr. Harold Whitted was rebuffed with personal comments by Hare, and left the gathering after making several unsuccessful attempts to be heard.

LOWE CONTINUED, as the size of the crowd began to increase, "Don't let the movement slip back. Go forward and break the barrier of fear.

"I've seen you move here on Howard's campus. I have seen you acting as full human beings. Break out of the circle of apathy, and keep in mind your own rules to prepare yourselves, day and night, for liberation."

Here added, "At Catholic University, when the instructor was dismissed, the students got him back in, and promoted."

STUDENTS WHO were asked their reasons for walking out of the ceremony seemed to agree that "it was the thing to do."

In his address, Dr. Nabrit spoke about the new militancy, its origin, and its disillusionment with the civil rights efforts.

He acknowledged efforts being made by the government, but added that in spite of it all, "this is indeed a gloomy picture. It is not entirely unexpected to see this new militancy arise." The president's visible reaction to the walkout was no more than a brief pause when the exodus began.

session Thursday, voted its "moral support" of Milwaukee's open housing demonstrations led by Roman Catholic Priest James E. Groppi.

It called upon churches to send demonstrators to join the 17-day protest, marred by violence.

The General Board, which makes policy decisions in between National Council conventions, held every three years, represents 40-million Americans.

As the delegates heard proposals to make the NCC more militant in civil rights programs, a study group said in a report on the NCC membership that the body is becoming too advanced in its thinking to be representative of some church groups.

William A. Norgran, an Episcopalian, said:

MANY FUNDAMENTALIST churches in the nation have turned their back on the Council because of its civil rights programs. A resolution passed by the General Board asked for "clarification of the issues" that have caused the split.

This was regarded as a peace feeler in hopes of improving relations with these conservative groups.

"They're not even talking to us now," said the Rev. Copallin from New York City who sponsored the resolution.

It asked the National Faith and Order Colloquium, composed of Roman Catholic, Protestants and Orthodox churches to be the go-between in the peace effort.

It added that the National Council of Churches is "acknowledging the lack of significant communications and dialogue between the groups.

The resolution urging an immediate end to the bombing of North Vietnam suggested that warring factions submit the matter to the United Nations for settlement

NEARBY, A new high-rise apartment is being built. Donna is the sixth person to die on the site. Last Jan. 26, five demolition workers lost their lives when a century old brick building collapsed on them.

Donna's wet body was pulled out from the water by Raulie Weller, 25, of 432 E. 149th St.

An experienced underwater swimmer, Raulie was passing by when he saw the girl jump to her death.

AFRO'S EFFORTS to reach the grief-stricken family were unsuccessful.

Detectives say a hot argument was going on between Donna and her parents minutes before the plunge. The dispute was over Donna's unidentified boyfriend.

Lockman's attorney, Terrance Hallinan, said he would prepare a writ of habeas corpus. This would require Hallinan to show why his client should not go to Vietnam.

Hallinan said he had advised Lockman not to board the plane under any circumstance and to resist forcibly if necessary. The arrest, however, was made without incident.

A court hearing on the request for a contempt citation against the United Federation of Teachers was adjourned until Wednesday because of the weariness of the union's principal officials.

ANGRY PARENTS besieged Board of Education headquarters in Brooklyn, shouting obscenities at policemen who refused to let them enter the anteroom to Donovan's office.

Seven women and five men, who said they were members of the Brooklyn chapter of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), were arrested as trespassers when they broke through police lines and attempted a sit-in in the anteroom.

Two persons were slightly injured during the fracas. A policeman was hit on the head with a metal ashtray and a television cameraman was pummeled by a woman demonstrator.

For the first time since the strike began a week ago, the number of students who went to school Monday was higher than on the previous school day, but the number of teachers and volunteers on hand to care for them declined.

The Board of Education has kept the schools open each day so far, but there has been little or no effective classroom instruction.

THE BOARD reported that 340,192 of the system's 1.1 million students reported for class Monday compared to 336,439 Friday. Nearly 600,000 children were on hand last Monday, but the number declined daily last week.

