Voices of Watts in Antioch Review

YELLOW SPRINGS, O — The voices of Watts — angry, poignant, but sometimes humorous and occasionally hopeful —are featured in a section of the fall issue of The Antioch Review, a quarterly edited by Antioch College faculty, which comes off the press this week.

The voices belong to members of the Watts Writers Workshop that Budd Schulberg, author and screenwriter, set up in the Los Angeles ghetto folowing the 1965 riot "to help release some of the creative energy that obviously was burning in the dark ghetto."

Say "Dear John" letters bane of fighting men in Vietnam

By RICHARD V. OLIVER

DA NANG, South Vietnam (UPI) — The young American Marine waits quietly while the names of his buddies are shouted out at mail call. Once again, no letters for him.

He has been married for five months, the past four of which he has spent in Vietnam. He has not received a letter from his wife for more than a month.

Then one day his name is called out and he gets a letter in the handwriting of the girl he has married. It hits him like a kick in the teeth.

"I realize now that we didn't know each other long enough before we got married," the letter says, "I see now that I'm really not in love with you. I've found someone else."

These are the words of a typical "Dear John" letter.

• • •

LT. CLYDE KIMBLE, of Lafayette, La., Navy chaplain of the 1st medical battalion of Marines at Da Nang, says the "Dear John" letter to husbands is the "major problem" facing chaplains in Vietnam.

Kimble said the majority of such cases involves young men who had married girls younger than themselves.

"Many times she's only 16 or 17 years old," Kimble said. "He's 18, 19 or under 20. They've only been married a short while before he comes to Vietnam."

The girl, Kimble continued, is back in the States, sometimes with his parents or her parents, or perhaps in an apartment by herself. She gets lonely — and that's where the trouble starts, according to the chaplain.

"Another man comes into the picture from somewhere," he said. "She starts seeing him and the first thing you know she's got the idea that she's in love with him.

"She will stop writing to her husband for a while, maybe a month or so. Then the 'Dear John' letter will come."

"FOR THE FIGHTING man in Vietnam, such a letter is a tremendous blow, emotionally and psychologically," Kimble said. "Many times it gets on his mind so that he can not do his work.

"It really puts a handicap on him when he's over here trying to do a job, especially if he's out in the field on patrol at a time when he needs to be extremely cautious and alert.

"When he's got these problems on his mind, when he's thinking of these things, of course he places himself and his buddies in jeopardy."

Besides advising the husbands involved, there are several things a chaplain can do, according to Kimble.

"The man always feels that if he could talk to his wife it would straighten things out some, and so I try to make arrangements for him to reach her by telephone from Vietnam back to the States, or in some cases, arrange an emergency leave," says Kimble.

Light House keeping

By LULA MACKAY

It's probably true that an inspection of mother's hands would reveal no visible dirt, while surely the opposite is true of children just in from play or home from school. But the lack of obvious dirt is no guarantee of cleanliness, particularly when it comes to germs.

Thoroughly clean hands during food preparation and mealtime — are assured when all the necessary supplies are on hand in the kitchen. Keep a small bar of mild, antibacterial Dial soap and a nail brush on the ledge of the sink or in a soap-dish underneath, and paper towels nearby. Thorough hand washing then becomes part of the kitchen routine. Add a bottle of lotion to the cache for beauty sake.

To wash-up for kitchen chores, use hot water, wet hands, and lather well to above the wrists. Use the nail brush around nails and between the fingers where germs tend to lodge. Rinse well and dry thoroughly. Paper towels are ideal for drying because any dirt or germs that are wiped onto the towel are thrown away.

Doctors say that 90 percent of germs that enter the body are transferred by the hands. Frequent use of a germ-fighting soap with hexachlorophene keeps skin bacteria from multiplying — important for your family health.

Check Point: It is scarcely news that the small handbag is currently the fashion darling.

But there are scores of us working gals to whom a bag that can hold things is essential.

There's little we can do about the style fads. But if you must wear a large bag, choose one with strap or chain and wear it as a shoulder bag. Have you noticed what a huge bag hanging below the hem of your short skirt does to your fashion image?

• • •

WHAT'S NEW? Well, there is now a cordless carpet sweeper. It also has a dial brush adjustment for sweeping linoleum, tile, patio stone and cement, as well as carpeting. And even if that bending and stooping to plug in and out does do something for your waistline, in a day of chores you can have the calesthenics.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK: Who said that stuffing a bird is just too much bother?

A really good sausage stuffing can be made, in a jiffy. Simply brown a half pound of sausage, stirring to separate meat particles; add one small onion chopped and cook until tender.

Now blend in a can of condensed cream of celery soup. Mix lightly with eight cups dry bread cubes. Makes about six cups stuffing, or enough for a five-to-six-pound bird.

FASHION NOTE: It used to be that shiny metallic silvers and golds were strictly for formal evenings and patent leather was synonymous with warm weather. The rules were simple and everyone abided by them without question. Now fashion has broadened its scope and embraced a whole new thinking about those outmoded rules for dressing. Shine has become an important part of dressing for any time of day or night, whatever the season.

The holiday season will see even bolder versions of glitter. Choose from the Fazzle dazzle of gold, silver, bronze or pewter color stockings.

Now safely entrenched at evening events, the shiny leg extends its fashion influence to the daylight hours. It shows up for daytime in a more subtle manner, leaving its super sparkle to night time. You have to look twice doesn't she have on sparkle stockings? The glitter is calmed down and stockings create the slick, wet look. Shiny patent shoes become dariguer.

Yes, wet look sheers go to town with tailored dresses, suits and coats. Opaque styles look just like the shinky silk stockings of the roaring 20's. Meshy or textured stockings that combine a casual type of knit with metallic yarns are a smashing counterpart to smart sportswear and tailored oxfords.

Community, town reach agreement

LANSING, Mich— A voluntary agreement has been reached between the Ypsilanti Township board, and the colored community of Willow Run settling a complaint filed with the Michigan Civil Rights Commission.

The complaint, filed by Jesse Rutherford of Willow Run, alleged that the Board's closing of Midway Boulevard in order to construct a proposed golf course, further isolated and segregated the colored community from shopping centers, medical facilities, schools and other needed services.

The agreement provides for the construction of alternate routes to replace Midway Boulevard and the improvement of existing roads in the area. Wiard Road, adjacent to golf course on the east, Clark Road on the south and the new alternate road west of the proposed golf course, will be paved and dedicated to the public.
