Candidates' war views sought

An invitation has been offered to the two mayoralty candidates to present their views on Vietnam before an interested group of citizens in a luncheon meeting Oct. 18.

An ad hoc group of citizens issued the invitation to Thomas D'Alesandro III and Arthur W. Sherwood, candidates for mayor, to speak on "How the war in Vietnam affects our city, its people and its environment."

An announcement of the affair, set for 12:15 p.m. at the Sheraton-Belvedere Hotel, noted that "neither candidate has yet presented his analysis to the public."

Each man has been invited to speak for 15 minutes and to submit to a 20-minute question and answer period.

Places for the forum have been reserved by over 125 people, a mixed group of businessmen, doctors, lawyers, clergymen, trade unionists and housewives, according to the announcement.

BJC SPEAKER—The Rev. Robert T. Newbold, pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church, and Dr. Harry A. Bard, president of Baltimore Junior College, look over 19th convocation program. The Rev. Mr. Newbold addressed the Tuesday convocation, emphasizing the need for teachers and students to have a mutual respect for each other in the learning process.

Mrs. Murphy may replace Leone in the 6th District

Attorneys for Mrs. Madeline W. Murphy, 2217 Round Rd., Cherry Hill community leader, have found Maryland law, Code Article 30, Section 4-A-1 demands that all candidates for public office must reside in the district in which they run for office.

Therefore, according to a petition filed before Superior Court Friday, Oct. 13, Mrs. Murphy should replace Dominic Leone on the ballot for a 6th District City Council seat when the November General Elections come.

Mr. Leone resides at 620 E. Fort St. in the First District. Mrs. Murphy points out and was erroneously listed by the Supervisors of Elections as eligible for candidacy in the 6th District in the Primary.

Through her attorneys, Archie D. Williams and William H. Murphy, Mrs. Murphy also states that Mr. Leone was erroneously certified by the Board.

The Primary results show top candidates were Myers, 6,947; Leone, 6,605; Hines, 6,410 and Murphy 3,958.

Therefore, her attorneys note, if Mr. Leone were properly declared by the court to be ineligible and taken from the list, Mrs. Murphy would come up to third place.

And, also according to law, being a resident of the 6th District, she would be eligible to become certified and run in the November elections.

Judge J. Harold Grady who heard the case Oct. 6 has set the re-hearing for Wednesday, Oct. 18 in Superior Court.

Agency heads organization

Heads of all state government agencies met Monday in Room 1208 of the Federal Office Building at 1:30 p.m. to organize the Federal Executive Association and vote for officers.

Capt. Charles F. Scharenstein Jr., commanding officer of the U.S. Coast Guard Yard and chairman of the steering committee, conducted the meeting.

Mother, 22, must choose 'the bottle or her babies'

A 22-year old mother who a Juvenile Court master found "loves the bottle better than her babies" lost her two children, ages 10 months and three years, when she appeared in court Wednesday.

Master Bernard M. McDermott, who presided at the hearing made the children wards of the Department of Public Welfare.

To the mother he said, "As long as you continue to drink, they can't be returned to you. You'll have to choose between the bottle and the babies."

A welfare worker said probably two of the children's three grandmothers present in court will be designated to care for them rather than place the pretty toddlers in foster homes.

The mother will receive DPW aid and counseling so that some day she can maintain a satisfactory home and have the children with her.

• • •

THE BRIEF hearing before Master McDermott was a tearful one with the mother and the three grandmothers all weeping at one time or another.

The young woman had experienced her share of trouble, she disclosed, with a legal husband separated from her and a victim of diabetes.

The father of the 10-month-old child had been slain in a gun battle.

• • •

MASTER McDERMOT warned the anxious grandmothers against wanting to keep the two little girls as their own and said, "Children are not like puppies or kittens to be given away at will to just anyone.

"Children have to have fixed custody and those who act as agents for the Welfare Department must meet certain standards."

The three grandmothers include:

Mrs. Luesther Lee, unit block Katherine St., mother of the deceased father of the 10-month-old child, who has been keeping the toddler since July.

Mrs. Mildred Street, 800 block Bentalou St., mother of the unfortunate young woman, who also wants the 10-month-old girl. She held the child tenderly in her arms during the trial.

Mrs. Irene Dent, mother of the legal husband, who said she has had the 3-year-old child in her home for some time time and would like for her to remain there.

