ness.

Standing with the bride was Mrs. Calvin Douglass Jr., wife of the bride's brother who is an art teacher at Vassar College.

The pastor, the Rev. Reginald Daniels, read the vows at the main altar.

FOR HER wedding, the bride, a divorcee, wore a pale blue lace mini frock with long sleeves and softly collared neckline. Her tiny hat was a crown of white lace and her bouquet designed with white orchids, a sprig of English ivy and white satin ribbon streamers.

The groom, a native of Pennsylvania and also divorced, wore a dark summer business suit and a pale blue shirt with a tie of three shades of blue.

The matron of honor, who was hatless, wore a sleeveless, short gray shift and carried a bouquet of pink flowers with pink and white satin bows and streamers.

Major Harris was dressed in a pearl gray business suit.

Mrs. Wilson, mother of the bride, wore a yellow lace street-length dress with a sweetheart neckline and matching beads and bracelet.

Her corsage was a single violet orchid. She was accompanied by her husband, Joseph Wilson, a New Jersey businessman.

DEL. DOUGLASS who is also an attorney, wore a dark suit and sat with the bride's children of her first marriage, Wamia, age 13 and Bryan, age 11.

IN CONTRAST to the 99-degree temperature outside, the main auditorium of the stately old church provided a cool and tranquil setting for the 10-minute rites.

The altar was decorated with white lilies, intertwining tall lighted candles.

The groom and best man arrived at 1:45 p.m. After a brief talk with the Rev. Mr. Daniels in the study, Patrolman Rankin and Major Harris went to the right of the altar to await the bride-to-be.

Policewoman Rawlings arrived at the church accompanied by her attendant, her parents and other relatives. She and her matron of honor entered the altar areas from the study at 2 p.m. There was no music.

The attractive bride who seemed to be half-way between a faint smile and tears, received encouraging glances from her husband who never took his eyes off her.

Among the first to extend congratulations were her children and parents who sat in the first two rows of the church.

AMONG THE 15 persons who witnessed the rites were an interracial group of policemen and Policewoman Carolyn Robinson.

Also present were Mrs. Ivy Harris, wife of Major Harris; Mrs. Mable Holsey, Miss Joyce Weaver, Mrs. Mary Martin, New York, aunt of the bride and James Gilliam, Wilmington, Dela., a cousin of the bride.

The reception that followed at 3502 Edgewood Rd., included relatives and close friends.

Patrolman and Mrs. Rankin left Sunday night by jetliner for a brief honeymoon in Puerto Rico.

the proceedings) that Flowers and his attorney decided the best thing to do was to join in the consent judgment.

"We considered that this was to be a very important case from the outset and are hopeful that it will have the effect of causing real compliance with wage and hour standards by other farmer owners in the Delta area."

The farm worker minimum wage which went into effect in February, 1967 was $1 per hour. In February, 1968, it was raised to $1.15 per hour.

FLOWERS, the millionaire owner of a 16,000-acre farm with parts of it in Tallahatchie, Quitman and Coahoma Counties, really had a good thing going.

As a landowner, Flowers was permitted by federal regulations to project the cost of housing as an item in complying with the new minimum wage standard and in determining the amount of federal subsidy payments his farm would get annually.

The sprawling fields of cotton, the clusters of workers' shacks, the hundreds of colored people laboring in the fields gave the farm an authentic touch of the ante-bellum southland.

FLOWERS boasted that he had "the best cotton crop and the best bean crop in the Delta." The U.S. Department of Labor said he made $1 million a year from his various plantation enterprises.

The Department said he received $210,832 in federal acreage allotments alone in 1967.

All this led the Labor Department and the Federal Housing Authority to send investigators to Flowers' farm to see just how realistic were figures and the values being sent to Washington.

FEDERAL housing authority appraisers sent to the plantation by the Labor Department said the 158 tenant houses were wood frame with corrugated metal roofs.

"All but three of the houses are without inside plumbing or water," the appraisers said. "The water supply of most of the houses is an outdoor hand pump, although some houses have access to a community spigot."

Many of the tenants used newspaper to patch holes in the ceilings and walls.

Flowers said he believes whoever rents the plantation land will keep the tenants.

"I have families in every house and I have never made anybody move," he said.

Most of Flowers' operations are in Quitman County, one of the nation's poorest farm areas, and whose county seat, Marks, was the starting point of the symbolic Mule Train of the Poor People's March on Washington.

THE AFRO was unable to ascertain what portions of the judgment would be awarded to the various workers.

However it was reported that different workers would get varying amounts depending on factors now under study in the Labor Department.

They are expected to get the money soon.

FHA appraisers found the house she occupied had a true rental value of $7 per month.

Hattie Colvin occupied a house on the "Johnson and Poole" place, and was charged $40 per month.

Investigators said a reasonable rental of the house was $6 per month.

