His M-16 saves crew of helicopter

By MIKE DAVIS
AFRO News Correspondent

CU HI — A U.S. Infantry sergeant took over command and led a helicopter crew and passenger to safety after their aircraft was hit by ground fire and crashed into the middle of a dug-in company size Viet Cong force.

Carrying the only workable weapon, Sgt. Charles Spindler of West Point, Ga., led the other five to cover, firing as he ran.

Spindler and the others had boarded the copter enroute to the 25th Infantry Division's base camp at Cu Chi, South Vietnam.

The craft was flying at 50 feet when enemy fire knocked out its hydraulic system forcing a ditched landing.

THE COPTER CRASHED in a water-flooded rice paddy and rolled over on its side.

"Everyone was pretty shaken up," Spindler said, "but from what I could see there were only minor injuries."

Spindler placed a radio call for help while the door gunner attempted to free the only available machine gun.

The other M 50 machine gun was buried in the mud under the right side of the helicopter.

Spindler said that the other weapons were lost in the crash and that the only weapon he had was his standard M 16 rifle and 15 magazines of ammunition.

"The first thing I thought about," he said, "was let's get the devil out of here."

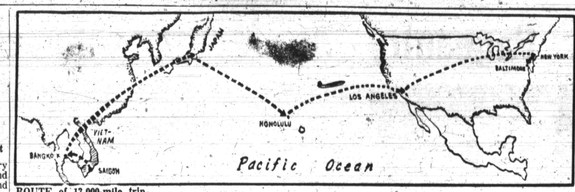
HE TOLD THE other survivors to follow him and they ran 50 yards in the mud to a small rice field dike.

They were being fired at from all directions.

The six men formed a perimeter to give warning in the event they were overrun by the VC.

He continued firing bursts from his M 16 until two Air Force F-100s flew over in response to the emergency radio message.

"They looked beautiful," related Spindler. "They roared in firing cannons and rockets and saved the day."



ROUTE of 13,000-mile trip AFRO's Mike Davis took from Vietnam to Baltimore, where he arrived Monday.

Everything stops when men in the field call for help

By MIKE DAVIS
AFRO Correspondent

DAK TO — No one knew just how to contact A Company of the 173rd Airbourne Brigade.

The radio calls were cryptic and uninformative.

In the Tactital Operations Center, men huddled over the complex assortment of radio gear attempting to learn what had happened out there in the jungle.

From the operation center the order was given to immediately lift the giant gunships into the air.

At the entrance to the base, on a small helipad, gunships revved up their motors and turned on their flight lights.

One by one the ships climbed into the dark night sky. Green lights, red lights and blue and yellow lights flashed through the sky as the choppers became airbourne.

• • •

A COMMAND went out for C-Battery to fix coordinates and to start pounding enemy strong holes in the jungle.

The sporadic burst of automatic weapons fire could be "Tracer bullets from the M-60 machine guns streaked from the helicopters like Christmas tinsel falling from a tree.

The roar of the big guns could be heard sending out their deadly charges high over the trees.

The dark of night was erased by the splattering fragments of exploding artillary shells.

Bright flashes filled the sky as men moved about quickly in the dark carrying out their assignments.

• • •

IN FIVE MINUTES it was all over.

The big guns were silent, and the helicopters were returning to the base.

Calm voices now moved over the radio in the operations center.

No one apparently had been hurt and the medics were taken off of standby.

A small patrol had come under automatic weapons fire and had called in the air strikes to clear an unsuspected enemy position.

The action was over. The helicopter pilots returned to their card game.

The radio operators went back to watch the Wednesday night movie.

Other soldiers resumed their activities, writing letters home, wrapping gifts, and getting their gear cleaned up for the following day.

They had been ready when the call for help had been sounded.

They had responded and done their job effectively.

It was 6 p.m. and many more alerts would come later that night.

Just like before, the gunners, the pilots, the medics, would be ready to respond again.

WHEN THE MEN in the field need help all attention is turned to them.

All other activity stops and the men concentrate on the job at hand.

Letters are left unfinished, card hands are left unplayed, beer stays on the table and gets warm while the job is being done.

Fighting a war is a 24-hour-a day job.

Soldiers in Vietnam are always ready to fight and help those in hard situations.

A card game or a can of beer loses its importance when a man's life is riding in the balance.

Leaders in ASL hold slim leads

NEW YORK — At the halfway mark in American Soccer League First and Premier Divisions, the leaders continue to hold slim leads.

In First Division action, Ukrainian Nationals of Philadelphia have a 6-1-1 mark in eight games for 13 points to top Boston's Tigers with 6-2-0 for 12 points in a like amount of games.

Rochester's Lancers, beaten 3-2 by Washington's Britannica last Sunday (Oct. 22), failed to advance together with Baltimore's Flyers and Newark Sitch, who were also beaten. Britannica, registering its first win in seven outings, tied Newark for the cellar slot.

Meantime, in Premier Division action, New York Inter continues to hold a two-point margin over Newark Portuguese, as both teams were held to 0-0 and 2-2 deadlocks, respectively, by the Astros and Roma.

In Sunday's (Oct. 29) pairings in the First Division, Newark Sitch hosts Ukrainian Nationals at Newark Stadium, N. J.; Rochester's Lancers take on Baltimore's Flyers at Aquinas Stadium, Rochester, and Boston's Tigers tangle with Washington Britannica at Chelsea Memorial Stadium, Boston.

In Premier Division play, New York Inter takes on Roma at Randalls Island Stadium, New York; Hartford S.C. meets the Astros at Dillon Stadium, Hartford, and Newark Portuguese clashes against Hungarian Americans at Ironbound Field, Newark, N. J.