CHARLES E. GWYNN SR., [illegible]tan Ave., was recently honored with a citation from Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin for 20 years as conductor of the Baltimore Park Band. He is shown above with Mrs. Gwynn. Earlier, Mr. Gwynn was presented a plaque by Miss Stephanie Sodaro, music and administrator, Bureau of Music, which acknowledged his 26 years with the Park Band, six years as a player prior to becoming conductor.

14 college libraries found below standards

To improve the quality of education in Maryland, the Maryland Advisory Council for Higher Education is studying the quality of libraries in the state's public and private colleges and seeking ways to improve them.

A special survey made for the council by Nelson Associates, Inc. showed 14 to be below par.

Four-year state - supported colleges lacking the kind and size library needed to support their courses of study are Bowie, Coppin, Frostburg, Maryland State, Morgan, Salisbury and Towson, according to the survey.

Two of the junior colleges, Baltimore and Catonville, measured up, but Allegany, Harford, Montgomery and St. Mary's were found lagging.

The survey said.

In studying the University of Maryland, the library of the Baltimore campus was found to be below par, the study shows.

Of private schools covered, Goucher and Hood were found to meet or exceed needs, while Loyola and University of Baltimore are lagging.

Standards used as a basis of judgment are those of the American Library Association and specify that a four-year college with 600 students should have 50,000 volumes plus 10,000 more for each additional 200 students and that a junior college should have 20,000 volumes for 1,000 students plus 5,000 more for each added 500 full-time students.

WILT CHAMBERLAIN AND PROPAGANDISTS

...By SAM LACY

I have great admiration for Wilt Chamberlain, despite what many of my colleagues in the daily press try to make him out to be . . . He is a man who can produce far better than any other man in his chosen profession . . . he has a sound business mind, one that has made him thoroughly independent and he conducts his dealings with his basketball employers in a dignified manner without use of unionized force or the proverbial soap-box . . . Like you, I do not know the exact figure of his 1967-68 salary with the Philadelphia 76ers . . . Unlike some, however, I do not believe that the $250,000 estimate is accurate, or even nearly accurate . . . Moreover, I suspect it was not meant to be.

There is this tendency among today's writers to employ a propaganda technique that constantly chips away at the image of a popular — or great — colored athlete . . . It would serve the purpose of this type of newsman to make Chamberlain's (and Oscar Robertson's) salary demands appear unreasonable . . . By so doing, the writer succeeds in painting a picture of an arrogant so-and-so, who should be despised by sportsmen, booed by fans and envied by fellow players, particularly those on his own team . . . I am firmly convinced that Wilt's salary estimate was inflated with this hope in mind . . . Were I to hazard a guess as to a more sensible approximation. I'd say the contract he signed last week is closer to $175,000.

No Mays or Unitas

And when one considers that which Chamberlain knows to be a fact, the money —whatever it amounts to —is no more than he is worth . . . Who else in the entire world of professional sports, is a bigger gate attraction? . . . Willie Mays? Johnny Unitas? Buckpasser? You'd have to be kidding.

There are five men on a basketball team . . . 12 men on the full squad of a National Basketball Association Club . . . In a sport in which so few participate in a given game, Wilt's appeal to the crowd becomes a great deal more than that of any of the others who perform in more densely populated fields, on much larger playing surfaces and before bigger audiences . . . Is there anyone who could believe that Mays or Frank Robinson, Unitas or Gale Sayers, Buckpasser or the fine racehorse Damascus, represents the reason for 20 percent of a given crowd? . . . It is not difficult to reason that Chamberlain alone pulls one-fifth of every gate that watches the world champion 76ers in action during the winter cage season.

What does he know?

Two more things come to mind as this discussion of Chamberlain is concluded . . . The first has to do with the reaction of Philadelphia players to the report that Wilt had agreed to terms estimated at $250,000 . . . The other involves the observation by one of the writers who apparently aspires to do a little brainwashing in regard to Robertson.

Upon reading the report on Chamberlain, Bill Melchioni, one of the youngest of the 76ers, was quoted as remarking: "Why, some people in Mississippi work 250 years for that kind of money" . . . Now, doesn't that make your heart bleed? . . . It does, really . . . but one wonders how Melchioni, with his complexion, can find the audacity to try to inform Chamberlain about stuff like that.

• • •

IN THE case of Robertson, the background of the release concerning the Royals' capitulation, included the "revelation" that the Cincinnati club would gladly trade Oscar if it "can swing the right deal."

This projects the inevitable question: What would the Royals consider the "right deal" . . . another ball club?