Frank Kelly occupied a house on the "Lacy" place and was charged $40 per month.

Reasonable rental of this house was $6 per month, according to investigators.

THERE WAS one big difference between Flowers and some other ante-bellum planters. Flowers didn't think he was big enough to tackle the federal government.

He said Wednesday he was quitting. The decision came after the court took its action.

Flowers paid the fine, he said, "to get it out of court." Then he intends to rent out his 16,000 acres of farmland after the current crop is harvested.

"The Government is causing me to quit, I'm happy that I've got plenty to live on," he said. "I'm settled up with the Government to date. I'm doing this just not to have any more business with the Government."

were passed by the General Assembly in the last session that became law yesterday.

Maryland now adheres to a liberal abortion law that allows such operations in cases where the mother's physical or mental health is in danger. This judgment must be made by medical experts.

Another law allows individuals to give parts of their body for transplants and research after death.

Maryland teachers are allowed to form union and groups to protect their working interest, but they have been enjoined from striking.

AMONG THE 768 laws is one legalizing jurisdiction of the Baltimore Municipal Court over vagabonds, transients, and rogues who are found in the city.

In addition to the laws, several state agencies were allowed to change their names.

The State Department of Public Welfare is now the Department of Social Services. The Commission on Interracial Problems and Relations has become the Human Relations Commission, and the Department of Correction's new name is Department of Correctional Services.

ALSO INCLUDED in laws taking effect yesterday was one governing the registration of your brand new machine gun.

Machine gun buyers are reminded that they must register their purchase with the State Police, rather than with the secretary of state, as was the rule in the past.

Youth conference planned for fall

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. — Temple University will have a Black Youth Leadership Conference for some 200 students in the Philadelphia Public High Schools, Sept. 23, 24, and 25, in Riter Hall, 13th St. and Montgomery Ave.

Adults or students wishing to participate in the Conference may contact Dr. Woodard by mail at: Dr. Samuel Woodard, College of Education, Temple University, Philadelphia, Pa., 19122.

Hall and the alternatives faced by the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Edwards, by implication, claims the has at least 35 colored track and field athletes ready to follow him in his boycott movement.

"We have the numbers and we can pull off the boycott any time we like," said Edwards. "We are in the driver's seat now and we can call the tune. The colored people have had no victories in this country but I think we have one now."

EDWARDS claimed at a news conference, Monday, that "every black (athlete) out there is in the fold. We have taken a vote as to what we are going to do but we aren't revealing it now."

"We can afford to wait and see what happens and make our decision known anytime, today, tomorrow, next week, next month or right in Mexico City," said Edwards. "It's our ball game now."

From all appearances it is, too, as of the moment.

If, as Edwards claims, he has 35 colored athletes ready to boycott, then the U.S. Olympic Committee is in trouble.

THE COMMITTEE has until Sept. 18 to notify the International Olympic Committee of the makeup of the Yanks track and field team. The rule applies to every member nation as well.

Before then, the committee plans to hold a final trials at a high altitude training base near Lake Tahoe (Calif.). From Sept. 9 to Sept. 17, the various athletes, including about 50 colored, will compete from eight to 12 in each event to determine the final 35 who will go to Mexico City.

EDWARDS and his group, which numbers just about the world's best in the 100 and 200 meter dashes, the long jump, triple jump and the hurdles, can do any one of a number of things.

They can decide to go to Tahoe and then call their boycott.

They can go to Lake Tahoe, make the final team and call a boycott after the Sept. 18 deadline.

They can go to Mexico City and then boycott before the games get underway.

They can go to Mexico City, compete but not try to do their best.

They can go to Mexico City, compete and, if they place 1-2-3, refuse to take the victory stand for their medals.

"We can also ask the organizing committee not to play the National Athem if we are successful and substitute the Olympic Anthem," added Edwards.

Angry NAACP board member resigns post

ISLIP, N.Y. (UPI) — Dr. Eugene T. Reed, a member of the board of directors of the NAACP, resigned Sunday in an angry telegram to NAACP head Roy Wilkins.

Reed, who has been identified with the more militant wing of the NAACP, said Wilkins had demonstrated in the national convention which concluded Saturday in Atlantic City that "you are willing in use any and all means to keep the association from being relevant to the many problems of black people."

Reed referred to "Nazi-like atmosphere" and "strong-arm techniques" in his telegram in regard to the Atlantic City Convention.

DURING THE convention a group of "Young Turks" walked out and although Wilkins remained in control it was apparent there was a serious split in the nation's oldest civil rights organization.

Reed complained of the "ruthless method" used in "suppressing legitimate protest" and requested Wilkins to "transmit to the board my immediate resignation from it."

dates filing to enter the September primary was 9 p.m. Monday.

Withdrawal deadline is July 26.

A clearer picture of this and other races shaping in the campaign will then be possible.

