Churchmen Propose Creation Of Bank To Aid Poverty War

To bring $$ to city slums

By LOUIS CASSELS

WASHINGTON — Colored church leaders have offered the government a new plan for escalating the war against poverty in riot-prone black ghettos of American cities.

The proposal backed by the National Committee of Churchmen, representing leaders of 12 denominations, calls for establishment of a national economic development bank.

It would use funds from government, civic, and private sources to make loan capital available at below-market interest rates to establish new business enterprises that would provide employment for jobless adults and youths in the black ghettos.

The proposed bank also would help to make investment capital available for housing projects, schools and colleges and other projects designed to ameliorate the ghetto's economic plight.

The church group emphasized that the bank should be "under professional colored operation."

THE AMERICAN Jewish Congress says Jews will continue to play an active part in "The great American struggle for racial justice." Congress says Jews will continue to support the Jewish community about the anti-semitic overtones of some of last summer's urban riots, in which Jewish merchants were prime targets for looters and fire-bombers.

The statement, which is being distributed nationally in pamphlet form, assures Jews that SNCC leaders and other "black power extremists" constitute "A miniscule and discredited voice within the total community."

"Spokesmen for the colored community do not share the fanatic hatred of Israel and hysterical partnership of the Arab cause which characterize the outpourings of the black nationalists," The pamphlet says.

"Black racists will not be able to . . . separate the Jewish community from its brothers in the great American struggle for racial justice."

Rights body asks violent anti-Indian city seal changed

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (UPI) — The official city seal of Battle Creek, a 75-year-old symbol that features a white man about to smash an Indian with his rifle butt, was under attack Friday as a "racist."

Robert G. Newby, a regional director for the Michigan Civil Rights Commission, demanded that the seal be changed. In a letter to the Battle Creek City Commission, Newby said the seal is "racist and violent" because it shows "a white man in the process of hitting an unarmed Indian with a rifle but."

Mayor Preston Kool said the seal, meant to depict an historical incident, was "absolutely not" racist. He said Newby's request would be turned over to a committee.

Key DOD official urged to end all discrimination

WASHINGTON — A delegation of publishers and editors representing the National Newspaper Publishers Association from 15 states concluded two days of interviews and panel discussions with key officials of the Department of Defense here Friday.

The newspaper delegation was in Washington in an effort to strengthen communication between the Federal Government, particularly the Department of Defense and the colored press.

The two-day conferences were highlighted by a 60-minute off-the-record discussion with Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and a visit by helicopter to Aberdeen Proving Grounds in nearby Maryland, where they witnessed a demonstration of firepower and mobility.

* * *

THE DISCUSSIONS centered primarily on the participation of colored personnel in the Armed Forces, both in the United States and abroad; lack of promotions among senior colored officers and the difficulty of obtaining off-base housing by colored personnel.

Military leaders explained in detail the policies involving each of the various subjects, presented statistical information on promotions and personnel participation and outlined the current campaigns to eliminate discrimination in off-base rental housing.

The publishers emphasized that instances of discrimination in these areas were destroying the morale of colored personnel in the military forces and decreasing the desire of many to voluntarily enter the services. Department of Defense officials agreed that they had received numerous complaints on these subjects, but stressed that recent directives had been specifically designed to eliminate discrimination in all areas of the military program and that much improvement had been made.

They also agreed to give further study to specific instances of discrimination emphasized by the publishers with a view toward correcting the situations.

A REVIEW of the off-base housing campaign in the Virginia and Maryland areas was presented by Brig. General William E. Ekman, national coordinator for Off-Base Housing for DOD, who left Sunday for California for a "familiarization" visit in that State.

Gen. Ekman will visit military installations in the Los Angeles-Long Beach area and San Diego, returning to Washington on Sept. 30. He plans conferences with senior military commanders, state officials and realtors, but will not make an inspection tour.

FIGURES RELEASED by the DOD disclosed that, as of Dec. 31, last, 44,500 colored personnel including over 1,000 officers, were serving in Vietnam. They represented 10.6 percent of the total forces assigned to Vietnam.

The Army had 12.6 percent colored personnel; Navy, 5.4; Marine Corps, 8.0 and the Air Force, 10.3 percent.

As of that date, 16 percent of the fatalities suffered by hostile action in Vietnam or 1,060 out of 6,644 were colored. Again the Army had the highest percentage with 832 or 20 percent; the Marines, 223, or 11 percent; the Air Force, 4 or 1.5, and the Navy only one out of 199 of 0.5 percent.

* * *

EQUAL EMPLOYMENT opportunities in the Department of Defense, the need to include colored contractors in the $47 billion contract outlay by the DOD, and action programs to include more colored civilian personnel in DOD were discussed.

In addition, the urgency of strengthening the programs to assist colored veterans separated from the services in making the transition from military to civilian life was emphasized, and DOD was urged to include more prominent colored entertainers in visits to Vietnam and other overseas installations.

Clowes, Proving Ground commanding officer and Colonel Walter J. Davies, deputy commander of Edgewood Arsenal.

During a luncheon, held at the U.S. Army Ordnance Center and School, the newsmen dined with military personnel from their home states.