There were 12,302 non-striking teachers present Monday, down from 12,519 Friday. The number of volunteers declined from 4,409 Friday to 3,528 Monday.

When the strike talks adjourned early Monday, UFT president Albert Shanker said wearily, "we're bargaining," when he was asked about progress.

"I'm neither optimistic nor pessimistic . . . I'm bushed," he added.

Shanker and other union officials were present in state Supreme Court when hearings on the contempt citation resumed a few hours later, but UFT attorney Ernest Fleischmann asked for an adjournment because of their weariness.

The union is seeking a $7,500 - to - $15,000 salary scale, smaller classes, more control over unruly pupils and expanded programs to aid "disadvantaged" students.

The city has offered a $6,000-to-$11,000 scale. It refuses to write policy matters into a contract.

the low number of non-whites in the Guard and called for better training.

He conceded that the proportion of non-whites, placed at 1.5 per cent, is low, but termed the White House panel's criticism as "Gratuitous slap in the face."

"THE NATIONAL GUARD is making an effort to attract non-whites into its ranks and any suggestion to the contrary does us an injustice," he said.

"He could have provided a mass of material to show how unproductive our recruiting efforts have been among non-whites.

"We could have told them of one state, for example, which waged a determined drive for colored enlistments working closely with colored organizations and schools.

"After a lengthy period of intensive effort, they were able to sign up less than 50 qualified persons, Cantwell said.

He said the Guard also has found that only a low percentage of non-whites can pass the entrance test.

"The long-range answer, obviously, is to elevate the physical and mental capabilities of all Americans, but that is not a matter on which the National Guard can act," he said.

CANTWELL said the Presidential panel's recommendations to date have been "hastily gathered, incomplete, and inconclusive — a bit of panic.

"The Presidential panel cast a slur at thousands of competent, dedicated National Guard officers, and without good cause," he said.

"Our training is good, our officer corps is sound, and the panel's recommendations serve no purpose but to give the National Guard another gratuitous slap in the face."

Cantwell also contended that the White House Commission exceeded its authority in criticizing the Guard, pointing out that it was set up to investigate the causes of riots.

"The National Guard is a last resort agency in the suppression of riots but has no relation I can discover with the causes," he said.

the door was unlocked.

Susan was mum when asked by McNeill's lawyers why she failed to protest during the 45-minute ordeal when her bruises supposedly were being "fondled."

SPECTATORS at the hearing laughed at the evidence presented by the girl, her parents and lawyers. Susan and company suffered a double blow when they lost the case.

McNeill held firm on his "innocence" and won. He will resume his teaching duties which did not begin until six years. He was reinstated Friday by the Board of Education with full pay, retroactive to his suspension July 25.

FOLLOWING THE acquittal Friday, McNeill said: "I plan to continue to teach in this school district and to live in this community and to give them both my best. I was sustained by the Baldwin climate, a healthy one, and the good will of the individuals in this community. I am grateful it's over."

A science teacher colleague of McNeill summed the kind of girl Susan is as follows:

"Susan is a very snippy individual. She is the type of student I knew in my own mind to stay away from," said Robert La-Mar.

As far as Mr. McNeill's popularity goes, he is still on top. That's what most of his students feel today. They say, "If there were a popularity contest here, Mr. McNeill would win hands down."

He said he will go on with the $50,000 defamation suit against Susan and her mother. The suit was filed in August.

killer-rapist.

The savage crimes occurred Aug. 30, but police he and the victim kept a didn't learn of them until two days later when the girlfriend unfolded the horrible story of how the assailant shot her boyfriend in the motel room and then repeatedly raped her in a building behind the motel.

Following information provided by the girl, police unearthed the body of John D. Hodges of Gloucester in a three-foot grave about 500 yards from the LaGon Motel, where the girl told police lovers' tryst before they were both attacked.

Police then arrested Mark A. Pierce Jr., the 200-pound son of the motel owner, Mrs. Ann C. Pierce, and charged him with murder and rape.

The youth was arrested at one of the businesses established by his late, wealthy father whose real estate, contracting and motel operations ranked him as one of Nansemond County's major businessmen.