Dorf cites dangers of empty buildings

State Sen. Paul A. Dorf (D-5th), today urged the Mayor and the City Council to institute new procedures in condemnation practices.

Dorf stated that a dangerous situation arises when the city condemns property, buys it, and boards it for a long period of time. He added that the "No Trespassing" sign is an open invitation to all undesirables to set up headquarters in the condemned area.

Dorf further stated that these buildings are breeding places for rats and other verments. Within the past few years, there have been numerous fires in these boarded homes, putting the lives of our firemen and adjacent properties in danger the Senator charged.

Dorf said that he has been contacted by many store owners who complain that their neighborhoods had deteriorated because of the present practice of the city in waiting long periods of time before demolishing condemned properties.

He urged that in the future the City should immediately raze any property condemned and bought by the City.

Gary's Hatcher seeks D.C. help

GARY, Ind. — Federal Inter-Venition in this city's mayoralty contest was asked by Mayor candidate Richard H. Hatcher last week.

In a telegram to Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark officers of Hatcher's campaign effort charged that there had been "massive fradulent registrations" since the closing of registration books.

Hatcher wrested the Democratic nomination from the organization candidate, and now most Democratic precinct captains are campaigning for the Republican candidate, Joseph D. Radigan.

The population of Gary is 55 per cent colored, but estimates are that there are more eligible white voters.

UNITED NATIONS REPORT

Nkrumah framed so London, D.C. could control Ghana

By CHARLES P. HOWARD
UPI Correspondent

UNITED NATIONS — The apologists for the failure, and now, near collapse of the so-called National Liberation Council (NLC) in Ghana out lies about since his over throw. Under the titles "Economic Yoke Slows Democracy in Ghana" and "Nkrumah Debts Still Burden Ghana," one Jack Shideler, staff correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor, picks up the cudgel for the NLC apologists.

Thus the Christian Science Monitor, once rated as a national journal of the highest integrity, now lets itself be used in this nefarious way. When one wonders what ever happened to the former impeccable reputation of the Christian Science Monitor; one only needs to look at how the Monitor is now being used by the "power structure" to find the answer.

If you want to know why the American and British neo-colonialists and their black apologists here in the United States say to the contrary.

IT COST MONEY and a lot of it to do these necessary things, if the life of the Ghanaian masses was to be improved. Nkrumah chose to spend the money on improving life in Ghana, a former British colony for nearly a century, and to prove that the British spent nothing on it except to forward British interests.

Nkrumah spent the money that way — what little there was left that wasn't earmarked for social security pensions, vacations, leaves and travel back to England for the white civil servants who soon were to be out of their plush jobs, the like of which they won't see any time or lack of it, could not enjoy anywhere else but "out to Africa."

Nkrumah preferred spending the money on necessities for Ghanaians in the form of ships and plane lines. He had to create economic ties with outsiders other than the United States, Great Britain and West Germany, his former colonial masters and their allies who were trying to "bat his brains out." And he was doing all these things, irrespective of what the nationalists keep up this savage and constant attack on Nkrumah, the answer is simple. First, they must, they feel, destroy the image of the man they know was leading Africa on a road to the control of her own economy; industrialization, agricultural mechanization, manufacture and other use of her raw materials rather than shipping them off to the European and American manufacturers. And he was advocating political control of the economic forces of the entire Black continent.

To attain these goals Nkrumah had to educate his people, build schools for them, improve their health; he had to build roads on which to move their raw materials from one part of the country to another; make electricity available for the countryside as well as the cities. He did this with the Volta River Project. He had to create new industries so men and women would have work.

He had to build transportation machinery in the form of ships and plane lines. He had to create economic ties with outsiders other than the United States, Great Britain and West Germany, his former colonial masters and their allies who were trying to "bat his brains out." And he was doing all these things, irrespective of what the apologists here in the United States say to the contrary.

Firm violates S.C. state laws

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — South Carolina's chief insurance commissioner said Wednesday an insurance company listing New York Rep. Adam Clayton Powell as an official was doing business illegal in the state.

Charles W. Gambrell told a state insurance laws study committee that he had advised several ministers that the Bahama-based insurance company was offering policies in South Carolina in violation of state law.

He said the ministers had sent him brochures sent out by the company and that the firm was endorsed by Powell and carried his name as an official.

• • •

ACCORDING TO Gambrell, the company sold policies through church clerks, who collected the premiums. If the policyholder died, Gambrell said, the beneficiary received $300 and the church received another $200. He said the insurance was apparently being promoted throughout the state and in other states as well.

Gambrell said the insurance operation is illegal because the company is not licensed to do business in the state and is soliciting on an illegal basis.

The commissioner said the premium payments were being sent to a New York bank.

"If anybody wants to know where Adam Clayton Powell is getting his money, I can tell them," Gambrell said. "I hope people won't fall for this solicitation. They will be throwing their money away."

Sad and sudden was the call
Of one so dearly loved by all.
A bitter grief, a shock severe,
It was to part with one so dear.
We often sit and think of you,

Before you closed your eyes.
For all of us you did your best
Oh, God, grant you eternal rest.

That always leaves a sense behind
For true companionship I know
The pain it was to see you go.
Yes memories soften every thing
The grave its victory — death its sting
Who loved you, sadly miss you
I who held you very dear
And in lonely hours of thinking
Often feel your presence near.
The God has taken you away
You are with us everyday.

All things this world may send
But when I lost my darling mother
I lost my dearest friend.
