Athens, Ga., told the AFRO that she expects the integration issue in Somerset County to be resolved by next September.

One of the colored organization's goals has been the urging of greater use of colored American history materials in schools.

Mrs. Gay said the congress hopes to bring about merger in the next three or four years, "but only if we can become involved."

Looking toward large northern cities and some of the states where the colored parents' voice has been ignored Mrs. Gay observes that the N.C.C.P.T. "might have to become the National Congress of 'Concerned' Parents and Teachers."

SHORTLY AFTER the Supreme Court Decision of 1954, three states — Oklahoma, Missouri and Kansas — quickly left the N.C.C.P.T. fold but lost their power in the larger state groups, according to Mrs. Gay.

At that time other members of the national congress were Delaware, Kentucky, Maryland, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Mrs. Gay, a lone time campaigner for the rights of colored school children, was elected the 12th president of the N.C.C.P.T. for a three-year term last June at the national convention in New Orleans.

"You know, I'm glad I've lived long enough to be able to meet in hotels," she commented. "The early meetings were held in schools, churches, anywhere we could find."

MRS. GAY said she gained her political direction from the first time she rode on a bus with her mother.

She paid the fare and I took the first seat I come to. My mother pulled me by the hard to the back of the bus and said because I was colored I had to sit back there.

"It was then it dawned on me and it's been dawning on me ever since."

ed by Prof. Howard J. Whitehill, a Quaker and teacher of Creative Writing at Johns Hopkins University, who was offered a post at the University of Maryland for the 1966-1967 school year.

He signed a contract, but refused to take the oath which stems from the 1949 Ober Law.

The university refused to hire him.

Earlier, civil rights leader Bayard Rustin, turned down an encagement to speak at the university blasting the oath he would have had to sign before being allowed to appear.

His action at that time created a furor of controversy over the law.

School aid being sought 34 pt. City, state and school officials met Monday morning in the Baltimore office of Sen. Joseph Tydings in an effort to secure substantial technical and financial assistance for the city schools.

Present at the exploratory meeting was Francis Keppel, former U.S., Commissioner of Education and now president of the General Learning Corporation.

According to the School Community Relations Division of the schools, directed by John Hopkins, "special emphasis will be placed on areas of the city with high rates of the city with high rates of school dropouts and employment, inadequate housing and related patterns of socio-economic deprivation."

Assistance found would be focused on programs in these areas.

REPRESENTATIVES were at the meeting from the School Board, city government and the State Department of Education.

Mr. Keppel supervised the initial design and administration of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965.

about the disturbance," the officer testified, "this lady told me that it was none of my business and that colored policemen could not lock up anybody.

"While policemen can lock you up, but colored policemen can't do anything to anybody!" Patrolman Chase quoted Mrs. Lewis as saying.

ALTHOUGH HE ignored the remarks, the quiet-spoken, collegiate-type policeman told the court, "Mrs. Lewis began hitting me in the chest for no apparent reason."

At that point Mrs. Lewis faced the question of truth, according to the easy-going police officer.

"I arrested her," he told the court.

Apparently angered by her miscalculation, Mrs. Lewis became more "belligerant and started kicking, screaming and fighting, necessitating the use of hand cuffs," Patrolman Chase explained.

JUDGE McGUIRE ruled Mrs. Lewis was guilty of resisting arrest and disorderly conduct. He imposed a penalty of $125 fine, a 90-day suspended jail term, and placed her on probation for one year.

Eugene Evans, 28, who also became involved in the incident, was fined $25 and cost for disorderly conduct.

NEW YORK — Thirty-[illegible] leges will be eligible fo[illegible] 000,000 in matching funds under terms of a grant announced this week by the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation and the Phelps-Stokes Fund.

The colleges are members of the Cooperative College Development Program. This program is a project of Phelps-Stokes and is financed in part by Sloan. It was organized in 1965 with 23 member colleges to assist them in their individual fund-raising activities. Its chairman is Dr. Frederick D. Patterson, president of the Phelps-Stokes Fund.

Expansion of the program to 30 colleges and its renewal for two years after January 1, 1968 were announced Wednesday at a news conference at Phelps-Stokes headquarters.

AS AN INCENTIVE to the colleges to increase their fund-raising efforts, Sloan will match contributions from their alumni dollar for dollar and contributions from within each college's state and local life $1 for $2.

Each college will be eligible for a maximum of $300,000 on this basis. $100,000 will be reserved for incentive awards to the four colleges showing outstanding performance in specific categories of fund raising.

The Sloan Foundation has allocated $1,000,000 for the matching grants to the colleges and $100,000 for half the cost of program operations. The colleges provide the other half of expenses.

The million-dollar Sloan grant will be the second offered by members of Congress. The Foundation two years ago offered $1,000,000 to the 30 member colleges on a similar matching basis.

These have qualified for another of this amount, and by the cut-off date of January 1, 1968, it is expected that they will have qualified for the full amount and will have raised some $9,000,000 from other private sources.

The schools participating are Alabama A and M College, Normal, Ala.; Florida A and M University, Tallahassee, Fla.; Fort Valley State College, Fort Valley, Ga.; Jackson State College, Jackson, Miss.; Kentucky State College, Frankfort, Ky.; Mary Holmes Junior College, West Point, Miss.; Morris Brown College, Atlanta, Ga.; Paine College, Augusta, Ga.; Shaw University, Raleigh, N.C.; Tougaloo College, Tougaloo, Miss.; Voorhees College, Denmark, S.C.; Wilberforce University, Wilberforce, Ohio; Wiley College, Marshall, Texas; Xavier University, New Orleans, La.; Bishop College, Dallas, Texas; Clark College, Atlanta; Dillard University, New Orleans, La.; Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va.; Huston-Tillotson College, Austin, Texas; Knoxville College, Knoxville, Tenn.; and Le Moyne College, Memphis, Tenn.

Gotham glimpses diamond family

By ALVIN E. WHITE

NEW YORK — Petrus Ramoboa, former owner of the seventh largest diamond in the world, 601 carats (larger then a golf ball) arrived here last week, accompanied by his wife, Ernestine, and his invalid daughter Maria, 20.

Ramoboa, who sold the diamond to Harry Winston, is said to have received half of the initial price tag of $640,000. With the $302,400 he wanted to obtain the best possible medical treatment for his ailing daughter...

Winston, the purchaser of the huge pale brown stone, invited Romoboa to visit New York. On his arrival here, Romoboa was met by Winston's son, Sen. E. D. Letete, Lesotho delegate to the United Nations and secretary to the Lesotho embassy in Washington, V. M. Molapo and the wife of the Ambassador, Mrs. A. S. Mohale.

RAMOBOA IS A NATIVE of the former British protectorate of Basutoland, which became independent in October, 1966.

The huge stone was discovered by Mrs. Romobea while sifting gravel on a small claim owned by her husband and others. The huge diamond was turned up on May 26, while searching for other diamonds believed to be in the gravel fields of the claim.

The family will be in New York approximately two weeks.

The 43-year-old Ramoba, overwhelmed at his new found wealth, was excited at arriving in New York.

Asked whether he considered himself a "great man," he said yes — for at the time his wife discovered their fortune, his ltal wealth amounted to about four dollars!

Diamond merchant Winston said the huge stone would be cut into approximately twenty smaller stones. He expects to realize over a million dollars from the sales.