Mr. Mitchell is widely considered as an extremely capable and popular young man. He achieved prominence as head of the state's Interracial Commission, and gained higher stature as director of CAA, where his resignation is to become effective Sept. 1.

How he will fare in this his initial bid for elective public office remains to be seen.

CONGRESSMAN FRIEDEL has held the Seventh District seat since its establishment in 1953, and is seeking re-election to a ninth term.

The Seventh District roughly includes in the city the areas west of the Pennsylvania Ave., further north, Green Spring Ave., Reisterstown Rd. and Pennsylvania Ave. further south, and a sector of Carey St. below Franklin to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad still further south.

It includes the 14th, 16th, 19th and 20th Wards, all of which carry a majority of colored residents.

The 7th District, however, extends also into Baltimore County and includes several precincts of two election districts and all the precincts of two others.

They are mainly in the western Beltway and Pikesville areas.

IN THE local picture on the courts side, two prominent attorneys have tossed their hats into the ring in bids for judgeships.

Joseph C. Howard has filed for the Supreme Bench and Archie D. Williams is trying for People's Court.

Mr. Howard, AFRO readers will recall, is the former assistant state's attorney who rocked Court House cackles and city by charging the Police Department, Criminal Courts and the State's Attorney's office maintained a dual standard of justice in rape cases involving colored and white victims.

He revealed this dual system of punishment in crimes of criminal assault, was based on race with colored complainants receiving the heavier penalties.

SPECIAL NOTICE
RULES AND REGULATIONS
Adopted under the Authority of Section 125 (h) (1)
CITY OF BALTIMORE ORDINANCE NO.
Approved June , 1968

DEFINITIONS

a. "Motor Vehicle" means any self-propelled vehicle as defined by the Maryland State Department of Motor Vehicles for use on public highways.
b. "Transaction"—The parking storing, housing, or keeping of a motor vehicle on a parking lot or garage, in the City of Baltimore, for a charge or fee, shall also include vehicles which are impounded and/or held in dead storage for a charge or fee.
c. The total number of days in a particular period of time other than a 24-hour period shall be deemed to be the total number of days that the parking lot or garage is open and available to the customer paying said fee for parking during the particular time period involved.

IMPOSITION OF TAX

1. Each operator shall file a return with the Director of Finance on or before August 25, 1968, and not later than the 25th day of each succeeding calendar month on a form provided by the Department of Finance.
2. The amount of tax collected for the preceding calendar month shall be remitted at the same time, less a collection cost of 3 percent of the gross tax to be remitted.
3. The operator shall retain in his files at his principal place of business or some other convenient location duplicate copies of this return along with records and information in support of all returns. All such supporting information shall be retained by the operator for the same period as is required for Federal tax purposes.
4. Monthly returns may be filed on a consolidated basis for each business entity order each lot as it may be most convenient for the operator. Each return shall contain the name and business address of the operating entity, and the address of each lot operated. The amount of tax collected shall be stated separately as to the collections for monthly, weekly, and daily parkers.
5. Any exemption claimed by virtue of non-taxable status under this ordinance, or Federal vehicles, or by International Agreements between the United States and any foreign government shall be reported. Exemptions claimed must be supported by validated parking tickets or by a form supplied by the Department of Finance in the case of Federal or foreign government vehicles, duly signed by the individual claiming the exemption. The operator shall retain all exemptions honored by him in his files in the same manner and for the same period of time as all other pertinent information.
6. The return shall be signed by the Owner, Officer, Partner, or Authorized Representative of the operating entity as to the correctness and accuracy of the return.
7. Tenants in apartment houses or buildings, who for a separate fee or charge, are entitled to parking privileges, through lease, other agreement, or direct payment, shall be subject to the tax imposed hereunder whether the amount charged for parking is paid separately, stated in the lease, or other agreement as a separate charge, or is capable of being computed by comparison with similar rents of other tenants in the same apartment house or building who do not use the parking facilities therein.

A MESSAGE FROM LOYOLA FEDERAL:

HOW AVAILABLE IS YOUR MONEY?

In these days of financial uncertainty, an important aim of many corporations, business concerns as well as individuals, has been to make a greater portion of their money readily available.

As a private individual or a business representative, don't YOU think it's a good idea to have more money available for unusual and profitable investment opportunities, sudden emergencies, or any number of other purposes? We do. And we practice what we preach. Our degree of liquidity is currently the highest it has been in the past twenty years. We think a similar position might be wise for you, too.

Loyola Federal offers a program for the investment of funds which provides safety, security and profit on regular passbook accounts, as well as the highest legal return on Savings Certificates.

At Loyola Federal, your funds are always readily available, and, of most importance, your dividends are paid to you QUARTERLY. As a matter of fact, we've been paying dividends on a QUARTERLY basis for more than six years.