When the girl recounted the story of the savage attack to police, she said she was too terrified at first to talk about it but decided to tell all on the advice of her mother.

The girl said she and Hodges, a 1967 graduate of Norfolk State College, drove to the motel in his car on the night of Aug. 29 after they had met in Williamsburg and earlier driven to Norfolk.

She said a muffled sound waked her the next morning about 4:30 o'clock. She saw an intruder in the room with a towel over his hand and her boyfriend lying dead. Police said he was shot in the temple with a .32 calibre pistol.

The intruder then stuffed Hodges' body into a car in front of the motel and took the girl to a building behind the motel where he bound her with rope, according to the girl's account.

The man then raped her five times, she said, and finally released her about 8 p.m. the following evening.

The girl said she then went to the home of a college classmate here and spent the night before catching a bus to her home in Bethel N.C., and telling her mother the gruesome story.

Police said the digging, filling and packing of her grave was done with a tractor-grave was done with a tractor equipped with a grading device.

They also leveled a charge of car theft against the murder-rape defendant, saying he took Hodges' car to Norfolk after the shooting, where it was found abandoned.

The attorney for the defendant indicated that he will seek a mental examination for his client, whose case is pending in Nansemond Juvenile Court.

third floor apartment when he heard the radio or television playing.

Upper seeing the body, which he said looked like "it was wrapped in burlap or something," he called police.

Officer Richard Thompson, of Western, pronounced the body dead at the scene at 3:10 p.m.

The residents of other apartments in the house could not add much information for police, other than the fact that they had not seen the young man for several days.

One man said he had often heard young men going up to the third floor apartment, but had not seen or heard this for several days.

Identification of the body was made the next day by a friend of the deceased and his father, George L. Moore, 42, of the 2400 block W. Lanvale St.

'Black power' seen as useless

CAIRO (UPI) — American black power advocate Stokely Carmichael told the board of secretaries of the Afro-Asian Peoples Solidarity Organization Sunday that black Americans "restored to violence only after the failure of their peaceful struggle to achieve equality and uphold their rights," informed sources said Monday.

Roy Wilkins, executive director of the NAACP believes the "black power" movement is not the road to progress for the colored people.

"The whole trend of the world is togetherness," Wilkins said in a copyright interview with U.S. News and World Report. "If the colored person thinks he can go it alone and create a separate black economy, he's going against the whole international trend of mankind, the evidence of history."

20 join faculty at Maryland State

Maryland State College began its 21st academic year with the opening of the Faculty Conference, Sept. 6. This three-day series of faculty conferences is an annual orientation period for new faculty and staff, presided over by president, J. T. Williams, who this year begins his 21st year as president of the Eastern Shore institution.

In his opening message to the new and returning faculty and staff, Dr. Williams emphasized the 1967-68 direction of the college, with particular importance given to methods to be used in implementing the pattern for the future, at the beginning of the ninth decade of the college.

New faculty and staff members are:

Barbara J. Bennett, M.A., doctoral candidate, Columbia University. History and Political Science. Since 1963, Miss Bennett has been employed as director of the ABC-TV Special Project in documentary film research.

Paul I. K. Chao, Ph.D., New York University; M.Sc., doctoral candidate, Cambridge University. Sociology and Anthropology. Dr. Chao's last teaching assignment was at Seton Hall (New Jersey) College.

Charles U. DeBerry, Ph. D., New York University. Dean of Students. Dr. DeBerry's last assignment before coming to Maryland State was at the Winston-Salem State College (North Carolina) where he was head of the Department of Education.

James W. Eliry, B.S., Maryland State College. Assistant, Office of Admissions and Registrar. Mr. Eliry is a graduate of the Class of 1967.

Darril Hudson, Ph.D., London School of Economics and Political Science, Economics. Dr. Hudson is a member of the staff of the University of Maryland in Heidelberg.

Cephas Donald Hughes, M.A., University of Maryland. Mathematics. Since 1966, Mr. Hughes has been acting chairman of the Department of Mathematics at the Wichita State University, Wichita, Kans.

Samuel N. Hutchins, B.S. Maryland State College. Data Processor.