'Days' in Dixie

At the height of the recent World Series in Boston, it was announced that Greenville, Miss., the hometown of George Scott, will honor him with a "George Scott Day" shortly after his arrival following the historic playoff with the St. Louis Cardinals . . . Town officials said no stone would be left unturned to demonstrate the city's appreciation of the contribution made by the Red Sox first baseman to the image of Greenville.

Immediately the word was passed through the press box. A to Z recalled a similar "day" that was thrown by another Deep South hamlet for another outstanding colored athlete . . . Upon her return from the 1960 Olympic Games, Wilma Rudolph was the recipient of a gala salute by Clarksville, Tenn. . . . Even the Governor joined the Clarksville Mayor and City Council in paying tribute to the winner of three gold medals for the United States, the "Woman of the Year" in the eyes of Mademoiselle Magazine, Time Magazine's and the New York Times' "athlete of the year," and winner of the Christopher Columbus Award in Genoa, Italy.

The pretty track star was cheered to the echo along a 6-mile route through the streets of her birthplace and the key to the city was draped around her shapely shoulders . . . This all took place on a Thursday . . . The following Saturday when she and some friends sought to eat at a downtown restaurant, Wilma was turned away by a pistol-waving doorman.

The scene was the old Black Sox Baseball Park in Westport, on the outskirts of Baltimore . . . It was this side of the middle twenties, and Morgan College was playing Lincoln University in their annual football rivalry . . . The Morgan quarterback faded back and threw a long pass to one of his ends streaking along the sideline.

The end hauled it in, tucked the ball under his arm and was hell-bent for the goal line, with no Lincoln player even so much as threatening to prevent him from reaching his destination . . . Suddenly, an orange jersey leaped off the Lion bench, ran onto the field, hit the Bear ball-carrier from the blind side and knocked him "can over tincup" as the saving goes.

• • •

THE PRINCIPALS in that little drama were Pinky Clark, one of Morgan's all-time quarterbacks; Julie Martin, an everlasting legend in Lincoln athletics and brother of the late Harold Martin, whose memory lingers in all phases of CIAA athletic competition . . . The end who snared the pass and was enroute to the only touchdown Morgan was to get that day in a 9-7 loss, was Talmadge (Marse) Hill, who later was to team with Eddie Hurt as one of the most famous institutions in the annals of collegiate football.

Forty years and a coaching career later, Hill is the guiding genius behind the upcoming Centennial Homecoming celebration at Morgan . . . He is in charge of staging the football game between Morgan and A and T College at Baltimore's Memorial Stadium on Oct. 28 . . . It is fitting that Marse should be the big influence in this promotion, since it was due to his untiring efforts that the CIAA ally developed into one of the basketball tournament graduates most successful ventures in winter sports activities among predominantly-Negro colleges . . . A to Z wishes him and his 100-year-old alma mater well on the occasion.

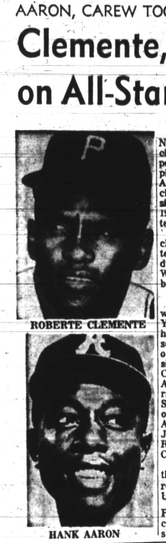
AARON, CAREW TOO:

Clemente, Cepeda on All-Star squad



ROBERTE CLEMENTE

HANK AARON

NEW YORK — Four-time National League batting champion Roberto Clemente, potential NL most valuable player Orlando Cepeda and American League triple champion Carl Yastrzemski shared equal billing on the 1967 major league All-Star team.

Each was an unanimous choice in the United Press International balloting conducted shortly before the World Series began on October 4.

• • •

NAMED TO the team along with Clemente, Cepeda and Yaz were catcher Bill Freehan of the Detroit Tigers, second baseman Rod Carew of the Minnesota Twins, shortstop Jim Fregosi of the California Angels and Gene Alley of the Pittsburgh Pirates, third baseman Ron Santo of the Chicago Cubs, outfielder Hank Aaron of the Atlanta Braves and pitchers Jim Lonborg of the Boston Red Sx and Joe Horlen of the Chicago White Sox.

Fregosi and Alley shared the shortstop spot when each received 11 votes from the UPI board of 24 experts. Rico Petrocelli of the Red Sox received the other two votes for shortstop.

Cardinals' Bob Gibson man-on-go

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — Bob Gibson says he needs some rest. But it can come later.

The St. Louis Cardinal's pitching star has an itinerary that will leave him little free time, at least for the coming week.

• • •

GIBSON, winner of three 1967 World Series games against Boston, appeared on the Ed Sullivan television show Sunday night and at a Monday noon luncheon, where he was honored as the most valuable player in the World Series.

