DISPUTES POITIER

Finest of actors, Marshall, says race can't be escaped

By WALTER BURRELL

HOLLYWOOD — Of all the colored actors in the U.S., there is one who, in this writer's humble opinion, stands so far above the others he defies comparison.

He doesn't enjoy the widespread publicity and patronage of a Sidney Poitier and he isn't as good looking as a Harry Belafonte, but he's an actor's actor and the black man's actor; an actor for all seasons.

HIS NAME is William Marshall.

Perhaps you know him from one of his countless portrayals of "Othello," for which he's gained worldwide acclaim (the London Sunday Times says he's "the best Othello of our time").

"BY THE WAY," the mother says to her, "the nice young preacher, Bro. Taylor, was by today and said he saw you and Billie Joe up on the bridge the day before he jumped. He said you all threw something in the water."

'Ode to Billie Joe' puts needle to curious

By DAVE SLOAN

Many devotees of popular music are talking about the "Ode to Billie Joe," currently among top sellers on discs and in juke boxes.

Judging from all we can see on television, Billie Joe's creator and singer, newcomer Barbara Gentry, is in great demand for personal appearances.

This slim, (twentyish, blond Mississippian, when listened to and not seen, conjures images of a svelte, long-legged, brown-skinned soul sister, who not long ago took the bus from down home — a reassuring tribute to the