Walter B. Jones, M.A., University of the Americas, English. Until 1965, Mr. Jones was an administrative officer and personnel specialist with the United States Navy in Morocco, Spain, England and Washington, D.C.

Prior to that assignment he was a personnel specialist for the Arabian American Oil Company in New York City and in Saudi Arabia. He taught English in Saudi Arabia.

Erica Leh, Ph.D., University of Montreal, German; superviser of Language Laboratory. Dr. Leh's teaching experience has been with the International Linguistic Institute of Montreal. She also taught 1963-64, and at McGill University, as instructor in Scientific Slavic during the period 1962-67. She also taught Hungarian at the Cambridge Language Center, Montreal.

Sylvester Jackson Jr., Major, USAF. Professor of Aerospace Studies. Major Jackson comes to Maryland State College following a tour of duty in Germany.

He and his family are residing on Duke Drive, Salisbury. He is a graduate of Tuskegee Institute, Ala., and has attended Air Academic Instructors Course (Air University); Squadron Officers School (Air University).

Helen Gray McKinsey, M.A., Purdue University. Home Economics Education. Mrs. McKinsey has taught in the public schools of Kentucky and Indiana. Her last teaching assignment was at the University of Montana.

Richard O. Mead, Ph.D., University of Wisconsin. Physics. Dr. Mead is a member of the Department of Physics and Astronomy at the University of Maryland. He has published widely in the field of physics.

Patricia A. Murphy, M.A., University of Wisconsin. Mathematics. Miss Murphy was a University of Wisconsin teaching assistant in 1964 and a substitute teacher in the Madison, Wisconsin public schools in 1966-67.

Leon E. Punsalan, B.S., United States Military Academy; M.S., Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Physics and Mechanic Arts. Colonel Punsalan recently retired from the United States Army after 32 years of service.

He has had teaching experience in the Philippine Islands, in the public schools of Virginia, and at the University of Virginia. He holds the Bronze Star; Military Merit Medal, U.S. Army Commendation, Certificate of Achievement from the Iranian Government, and other military honors.

Raymond A. Robillard, M.B.A., University of Massachusetts. Business Manager. Mr. Robillard has had 15 years of experience in accounting and managerial positions, among which are manager, Administration and Control, Radio Corporation of America (Cambridge, Ohio); supervisory accountant (Massachusetts); finance manager, the Martin Company (Middle River, Md.); director, Fiscal Division, AAI, Cockeysville, Maryland, accountant and comptroller.

A. Jeanette Smith, M. Ed., Indiana University. Head Dormitory Counselor for Women. Prior to coming to Maryland State College, Miss Smith was at the North Carolina College (Durham) for six years as Educational and Residence Counselor for Women.

She has had teaching experience in Norfolk, Va., and as a social case worker in Newport-News, Va.

George D. Stewart, M.S., Pennsylvania State University. Biology. Mr. Stewart's previous teaching post was at Essex Community College, Maryland. He has also taught at the Booth School (Rosemont, Penna.), and has worked as a research assistant for the Biochemical Research Foundation of Newark, Delaware and as a biologist at the Laderle Laboratories of Pearl River, N.Y. A Korean veteran, Mr. Stewart is a native of Quincy, Mass.

M. Catherine White, M.S. Agricultural and Technical College of North Carolina. Dormitory Counselor for Women. Mrs. White has had teaching experience in the schools of North Carolina as well as a career as guidance counselor in several schools.

Howard Emery Wright, Ph.D., Ohio State University. Dean of the College. Former president of Allen University, chairman of Department of Education and Psychology at Texas Southern University, director of Teacher-Training at Prairie View State College (Texas).

Chairman of Department of Psychology and Education of the North Carolina State College, Dean Wright recently (1965-67) concluded a tour of duty with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (Washington) as Chief of the Developing Institutions Branch in the Bureau of Higher Education.

George Walt, Ph.D., University of Michigan, English. Dr. Walt, on loan from the University of Maryland, has been on the faculty of the University since 1965.

Dr. Hudson, Mr. Hughes, Dr. Mead and Dr. Walt are visiting professors from the University of Maryland who come to Maryland State College under the provisions of a Title III Federal Grant.