Monday night, he was scheduled for the Johnny Carson television show.

Tuesday was "Bob Gibson Day" here. He was feted at a luncheon and served as honorary governor of Nebraska for the day by proclamation of Gov. Norbert Tiemann, a onetime baseball player himself.

Oscar inks 300G pact

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Oscar Robertson last weekend ended his holdout against the Cincinnati Royals by signing a three-year contract that will pay him an estimated total in excess of $300,000.

The signing climaxed a series of negotiations between Ambrose Lindhorst, Royals board chairman, and J. W. (Jake) Brown, Robertson's attorney.

• • •

OSCAR reportedly had asked for $150,000 this season, some $40,000 more than the Royals had offered.

Robertson, 28, was the second leading scorer in the NBA last season with a 30.6 average per game. He also was second in the league in assists with a 10.7 average.

• • •

WITHOUT Oscar in their pre-season exhibition games, the Royals struggled to only four victories in 11 outings.

It was the third straight year in which Robertson had been a holdout, but this one lasted longer than the others. It also gave rise to reports that the Royals might trade him, if they could get the right deal.

Elder tied for 14th in a qualifying field of 30, with a 586 total for the 144 holes. His card showed steadiness throughout ranging between 70 and 74 after a shaky 76 for the opening round 18 holes.

St. Louis Mayor ignored by fans demanding Brock

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—The return of the heroes was wildly celebrated Thursday night by more than 15,000 cheering St. Louis baseball fans when the triumphant Cardinals stepped off a chartered plane from Boston.

A broadly smiling Red Schoendienst, Cardinals manager, led his world champions off the plane. He waved to the cheering throng and said:

• • •

"IF THERE are any lobsters left in Boston, Lou Brock will go back and get them. He's stolen everything else in the town."

The crowd responded with a thunderous ovation for Brock, the fleet Cardinal who set a new world Series record by stealing seven bases off Boston Red Sox pitchers.

"If you think this was good . . . The elated Schoendienst said, "wait until next year. We'll have an even better team."

• • •

FIRST TO greet the players as they stepped off the airliner was Mayor Alfonso J. Cervantes, who obviously had prepared more to say than the crowd allowed.

"Let give three cheers for the Cardinals," He started off. The milling thousands gave the requested three cheers. If the Mayor had planned to say more, it would have been drowned out in the carnival atmosphere.

• • •

"WE WANT Brock," we want Brock," the crowd chanted.

A SMILING Brock and his wife emerged from the plane. He waved and shouted, "How did you get so many people out there?"

Brock told whoever was in hearing distance that although the Series went the full route of seven games, "We never had any doubt we'd win the decisive game."

• • •

THE FANS who were on hand to greet the Cardinals were the lucky ones. Highways leading to the airport were clogged and two minor accidents made the situation worse. Several thousand arrived after the conquering heroes had left.

• • •

THE CARDINALS then went to a celebration party at general manager Stan Musial's restaurant and the fans followed—15 miles.

Outside "Musial and Bigger's" Oakland Avenue was closed off to traddic, packed with hundreds of cheering fans who gave each athlete a resounding cheer as he arrived at the restaurant.

Bob Gibson, the pitcher who strong-armed the Red Sox into three defeats, got particularly big hurrah.

FOOTBALL ROUNDUP:

Johnson paces undefeated Bears; HU loses 2nd in row

RICHMOND, Va., — Quarterback Daryl Johnson rallied the unbeaten Morgan State College Bears from behind twice here Saturday, to lead the way in a 47-16 victory over Virginia Union.

The win, the 21st in succession and the third of the 1967 campaign, was marked by the sparkling performance of the Golden Bears' senior quarterback who was returning to be a thorn in the side of his hometown school.

Johnson, a graduate of Richmond's Maggie Walker High School, pitched for two touchdowns and ran for two himself as he steered Morgan from early deficits of 10-6 and 16-13. He also accounted for three extra points, thus finishing off the afternoon with a hand in the scoring of 27 of his team's 47 tallies.

• • •

THE GAME'S scoring began with an electrifying runback of a punt by Ed Hayes. The elusive Bear safety hailed in a Union kick on his 42-yard line and raced 58 yards to the end zone.

The Panthers succeeded in getting on the scoreboard a few moments later when, backed up against their own goal line, the Bears were compelled to kick out. The pass from center overshot Isaac Jackson, however, and the Morgan kicker had to content himself with covering it in the end zone for a Union safety.