THE 90-MINUTE demonstration which followed included items developed by the U.S. Army Limited War Laboratory and materiel from Edgewood Arsenal. Vehicles, small arms, including the M16A1 rifle, helicopter armament, heavy weapons and chemical warfare items were included in the demonstrations.

The newspapermen were guests at two receptions in Washington, a luncheon at DOD at which Assistant Secretary of Manpower Alfred Fitt was the speaker and at a dinner reception at Fort McNair.

Among publishers and editors attending were:

John H. Murphy III, president, National Newspaper Publishers Association, papers; Howard H. Murphy and Art Carter, also AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers;

Tan road board member sought

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — A Norfolk attorneyhaswritten orfolk attorney has written a letter to Gov. Mills E. Godwin Jr. asking the governor to appoint a colored man to a vacancy on the state highway commission.

The vacancy arose when Godwin fired Commissioner Richard HHolland.

In the letter, Atty. Joseph A. Jordon said one third of Virginia's citizens were colored and "it is clearly motivoer and fitting that a black citizen be named as state commissioner" from the Suffolk District. Jordon said he did not have anyone specifically in mind for the vacancy.

Jordon commended the governor for "protecting and preserving the integrity of the state highway commission," by dismissing Holland.

Conflict of interest charges arose early in the year, with Holland the central figure in the charges. He was cleared of any charges following an investigation, but Godwin requested his resignation this month.

When he received no reply to his request, the governor fired Holland.

Education commissioner calls for dramatic new school ideas

WASHINGTON (UPI- — U. S. Education Commissioner Harold Howe II today urged the nation's cities to experiment with dramatic new ideas like letting teen-agers attend several public high schools a day to provide "instant desegregation."

Howe said city schools need much more money but warned that more funds without bold, new ideas might be dissipated without meaningful accomplishments.

In a speech prepared for the urban schools conference, Howe also urged innovations such as renting space in ghetto schools to groceries and beauty shops to provide new services for the community and part-time jobs for needy students.

"We desperately need new ideas if we are to solve the financial as well as social and cultural problems of the cities," he said.

* * *

HOWE conceded that the nation's cities thus far haven't had the funds to run a "topflight school system," but said at the same time cities "deal with an array of challenges and situations that are without precedent in American society."

"There is a very real danger that even if we had twice as much money available to us, these additional funds might make relatively little difference," Howe said. "They might be dissipated in doing more of the same."

He said an "open enrollment" system that would let students attend several high schools each day could provide "instant desegregation" while strengthening the curriculum and eliminating duplication.

Howe also spoke out in favor of allowing part-time school attendance by some students.

"It seems to me a strange affair to require every boy and girl to be a full-time, matriculating students without regard to individual needs, interests and problems — and to offer part-time programs to youngsters only when they have encountered social disasters as pregnancy or jail," he said.

Howe urged the cities to take a look around to see what is being tried in other areas that could possibly be adapted for use in their own school systems.

* * *

"I WOULD remind you that what might be a rousing success in San Francisco may not work at all in Detroit; that what flops miserably in Atlanta may be the answer for Rochester," Howe said.

He said the new approaches and techniques are needed to help the nation's cities "deal with an array of challenges and situations that are without precedent in American society."

Insurers take $7.7 million mortgages

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U. S. insurance industry has begun to put into effect its $1 billion pledge to help build better housing in city slums, according to the White House.

Presidential Aide Joseph Califano said Thursday that industry has agreed to purchase for $7.7 million the mortgages of eight housing projects, containing 895 apartments, at Pittsburgh; Pasco, Wash.; Albuquerque; Jacksonville and Lake City Fla.; Sumter, S.C., and Cleveland.

The industry also is reviewing more than 30 other projects, valued at over $30 million, in 30 other cities. The purchase of the mortgages from the Federal National Mortgage Association will free FNMA funds for still more projects, Califano explained.

Businessmen asked for public realism

WASHINGTON — A top Federal official Thursday asked a group of leading manufacturers to discard outmoded myths and to look at public issues with the same cold realism they apply to business ventures.

H. Ralph Taylor, Assistant Secretary of the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, told a meeting of the Producers Council, Inc. in Houston, Texas that America stands at a crisis crossroads and needs the private sector's realistic analysis of its problems and talent and imagination to find solutions.

The first road will lead to a society of two Americas, one affluent, the other submerged in poverty; the second road, he said, will lead to "a society in which the American dream is real and meaningful to all people."

Citing as an example the myths that surround the issue of fair housing, Taylor told businessmen that they are strengthening the partnership—the role of government is to provide a market; the role of private industry is to provide the initative, the tools, and the technical knowledge to do the job."

Pointing out that the scope of private enterprise envolvement is unlimited, he said that the new model cities and "turnkey" private construction-private management programs are an invitation to industry to do as much of the job as it can.

A crucial role for private initative, Taylor continued, is in the area of research and development—the development of new products, systems and approaches to help reduce costs. But this development of private enterprise envolvement and the entrance of new producers into the building field, Taylor added, "will make many conventional techniques obsolete in a short time and leave no room whatever for 'business-as-usual'."