They will spend at least one year teaching at Maryland State and assisting in developing and strengthening the departments of English, Mathematics, Physics and Political Science.

Under the terms of the same grant, Miss Bennett, Mr. Jones, Miss Murphy, and Mr. Punsalan have been designated National Teaching Fellows. Their tenure at the College is not limited to the current year.

MAJOR ACHIEVEMENT — Maj. Luther J. Atkinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorraine Atkinson, 232 Sellers Point Rd., Turner Station, is congratulated by Lt. Col. Ed. Hi youths assaulted matron, 35, then went for joyride in her car

Ronald LaVernon (Cut) Sheard, 18, 2800 block Pressman St., and Samuel Thomas Green, 17, 1500 block N. Poplar Grove St., were each given terms of 15 years for rape when they appeared in Criminal Court Friday before Judge Anselm Sodaro.

The two youths, former students at Edmondson High School, were found guilty of the crime at an earlier trial.

Records before the court show Green, an 11th grade pupil, admitted he and his pal criminally assaulted a 35-year-old matron on Jan. 5 at about 7:10 p.m.

Following the occurrence they took from her purse $7 and her keys to her red 1966 Mustang car and went for a joy ride, the young man said.

Both Green and Sheard also received 15 years concurrent sentences for robbery with deadly weapon charges.

Testimony revealed one of the youths held a gun on the victim and the other threatened her life with a police officer's night stick.

THE INCIDENT occurred in an alley in the rear of the matron's home in the 2500 block Dennison St.

In her testimony before the court she said she arrived home around 7 p.m. and was parking in the customary location in the alley when the youths approached her.

They forced her at gunpoint to get out and go a short distance away for the double assault, she stated.

Following the attack she said she was ordered to get back into the rear seat of the car.

Later they let her out in the 3200 block Vickers Rd., she revealed.

Their threats were, "Don't scream, or we'll kill you."

Before they took her money and car keys from her purse, they told Green they would check to see if the car was stolen and if it was listed, they would pick him up at his home later.

Records show Green said he debated whether to drive home and tell his father what had happened or "skip town."

After the ascent in the car, they drove around the area, went by a girl friend's home on Gwynn Falls Parkway, stayed there a while and then proceeded to cruise other areas of the city.

Green was arrested by police officers at 1:30 a.m. Jan. 6, while Sheard was apprehended Jan. 9 at his home at 11:40 p.m.

However, police officers on a routine check of vehicles had previously spotted the two in the red car the evening of the occurrence.

They allowed Sheard to go but told Green they would check to see if the car was stolen and if it was listed, they would pick him up at his home later.

Records show Green said he debated whether to drive home and tell his father what had happened or "skip town."

Md. State to hear Brooklyn pastor Sunday

PRINCESS ANNE — The Rev. George Lawrence, pastor of Antioch Baptist Church in Brooklyn, N.Y., will be the opening Convocation speaker at Maryland State College here, 6 p.m. Sunday in the college's Kiah Hall.

The Rev. Mr. Lawrence is also Eastern Regional director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) and has just been re-elected as director of public relations and communications for the 500,000-member Progressive National Baptist Convention.

He served as secretary of the convention's Resolutions Committee which drafted the historic document protesting the war in Vietnam, adopted unanimously by more than 3,500 delegates to the Progressive National Baptist Convention Annual Session in Cincinnati last Friday, thus putting the denomination on record as the first major religious body of colored people to take an official stand against the Vietnam war.

The Brooklyn pastor will deal with the issues of war, civil rights, "Black Power," riots and rebellion and other controversial subjects in his sermon at Maryland State College, according to the Rev. W. Yaser Nelson, Maryland State chaplain.

Towson College to hear editor

Sidney Sulkin, senior editor of Changing Times, is scheduled to speak at Towson State College Thursday.

He will deliver the annual fall convocation address before students and faculty members in the campus dell. If it rains, the convocation will be held Friday.

Mr. Sulkin said his subject, "The Folklore of Higher Education," deals with dropouts, teaching values and changing standards of modern education.