• • •

THE PANTHERS then made it 8-6, then 10-6, when quarterback Willie Spence hit end Irvin Mallory with a 24-yard TD strike, then passed to Brent Hawkins for the 2-point conversion.

Johnson put the visitors in the lead once more with a 24-yard pass to end Ray Chester, a Douglass High product. But Union regained the lead with equal suddenness, when fullback John Newman capped a drive with a 1-yard plunge through the line.

• • •

DARYL TOOK matters into his own hands after this, essaying to do his own running on the end of sustained downfield marches. He went in from one yard out on the first and from two yards away on the second.

Thereafter, he passed to Alvin Mitchell for 35 yards, eight yards to Gerald Boyd to put the game completely out of reach.

• • •

IN THE meantime, Howard University, loser to Delaware State, 16-0, last week, was having her troubles with West Virginia State in Washington.

The Bisons dissipated fine performances by freshman quarterback Norm Brown and John Mercer in when dropping a 32-26 decision to the Yellowjackets.

• • •

HOWARD FELL off the pace early, finding herself trailing, 12-0, before the contest was nine minutes old. The Jackets raced to the fore on touchdowns by Johnny Dawson and Wes Ellis, both on the end of sustained drives. In each instance, the conversion kick missed, a fact which enabled the Bisons to take the lead, 13-12, in the second period.

A 39-yard run by Herb Thompson and a 9-yard TD pass from Curt Simmons to Mercer made the difference. Howard opened the gap to 20-12 as Brown replaced Simmons and tossed to Mercer when play resumed following the intermission. Later, he was to pass again to Mercer, this time from 48 yards out, for a touchdown.

BUT WEST Virginia put together tallies by Steve Fox of six yards, another of six yards, and a 2-yard plunge by Jim Price to get in front.

A Bison bid to overtake the advantage misfired when an official ruling killed what appeared to be a 46-yard run for the tying marker by Thompson. The whistle blew on a ruling that he had stepped out of bounds at the 13-yard line.

Maryland nips A&T 25-14 on long runs

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Maryland State piled up 322 yards rushing and scored twice in each half to down fired-up A and T State University, 25-14, before 10,000 Aggie homecoming fans here Saturday afternoon.

The Hawks won the duel of powerful offenses on the strength of a 93-yard run by freshman quarterback Willie Belton and a 63-yard touchdown screen pass from senior quarterback Jim Duncan to fullback Roy Kirksey.

THE UNDERDOG Aggies, who have yet to win a game this season, matched the Hawks for more than three quarters, closing the gap to 19-14 midway the third period on a brilliant 79-yard touchdown run by Willie Pearson.

But Moses Benson's five-yard touchdown run with 13:06 left in the game sewed up the win for Maryland State.

MARYLAND STATE'S first touchdown came on a three-yard run by Duncan with 31 seconds left in the first period. The Hawks had nailed A and T's kicker Warren Frye on the Aggie's 6-yard line to set up the touchdown.

The Hawks stretched their margin to 13-0, with 2:10 remaining in the half, when Belton took a short pitchout from Duncan, circled his own right end and fled 93 yards to paydirt.

A AND T's touchdown, which came with 20 seconds left in the first half, capped a 59-yard drive. The drive was highlighted by a 20-yard pass from Core to Pearson.

Kirksey, a 250-pound sophomore, made his long distance run with 8:32 left in the third quarter, but Pearson streaked 79 yards on a 2-yb reverse to put the Aggies back in the game.

Denson's touchdown run with 13:06 left on the clock, ended the scoring.

'Couldn't care less,' says Frazier handler to WBA

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Yancey (Yank) Durham, adviser-trainer of unbeaten heavyweight contender Joe Frazier, expressed a no-hum attitude Friday when he learned Oscar Bonavena will meet Jimmy Ellis in a heavyweight elimination bout in Louisville, Nov. 11.

Before the bout was announced in Louisville, Durham said he was under the impression Bonavena would be unable to meet Ellis because of an injured back. Under those conditions, he said, he was considering a proposal to enter Frazier in the elimination tournament as a substitute for Bonavena.

• • •

"WE 'COULDN'T care less," Durham said when notified the Bonavena-Ellis match is on. "We don't need them, they need us. They still have to fight us for the championship after the tournament is over."

Durham's position appeared moot because his conditions for entering the tournament were turned down as "too high" by Mike Malitz, promoter for sports action, Inc., which is staging the eliminations tournament.

"If they think our proposal is high," Durham said, "wait until they have to come to terms with us for the title, which they eventually will have to do."
